Four Lives and Millions of Dollars in Property Lost in Two-Day Storm.

HIGHEST WATER ON RECORD

Hotels, Bathing Pavilions, and Bungalows Battered to Pieces and Floated Away.

DRIFTS BLOCK CITY STREETS

Traffic Stops in Outlying Sections —Ships Held in Port—Vessels Call Help at Sea.

A snow storm that, taken by itself, would have been far less severe than some the city and its environs haveknown in recent years, was aggravated yesterday by a tide so unprecedentedly high as to be epochal in the records of thirty years. In consequence all areas contiguous to green water suffered severe property losses and acute inconvenience, while thousands along the New Jersey coast were cut off when mountains of water flooded up over railroad tracks. Buildings along the seashore were smashed to bits or washed away.

To make things worse, the snow once again last night underwent a sudden change into wet, clinging sleet and anxious scanning of the far horizon by the Weather Bureau, and earnest study of reports from many directions, failed to justify a prediction of any relief today.

Hotels and bathing pavilions were smashed or washed into the sea at Rockaway and Coney Island, bungalows were carried away and the flood tide inundated the cellars of some Winter resorts, putting power plants out of service and depriving guests of heat, light and elevators. All along the New Jersey coast similar conditions were reported, though in many places where seawalls served as protection or buildings were set further back, less damage was done.

No fatalities directly attributable to the storm were reported in New York, but three persons died of exhaustion in the snow in Paterson, N. J., and Mrs. Catherine Dougherty, 60 years old, of West New York, N. J., died of exhaustion after collapsing in a snowdrift while trying to reach her daughter's home in that city.

Police boats and Coast Guard cutters spent an exciting twenty-four hours carrying help to those in distress in the harbor or outside. Two freighters were reported in trouble off the coast, one with a rudder gone and the other with crippled machinery, after losing battles with wind and ice. Twelve men, adrift all night on barges, were rescued in Egg Harbor after drifting through the inlet, a narrow squeeze after it seemed they would be swept away. Sound steamer service was suspended entirely, and five steamships were reported almost fast in drift ice off Execution Light. One Sound steamer was reported ashore, and other vessels postponed their sailings to await more clement weather.

General Along the Coast.

The storm was general along the Atlantic seaboard and some distance inland, though generally in the South the warm temperature, notable even here, turned the snow into deluges of rain. The weather prediction last night was:

The snowfall for the past two days had reached eight inches at midnight.

Locally there was a very real and irritating traffic snarl, but the storm did not menace the city with isolation. Through trains over the principal railroads were operating steadily, though most of them were from one to four hours late. With an initial victory over snowdrifts there was no immediate prospects of things getting much worse. Wire communication last night was being maintained successfully with the whole country and neither of the principal telegraph companies reported trouble.

New York telephone service was in a far worse plight. There were times yesterday when subscribers found their patience exhausted long before they could get answers from their central stations. The company blamed the sluggish service on the extra traffic due to unusually large numbers of persons remaining at home and accepting its advice of other days to "do it by telephone" and to the absence of some two thousand operators because of the influenza.

Subway and elevated traffic, while it dragged at times, was kept going fairly steadily in all boroughs except in some outlying parts of Brooklyn and Queens, where naked third rails, surviving from old construction, were snow covered. There was some early morning trouble in the Bronx, including one short-circuit fire, quickly extinguished, but such delays as there were in rapid transit were due more to the shunting of the load from crippled surface lines than to any faults with the overhead and underground systems themselves.

Surface railways made not nearly so good a showing. The fine snow clogged the third-rail slots, packed tight on the tracks, and gave serious trouble. All day gangs were struggling to keep the slots open. Every snow plow in the city was kept hustling, but in remote sections high winds during the night

Ex-Service Men Get Prior Right to North Platte-Shoshone Land

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Soldiers, sailors and marines who served in the World War will have prior rights of entry on the vast North Platte and Shoshone irrigation projects in Wyoming, to be opened next month.

Secretary Lane announced tonight, following passage by Congress today of the joint resolution giving honorably discharged service men a preference right in obtaining lands under the Homestead act, that first application of the provisions of the resolution would be applied to the North Platte and Shoshone projects.

The North Platte tract will be opened to entry by ex-service men March 5 and the Shoshone project March 13.

Every man serving in the war would get a World War veteran bond, worth $1 for every day of service and bearing interest at 4¾ per cent. under a bill introduced today by Representative Osborne, Republican, of California. The issue would be limited to $1,500,000,000.

NIXON SENDS COAL PLEA TO PRESIDENT

Stop Seizure by Railroad Administration of Fuel En Route to City, He Urges.

Confers with Public Utilities Heads and Authorizes Curtailment of Service on Car Lines.

Representatives of the various public utility corporations conferred yesterday morning with Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon as to the best methods to pursue to avoid a threatened shortage of coal, with the result that a telegram was sent to Presiden Wilson stating that the situation was desperate and urging that the Railroad Administration be directed to requisition no more coal en route to this city. A letter was also addressed to Mayor Hylan, indicating that widespread co-operation of all public officials and drastic action were necessary to prevent the calamity of restricted public service and a possible complete cessation of it.

With these alarming notes the commission issued a statement showing the coal supply on hand and expected of all of the utilities. Last night the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, the second company on the commission's list of corporations in sore straits, issued the following statement, made by Frank Hedley, President of the company:

"While the reserve coal supply of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company is not as large as the company would like to have, nor as large as the company is generally able to maintain, the situation is nevertheless such that we feel we can assure the public that it need not be unduly apprehensive of any cessation or operation of its subway or elevated lines at this time.

"This statement, of course, is based upon the assumption that the company will continue to receive the co-operation that it is now receiving from all parties concerned in the securing of a continuous supply of coal.

"This afternoon the outlook, as the results of efforts today, is better than it was this morning.

"We have barges in sight, that is, that are now approaching the power houses, where they should arrive during the night carrying a large amount of coal, which will make our coal situation tomorrow morning improved as compared with this morning."

It was learned that the Interborough Company had been busy throughout the day hurrying forward many tons of coal en route from the mines, that men had been ordered to be ready at the piers at all hours to unload barges as fast as they arrived, and that these activities promised to carry the company safely past all danger of a shutdown of service.

Mr. Nixon said later that he had authorized his engineers to take up the question of curtailment of service with the Interborough and that while they had not yet reported back to him it was possible there had been some lessening of service at midnight. Some time today, he said, the exact extent of this curtailment would be decided upon and it would not be very severe.

Following a conference with the Health Department, Mr. Nixon added, he had authorized discontinuing all heat in cars. "This was absolutely necessary, we couldn't help it," he said. "The coal is not coming through and something had to be done."

The statement of the commission concerning the coal situation of the Interborough Company said that the company had at its Fifty-ninth and Seventy-fourth Street power houses a total of 6,500 tons of coal, and that when this supply had been reduced to 2,000 tons at each location, operation would have to be suspended. Then the commission's statement read:

"In order to avoid this, with the hope that some replenishment may be obtained, an immediate curtailment of service will be permitted."

The commission said that the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company had 12,000 tons of coal at Staten Island, and, in addition, one barge "somewhere in the harbor" with a cargo of 600 tons. This company consumes about fifteen hundred tons a day, about five hundred tons less than the Interborough. Concerning the B. R. T. Company the statement of the commission said: "Unless opera-

LONDON, Friday, Feb. 6.—Various means whereby the value of the sovereign can be restored in the United States continue to be the subject of lengthy discussion in the London newspapers. The decision of the British cotton importers to suspend purchases of raw material in the United States caused as much surprise here as it apparently did in the American market. The London Times Manchester correspondent says:

"Now will begin a silent struggle to determine who is in the stronger position, the American seller or the Lancashire buyer. Whoever holds out the longest will oblige the other to bear the loss on the fluctuating rate of exchange.

"The position appears to be pretty strong. The mills are known to have large supplies of raw material, though in the absence of public record the actual quantities in the spinners' hands are uncertain. The latest figures of the Liverpool Cotton Association show that in Liverpool and Manchester stocks of American cotton total 767,000 bales and a large amount of raw cotton is coming this way, 48,000 bales being afloat.

"The total of over 1,200,000 bales would be sufficient were all of suitable quality to keep the Lancashire mills working for twenty weeks, for the average deliveries to the trade during the last six months have been 56,000 bales a week. There is no urgency in the demand for raw cotton. In Lancashire the stocks are adequate and some weeks can go by before importers will need to resume buying."

As regards the experiment of Liverpool importers of shipping cotton back to the United States one prominent importer said:

"It will pay us better to ship cotton back to the United States as prices are at present. This already is being done, one firm alone having sent back 3,000 bales. Liverpool is the cheapest market in the world for cotton at the present time. As an instance take March futures. The difference amounts to no less than 8½ pence per pound."

It is pointed out that there are other goods besides cotton now lying in Europe, purchased some time ago and not paid for, which at the present rate of exchange imply very heavy losses to importers, and that it would pay to ship some of them back to the United States and sell them in dollars rather than keep them and meet such a loss. This, it is stated, has been done in some cases, notwithstanding the high cost of freight and insurance.

Liverpool has the largest tobacco warehouses in the world and they are so congested with leaf tobacco that the Dock Board has notified importers that it will not receive at the board's warehouses any tobacco in bales shipped by any vessel leaving a foreign port after Feb. 14.

This is the second recent restriction on tobacco imports. At the close of last year tobacco in bond in the United Kingdom amounted to 303,591,000 pounds, equal to eighteen months' supply.

Despite this it is stated that the unfavorable rate of American exchange will necessitate increasing prices of tobacco for the consumer in the near future.

The Daily Chronicle this morning says it will be a great surprise to the city if the coming budget measures are not taken to restrict the import of luxuries, perhaps by imposing heavy duties on them. It is pointed out that Walter Leaf's instance of foreign wines was not well chosen, since the importation of French wines benefits French exchange. As regards the suspension of American cotton imports the question is asked how is cotton to be bought for the mills at Ghent or Mulhouse, Milan or Chemnitz, with currencies depreciated to anything between two times and twenty times their dollar values.

The Daily Express comes out with an appeal to the English people to "give up your gold to the State," so that it may be used to pay Britain's debt to America, which, in round figures, says the paper, now stands at £850,000,000.

"In the homily which he read to Europe," The Daily Express continues, "Mr. Glass exclaimed, 'Send us your gold.' Let us do it. The Daily Express

French Government Decides to Accept Treaty Reservations

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The London Times Paris correspondent says the French Government has decided to accept the American Senate reservations to the Peace Treaty, and the means by which this decision is to be notified are now under consideration.

PLANS TO HOUSE 85,000 WORKERS

NEAR NEW CLOTHING CENTRE

Would Help Solve Renting Problem and Relieve Subways—Queens Site Considered.

Having instituted the removal of the cloak and suit trade from Fifth and Madison Avenues to locations on Seventh Avenue, ranging from Thirtieth to Thirty-eighth Street, the Save New York Committee now plans the construction of model tenements for some 85,000 working people situated within easy reach of the new clothing centre. Such an undertaking, it is felt, will not only go a long way toward settling the serious housing problem confronting the city, but also will relieve congestion during rush hours in the subways.

It is proposed to utilize the district west of the new Seventh Avenue lofts, running from Ninth Avenue to the North River and between, approximately, Twenty-eighth and Fortieth Streets. This is virtually undeveloped territory, occupied for the most part by run-down three and four story tenements which have outlived their usefulness. It is within walking distance of the new factories, and occupation of this district by garment workers, in addition to reducing rental prices, would further bring down living expenses through elimination of car-fare and permitting employes to return to their homes for their noon hour.

Furthermore, it is pointed out, with employes' homes near by, the Seventh Avenue district would not be blighted by the throngs of workers blocking the sidewalks at noon, a condition which has grown to be a nuisance on Fifth and Madison Avenues.

Failing to decide upon the lower west side location for working people's tenements, the Save New York Committee plans building on sites in Long Island City. Even here traction congestion on the Bronx subway would be relieved through the removal of thousands of garment workers to Long Island City and the utilization of the Queensboro Subway and its proposed extension to Times Square in addition to the plan now being agitated for a Thirty-fourth Street "belt line" connecting with the Grand Central-Times Square shuttle line.

Says Project Is Assured.

According to J. H. Burton, Chairman and organizer of the Save New York Committee, construction of the model tenements is assured through the promise of various wealthy manufacturers to back the project financially.

"The Save New York Committee put through the moving of factories from the Fifth Avenue and Madison Avenue residential district to Seventh Avenue to relieve the congestion of workers on the sidewalks," said Mr. Burton yesterday. "Having accomplished this, the committee intends to put through a general housing scheme west of the factory center which is growing on Seventh Avenue by tearing down the tumble-down shacks which served their purpose and building modern tenements.

"It is our endeavor to interest men of wealth in the necessity for providing adequate and decent living quarters for working people within easy reach of their work, which shall be a development without primary idea of profit. Neither do we wish it to be regarded as a philanthropic scheme, however, although we do not intend that any more than a nominal return for the investment shall be received not over 4 or 5 per cent.

"The present trend of building in New York is the construction of large office buildings and luxurious hotels for persons of means and refinement, but speculative building is no long interested in modern tenements for working people. The tide of immigration is coming this way once more. Unless something is done, and done soon, housing conditions, which are bad enough now, are going to be worse then ever before. The Save New York Committee is going to present this problem as an obligation on the part of people of means to realize its importance and solve it by backing the construction of model tenements.

Logical Place for Building.

"The district west of Ninth Avenue, between Twenty-eighth and Fortieth Streets, is the logical place for such a building program, but there are certain objectionable features connected with this territory which must be eliminated.

'CAN'T ADVISE YOU ON THE TREATY,' —LLOYD GEORGE

Whatever Is Done, He Has Nothing but Confidence and Gratitude for America.

A BRIEF TALK TO THE TIMES

In Which He Defends Lord Grey's "Report to the British Public."

PRESIDENT NOT CONSULTED

Washington Feels That He Does Not Take Kindly to Gray's Course.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—I met the Prime Minister, Mr. David Lloyd Gorge, casually in Downing Street today. He was coming out from luncheon and I asked him what he thought of Lord Grey's letter. He replied:

"I might have hopes, from the European standpoint, as to what America might see her way to do, especially in view of the value of time, but I could never put myself in the position of advising her about her business.

"Lord Grey's letter was a different matter. It was in the nature of a report to the British public on what he had observed during his stay in America and to give them a clearer understanding of conditions over there.

"I will tell you what I feel about America," continued the Prime Minister. "She came into the war at a time when the need for her coming was most urgent. Her coming was like an avalanche. The world has never seen anything like it. Her great army of all ranks gave a service that no man would in 1917 have believed possible. The effort of her navy was beyond praise. The President and the whole Administration at Washington, and every branch of American co-operation everywhere, worked closely and effectively with the European effort against Germany. And, finally, the great American people put every ounce of their invincible might into a war 3,000 miles away—a war on issues at first strange to them and offering no direct or immediate menace to their interests.

"And now I can only say that I trust them. I trust their fairness and their sound judgment. And whether they come in or stand aloof, even if they never gave anything more than they have already given, they would leave Great Britain and the whole of Europe under a debt of gratitude that can never be repaid."

When Mr. Lloyd George had finished his remarks he said:

"I am not being interviewed. I am simply telling you my personal feelings."

I said I would like to cable his remarks to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

"All right," he added. "I had no idea of making a statement, but that's how I feel."

SHOWS LORD GREY DIDN'T TELL WILSON

Tumulty Authorizes Statement—Lansing Says No Protest Has Been Sent.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The fact that Lord Grey did not see President Wilson or get into communication with him by writing, prior to sending to The London Times his letter virtually giving his approval to the Lodge reservations to the treaty of peace, was made known today at the White House in the course of an interview which the newspaper correspondents had with Secretary Joseph P. Tumulty.

This announcement served further to complicate the Peace Treaty situation and to give strength to the reports which have been circulated that President Wilson was in no sense pleased by the attitude which Lord Grey assumed and the action he took in writing to the London newspaper while he still was a special ambassador to the United States, even though he said he spoke as an individual.

The feeling here, certainly, is that Lord Grey will not return to the United States during the present administration, although at present officially an ambassador on leave of absence to visit London. The President, it also is felt, will not give recognition to what Lord Grey had to say in his letter as in any way affecting the stand taken by the White House in regard to the treaty.

ALLIES PREPARE TO WAIVE DEMAND FOR EXTRADITION OF WAR CULPRITS; FRANCE MAY KEEP LEFT BANK OF RHINE

Berlin Government Proclaims It Impossible To Give Up War Culprits Demanded by Allies

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—A statement issued by the Government concerning the demand for the extradition of war culprits says:

"The Imperial Government at today's session dealt with the situation created by the extradition note and list and the refusal of Baron von Lersner to accept the document.

"The deliberations, which took place on the basis of the list, which had unofficially become known, resulted in a full and unanimous agreement that the standpoint expressed by the German note delivered at Paris Jan. 25 and since published is, in all circumstances, to be maintained.

"At the signing of the Peace Treaty the Imperial Government left no doubt that compliance with the demand for extradition was impossible. This conviction, which it shares with an overwhelming majority of the German people, without distinction as to party, will guide it in any further measures and negotiations which may become necessary."

LONDON, Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—The Foreign Affairs Committee of the German National Assembly will meet Saturday with the party leaders to decide whether to convene the Assembly, says a wireless message from Berlin. This action is in connection with the complications arising out of the extradition proceedings.

Chancellor Bauer, in a statement to the press today, said:

"Germany finds herself in a critical position similar to that when confronted with the question whether she would sign the Peace Treaty or not. Then, as now, the Government tried to reject the so-called clauses of honor.

"A majority of the Assembly voted in favor of signing the treaty on June 22, 1919, presuming that these clauses would not become effective. Their efforts were unsuccessful, and under pressure of the threatened occupation of Germany they resolved to accept the treaty in its entirety.

"We tried to get the list and the charges against those named before the ratification of the Peace Treaty, so that we ourselves might take proceedings against them. Our request was refused and our attempt to establish a State court was frustrated."

HITCHCOCK KNEW GREY'S POSITION

Democratic Leader Says the Letter Has Not Changed Any of His Colleagues' Views.

CALLS PARTY CONFERENCE

Reported That the President Has Sent a Letter to Guide Action on the Treaty.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Senator Hitchcock, who returned to the Senate today after a trip to Nebraska, has called a meeting of Democratic Senators for Saturday morning to discuss a plan of action with regard to Senator Lodge's proposed effort to bring up the treaty in the Senate on Monday.

At the same time the Republican irreconcilables will meet for a similar purpose. Mr. Lodge also is scheduled to confer with his lieutenants, as some details of the procedure to be followed Monday and thereafter have not yet been worked out.

Senator Hitchcock stated that Saturday's meeting would include the Democratic "friends of the treaty." It is not to be a caucus, in the sense that any decision reached will bind individual Senators. It simply will be an effort to find out the general sentiment of Democrats who want ratification as to what steps they shall take. Mr. Hitchcock indicated that a marked division of opinion might be expected to develop among the Democrats at the meeting. He said they were rather divided now as to the reservations.

Discussing the incident of the Viscount Grey letter Mr. Hitchcock stated that before the Special Ambassador left for England he told Mr. Hitchcock that neither Paris nor London would be likely to concern themselves about the American reservations, but that with respect to the Lenroot reservation on voting power in the League of Nations the British Colonies would make objections. Mr. Hitchcock's version of what Lord Grey said agreed in detail with what the British Ambassador was reported by other Senators to have told them. It also was exactly in line with Lord Grey's letter.

In a formal statement concerning his conversation with Lord Grey, Senator Hitchcock said:

"Lord Grey was very careful in his conversations concerning the treaty and all proposed reservations while in this country. He said the only reservation which concerned his country directly was that which declared that the United States would not be bound by any decision or election in which the colonies cast separate votes. This reservation did not affect the mother country, but he thought the colonies might strongly object to having their voting right thus attacked."

In more informal discussion of the matter the Senator said that his conversations with Viscount Grey had led him to believe that in London the Government "didn't ask for the six votes in the League and hadn't any particular interest in the subject. It might embarrass her with her colonies, however, if the colonies were disfranchised. To declare that the United States would not be bound by any decision or action in which the colonies voted would be equivalent to disfranchising them."

Senator Hitchcock was asked whether

THEY WILL GO ON STAND

Expect to be Unseated, but Will Try to Get Propaganda Into Record.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 5.—Except for odds and ends of evidence to be produced next week counsel for the Assembly Judiciary Committee closed its case late this afternoon at the hearing into the eligibility of the suspended Socialist Assemblymen and the hearing was adjourned until next Tuesday.

In this evidence is the testimony of John E. Harris, formerly of Victor Berger's Milwaukee Leader, which a commission is taking in Milwaukee. Mr. Harris, in reporting proceedings of the Socialist "emergency" convention in Chicago last September, quoted Louis Waldman, one of the ousted Assemblymen, as declaring in a speech on the convention floor that if he thought he could "sway" the youth of the country into taking up the fight against capitalism when they "get guns" he would be in favor of universal military training.

Morris Hillquit, chief counsel for the Socialists, who has been absent for the last two weeks, will be on hand next week to take charge of the presentation of the Socialist side. Except for the announcement that the suspended Assemblymen will take the stand and submit to cross-examination little is known regarding the plans of their counsel.

"We are not prepared to make any statement with reference to that at this time, but will know more on Monday," was the reply of S. John Block, one of Mr. Hillquit's aids, when asked if they had decided to call Speaker Sweet, Attorney General Newton, Senator Lusk, Archibald E. Stevenson and Deputy Attorney General Berger of counsel for the Lusk Committee as witnesses.

With their clients counsel for the suspended Assemblymen believe a decision to unseat them is a foregone conclusion and that the defense can be of no practical value, except as propaganda for their party. The rulings of Chairman Martin of the Judiciary Committee and the entire atmosphere of the hearings, so far, has convinced the Socialist counsel that the verdict had been formulated when the resolution suspending the Assemblymen was adopted on the opening day of the session by a vote that was almost unanimous.

Plans of the Defense.

The first step of the defense will be a motion by Mr. Hillquit to dismiss the proceedings on the ground that the evidence adduced does not support the charges embodied in the ouster resolution.

"If this motion is denied," said Mr. Block, "we are prepared to put in a very full defense. I would not be surprised if we take as much time as did the prosecution. We shall demand and expect the same latitude in the presentation of our proof."

GERMANS MUST ADMIT GUILT

Accepting List of Accused May Be So Interpreted

CONSIDERATION FOR EBERT

NEW THREAT OF OCCUPATION

Paris Press Almost Unanimous for Holding Rhine if Culprits Are Withheld.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—Article 228 of the Treaty of Versailles will never be enforced as it stands. Field Marshal von Hindenburg will not be tried by an allied military tribunal. General Ludendorff will not be haled before a court in Paris. Admiral von Tirpitz will not be imprisoned in the Tower of London. Ex-Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg will not be sentenced by an allied Judge, and Baron von der Lancken will not be shot at sunrise, as Edith Cavell was.

Despite the righteousness of their cause, the Allies know that they will never try in Paris, London, or Brussels the 890 Germans whose names are on the list von Lersner would not take to Berlin and which the Allies have now sent there. There will be an execution of the spirit of Article 228, but not of the letter. The sword of allied justice is dulled against a wall of realities, for the article in question cannot be enforced as it was written and signed. Here is the allied plan:

First, the German Government must accept the list of accused Germans and thus recognize in principle that they did offend against the laws of war. That done, the Allies will consider the exigencies of the situation.

These decisions were reached at a meeting of the Committee of Ambassadors last night. They were incorporated into the draft of the proposed note to Berlin which was cabled to London and Rome for the approval of the English and Italian Premiers. A courier left Paris last night for Berlin, carrying the list, and as soon as it has been approved the note will be telegraphed to the French Chargé in Berlin, and with the list will be handed to the German Government.

The allied statesmen have no wish to overthrow the German Government, nor do they wish to let Article 228 become wholly a dead letter. Indications are that a crisis in Berlin will be avoided for the present. At all events, Ebert and Noske will not have to go out and arrest Hindenburg and Ludendorff this week or next. It does not appear that the German Government approves the action of von Lersner, and if it calmly accepts the allied list time will have a chance to exert its soothing influence.

The new allied plan can mean nothing less than that the Allies will consider the difficulties confronting the Ebert Government in meeting the demands of the Entente, and if Berlin exhibits good faith, or, rather, if Berlin does not exhibit bad faith, the Allies will not exhibit any precipitate haste.

It would be going too far to say that the Allies would be satisfied with Berlin's acceptance of the list of accused and its consequent recognition of the Allies' technical right to try them, which has already been recognized in a signed and sealed treaty, and that the Allies would be content to let the matter rest there.

I am informed from a high diplomatic source that the Allies will give attention to Germany's professed willingness to try the accused men before a high German court with allied prosecutors. That not to say that this measure will be adopted; but between it and the allied demand for the extradition of the accused to be tried before allied military tribunals a compromise may be reached which will serve the purposes of allied justice and at the same time save the German Government.

Paris Press for Punitive Occupation.

The Paris press today devotes, most serious attention to the situation arising out of Baron von Lersner's refusal to transmit the list of Germans whose extradition is demanded. While all the editors refer to von Lersner's "brainstorm," they all show that they expect great trouble in getting hold of such men as Hindenburg, Ludendorff, and Bethmann Hollweg, whether the German Government backs up von Lersner or not.

The indications are that von Lersner disobeyed instructions from Berlin, but his personal attitude corresponds with that of so many leaders of Germany that the editors believe his action foreshadows a difficult situation.

As if by inspiration nearly every journal argues that the one place for the Allies to get satisfaction is on the Rhine. They recall that the allied armies have a right to stay there until Germany fulfills the terms of the treaty. It is rather noticeable that there is very little rattling of the sword in today's press comments, the general view being that the treaty provides every remedy. The general opinion is that it is very doubtful if the Allies ever try the accused men.

Stephane Lauzanne in the Matin advises every one concerned to read and read again Article 428 of the treaty, which says: "As a guarantee for the execution of the present treaty by Germany, German territory situated to the west of the Rhine, together with the bridgeheads, will be occupied by the allied and associated troops for a period of fifteen years from the coming into force of the present treaty."

Article 429 says that the troops shall be withdrawn in three five-year periods if Germany keeps her promises, but adds that if the promises are not kept evacuation may be delayed.

Article 430 provides that should Germany not fulfil her engagements the sections already evacuated may be reoccupied.

Here M. Lauzanne finds the remedy. He says:

"Either Germany observes faithfully the conditions of the treaty, and the Allies evacuate by echelons in fifteen years, or Germany does not observe the conditions, and the Allies evacuate nothing. Düsseldorf, Cologne, Aix la Chapelle, Mayence, Coblenz, and the Palatinate constitute the guarantee for the execution of the treaty. If the treaty is not executed the forfeit rests in our hands."

In other words, the Allies will trade Ludendorff for Coblenz, Hindenburg for Cologne, and Bethmann Hollweg for Aix la Chapelle. M. Lauzanne continues:

"Von der Lancken, the smiling assassin of Edith Cavell; Rupprecht of Bavaria, who ordered the deportation, like slaves, of the girls of Lille; Valentiner, who sank 150 ships and killed helpless women and infants—they find no need of coming to answer before the tribunal of the Allies. They find it more comfortable on the right side of the Rhine. Very well; we will stay on the left side of the Rhine, and we see no need of quitting Cologne in fifteen years, Coblenz in ten and Mayence in fifteen. Our line of conduct is simple: No war criminals, no evacuation."

M. Lauzanne's article means nothing more or less than that France may agitate for a revision of the treaty, that Germany not give up the men accused and will seek to place the French boundary on the Rhine, where French statesmen have never ceased to think it should have been placed in the treaty, and would have been placed had it not been for President Wilson.

Pertinax for British Alliance.

"Pertinax," who wields a biting pen, says in the Echo de Paris that it is all the fault of Lloyd George, and that therefore England had better immediately conclude a military alliance with France to make sure that the treaty is enforced.

"All the clauses of the Treaty of Versailles called penalty clauses," he says, "such as the judgment of William and the trial of war criminals, proceeded directly from the brain of Lloyd George. These clauses correspond to the conception that the catastrophe of 1914 was not due to the logical development of Germanism, but to a plot of certain Germans. Any one who has the least historical sense revolts from this conception, and any one who has the least political sense revolts as well. The guarantee of our peace is not the crushing of individuals, but the crushing of Germanism. In trying to judge these criminals we are only hastening to rally our enemies around the idea of revenge."

Gustave Hervé, in La Victoire, says that the whole idea of trying these Germans is wrong.

"We have failed to consider," he says, "that an allied tribunal would be for these men a pedestal. In the eyes of German patriots what moral effect would there be in an enemy's sentence against the Kaiser and his chieftains? Whatever proofs we have against them, we will make them martyrs. Hindenburg and Ludendorff have already enough prestige in Germany without our giving them another halo."

M. Hervé concludes by saying that the best thing to do is to let Germany keep her cascade and punishment be only allied troops on the Rhine for a greater number of years.

Aristide Brian's paper, The Eclair publishes a display article declaring that Foch and Clemenceau fought at the Peace Conference for the left bank of the Rhine for France and now see a way to get it.

The Petit Parisien warns the Allies that they will find most of Germany agreeing with Von Lersner. The Petit Journal, controlled by Stephen Pichon, former Foreign Minister, says that allied public opinion must not be too quick to believe that Berlin will back Von Lersner. As for that German diplomat, The Petit Journal is glad he has gone and hopes he will not return.

On the other hand, the Journal says the Allies may expect a rupture, and advises them to impose a blockade on Germany.

"The refusal to deliver the culprits," it says, "is more than an exhibition of personal pride by Germany; it is the beginning of a campaign of obstruction which will be offered to the execution of all the clauses of the treaty."

Mayer Instructed to Receive List.

PARIS, Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—Dr. Wilhelm Mayer, German Chargé d'Affaires in Paris, will leave Berlin for Paris this evening. He has received formal instructions to accept the allied note demanding extradition of persons accused of war crimes, says a dispatch from the German capital by way of Basle.

The Government has summoned the chiefs of the various parties in the National Assembly to convene Saturday in order to discuss the question. Meanwhile, the dispatch adds, the Government expects to be in possession of the exact text of the allied notes, without which no decision can be taken.

The official list of the Germans demanded for extradition was sent to Berlin by a courier of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, who left yesterday for the German capital. He carried what was virtually a new note to be presented to the German Government, besides the original covering letter drawn up to accompany the list.

The suggestion has been made in official circles here that if the Germans resist surrender of the accused the latter may be tried by default. It is pointed out that, while most of them would never undergo the penalties imposed by the court, it would be impossible for them to leave Germany except for neutral countries.

It was stated at the Foreign Office today that the list of accused would probably be delivered to the German Government this afternoon, either by M. de Marcilly, the French Chargé d'Affaires in Berlin, or Lord Kilmarnock, the British Chargé, who is dean of the allied diplomatic officers in Berlin. It was also said at the Foreign Office that any list of the accused given out in Berlin up to the present would not be considered as official.

BRITISH SEE DOUBT ON CULPRITS' CASE

DEMAND REGARDED AS LATE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—There is a widespread impression that the Entente statesmen blundered badly in not insisting that German war criminals should have been surrendered immediately after the armistice or if, as was the case, lists were not then complete, that a certain number of prominent persons should have been required to play the part of hostages. Herr Noske, who received a list of war criminals two weeks ago, suggested a scheme which some authorities here believed would fulfill the purpose of bringing the chief culprits to justice. The Supreme Council in Paris rejected this proposal.

The publication in Berlin of the war criminal list has, it is recognized, made the task before the German Government, assuming that there had been any intention of executing it, absolutely impossible.

The British list contains about 120 names, among them being persons connected with the Armenian atrocities. Parenthetically, General Sir Ian Hamilton issued a public protest against the inclusion of the list of the names of General Liman von Sanders, and he is supported by the Australian Generals Cox, Rosenthal and Herring, who all say that their experiences at Gallipoli proved that von Sanders was a clean fighter.

It is argued in some quarters that now that the list is definitely known to include the names of Generals Hindenburg and Ludendorff, the German Government is put in an impossible position. Whether or not its officials enmasse have declared they will do nothing to obtain the arrest of generals and officers called for by the Entente Allies, the breakdown in the official machinery under such a pressure is morally certain.

Would Revolt at Allies' Demand.

No civilized community with national memories, however defeated, it is argued, could conceivably proceed on the demand of its conquerors to hunt down, seize, and hand over its most famous Generals for trial on charges which might conceivably lead to their execution.

Everywhere there would be passive resistance among the people, if not among the police.

The demand could be enforced only by military action of an overwhelming kind, supposing the Entente powers to be willing to upset the present German Government in favor of one constituted by Spartacides.

Even the latter, were they to undertake it, would be unable to obtain and carry out the extradition even the Socialists in general are averse to the trial of the ex-Kaiser by the victorious enemy, the trial of leading Generals must be intensely repugnant to the German people as a whole.

The one thing that Ostia is not one of official resistance of the Ministry now in power. No German Government could be looked to for fulfillment of the treaty at this point, and any Government which attempted it would collapse either through passive resistance or by open revolt.

On the other hand, it is pointed out that if the Allies submitted to the German protest against carrying out this particular article of the Peace Treaty that document becomes a scrap of paper and there would be every incentive to avoid the execution of other articles. Germany, it is said, understands only compulsion and compulsion therefore must be used. And ther's the rub!

What method of compulsion can be followed?

The resumption of the blockade is suggested, but if the threat of that proved unavailing, to carry it into effect would precipitate a universal economic and financial crisis which the world is struggling to avoid. The occupation of more German territory, possibly implying remobilization of demobilized troops who have been returned to the ranks of industry, would be equally dangerous.

The German offer to try war criminals in German courts is dismissed here on the ground that the people of Entente Nations can have no more faith in the justice of a German trial than the German people have in the justice of a trial in the Entente court.

Suggests a Middle Course.

The middle course is suggested by the Westminster Gazette, which says:

"If it is desired that the trial is to be obtained in a fashion that will realize the wish for an act of essential justice, it may perhaps be achieved by erecting a neutral tribunal in which eminent jurists of the neutral States may try the incriminated persons with the consent of Germany and the Entente Powers. Allied and German assent to such a procedure would so far clear the reputation of the German people."

Even this, it is admitted, would be a difficult solution, and on all sides one hears it asked how the men who framed the Versailles Peace Treaty are going to get themselves out of the dilemma they have prepared for themselves by truckling to what was, in some of its aspects at least, the artificial sentiment stirred by an organized campaign.

Cheap popularity, said one observer today, may prove to have been dearly bought.

Incidentally it may be mentioned that the gossip of the day is that Roberts is resigning the post of Food Controller because he believes a general election is imminent and wants to sever connections with the Government for fear of being left out in the cold by labor. If this is correct, it is a noteworthy sign of the times.

LONDON, Feb. 5, (Associated Press.)—The Manchester Guardian, discussing the return to Berlin of Baron von Lersner and the complication which has arisen over the extradition of German war criminals, suggests as a possible issue of the dilemma trial by "the Permanent Court of International Justice," provided for in Article XIV. of the Peace Treaty, or a court internationally established at The Hague.

The Daily Chronicle, which is supposed to reflect Premier Lloyd George's views, regrets that the Allies have thrown away a powerful lever for the exertion of pressure on Germany in permitting German prisoners in France to be repatriated.

DENIES WAR CULPRIT GUILT.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DANZIG, Feb. 5.—I have interviewed one of the most important personalities whose delivery for trial, according to the official statement from Berlin, is demanded by the Entente. This is Herr Sahm, Overburgomaster of Danzig.

His position is equivalent to that of a Lord Mayor in England, and his name on the list received here created amazement and intense excitement. In August, 1915, immediately after the occupation of Warsaw, Sahm went there at the request of the German Government. Until Feb., 1918, he was responsible for the control of the feeding of the population. Sahm said today:

"I await events calmly, for I have a clear conscience. I cared for the population of Warsaw like a father, and have no idea what accusation is made against me. When I left Warsaw the Polish Mayor thanked me for what I had done, and expressed his regrets about my departure and hope of my return. With German consciousness of duty I looked after Warsaw in the same way that I am now looking after Danzig. I am convinced that the demand for my trial in a Polish political move which would never have been made if I had not been appointed to my present office in the free City of Danzig.

"My activities in Warsaw had nothing to do with either politics or police administration, but were of a purely economic nature. If the Polish Government has succeeded in getting my name placed on the war criminal list, I can only regard it as one of their ways of conducting a political battle, and its only purpose is to prevent my taking part in the negotiation attending the formation of the free State of Danzig."

Sahm received from the German Government the Iron Cross of the First Class for his work in Warsaw. British representatives here speak highly of the part he played in the transition period since the Peace Treaty declared Danzig a free city.

DEATH FOR KAISER, 106 JURISTS INSIST

The Kaiser can be legally tried for the "supreme offense against international morality and the sanctity of treaties," as charged by the Allies, and if found guilty, should be exiled or put to death, in the opinion of the large majority of the 328 jurists who replied to a questionnaire sent by The Literary Digest to the Justices of the State Supreme Courts, District, County, and Circuit Judges, and to the heads of the legal departments of American universities.

The vote of the 328 jurists on the questions presented in the questionnaire was as follows:

For exile	137
For capital punishment	106
For imprisonment	51
For other penalties	7
Against any trial	27

"Especially noticeable," The Literary Digest says in its current issue reviewing the replies, "in view of the circumstances that these replies come from men highly trained in legal procedure and not from laymen, is the fact that a negligible number—18 of the 328, to be exact—hold with Secretary Lansing that there is no adequate body of laws under which a man may be tried for acts such as those attributed to the German Emperor."

Several of those opposed to any trial held that there was law sufficient for the trial, but were of the opinion that the trial would make a martyr of the Kaiser and give him an unbefitting dignity. Some of those who favored imprisonment or exile suggested punishments to continue through his natural life. Judge William E. Fort of the Criminal Division of the Tenth Circuit of Alabama favored exiling him "everywhere and nowhere," that is, having him shipped about as was "The Man Without a Country."

GREY LETTER CHECKS ANTI-AMERICAN DRIVE

Reasons for the Campaign in Britain May Be Brought Out When Parliament Meets.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Feb. 6.—The London Times says:

"Reports from the United States upon the effect of Lord Grey's letter have deepened the impression which the letter made in British Parliamentary circles. Lord Grey's action is recognized as having been eminently courageous and salutary. His demonstration that the opposition of the American Senate to the Peace Treaty springs from serious Constitutional motives, and is not merely the outcome of personal or party rancor against President Wilson, has done much to temper the resentment that was spreading in this country in regard to the attitude of the United States. It has thus rendered possible on both sides of the Atlantic calmer consideration of the issues really involved. At the same time it has checked the pernicious campaign that is being carried on in some British newspapers.

"The motives for this campaign are being carefully investigated in quarters which have at heart the maintenance of friendly relations between Great Britain and the United States. They appear in some cases to spring from considerations with which Englishmen have little concern. It is probable that when Parliament meets these matters will be publicly debated and that in particular the outrageous denunciations of the United States in a weekly journal which is reputed to be controlled by a Canadian-born Unionist Member of Parliament for a London division will be dealt with in a way that will leave no room for the supposition current in America in regard to a similar campaign in another journal, that its language represents Ministerial opinion."

BERLIN CENSURES LERSNER'S ACTION

BERNSTORFF WOULD APPEAR

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—The German Government disapproves of the attitude of Baron Kurt von Lersner in his refusal to transmit the list of Germans demanded for extradition to his Government, according to a statement made today by Foreign Minister Muller to M. de Marcilly, the French Chargé d'Affaires here.

The present whereabouts of the official extradition list and the accompanying covering note is a matter of speculation so far as the German Foreign Office is concerned. Baron von Lersner's precipitate procedure in leaving Paris after refusing to forward the list to his Government has embarrassed the latter. While his action has not been officially condemned, the Cabinet statement, nevertheless, permits of the conclusion that both the Cabinet and the Foreign Office were embarrassed by his action and therefore lost no time in releasing him from his post as head of the German delegation.

Up to 10 o'clock this morning Government officials had no information as to who was in possession of the two documents. It is believed, however, that they will be handed over at Berlin by a representative of the Interallied Commission.

Dr. Wilhelm Mayer, the German Chargé in Paris, who returned to Germany after presenting himself to Premier Millerand recently, and has been staying in Munich, was summoned to Berlin by an urgent call after the resignation of Baron von Lersner as head of the German peace delegation in Paris.

One of the most surprised men in Berlin yesterday was Count von Bernstorff, former Ambassador to the United States, who, it is said, is desired by the Allies for his alleged connection with Bolo Pasha. The Count, despite his surprise, seemed to be mildly amused. He said that he was not afraid to face trial, that he was ready to go if wanted, and that he might even put the Allies in a quandary if they attempted to prosecute him.

Pending the receipt of the allied note the Government has been able to discuss the extradition situation only in a perfunctory manner, but in order to bring home to the German people a full realization of the crisis it ordered the publication of the unofficial list, the names of persons whose surrender is required.

The Pan German organs praise Baron von Lersner's action in declining to transmit the allied note, but the Vossische Zeitung rebukes him, saying that he seeks to dodge the responsibility devolving upon him as a member of the Peace Delegation by a heroic pose. The newspaper reminds him that the fate of 60,000,000 of people is at stake, and declares that the rôle played by a single individual is quite immaterial.

The Zeitung considers that the situation all turns on whether the German Government believes it will be able to persuade the Allies to moderation. If so, the newspaper says, the Government should take this action into the confidence. If not, it adds, there is no alternative but to resign.

What actually occurred between M. Millerand, the French Premier, and Baron von Lersner is still a mystery here. Only conflicting accounts of their conversation have been published in Berlin.

Ministers Unanimous for Refusal.

At the conclusion of last night's Cabinet session, a member of the Government informed the correspondent of The Associated Press that the Ministers were unanimous in declaring that surrender of the men demanded here or in the unofficial list received here or any other extradition list was an utter physical impossibility.

The Cabinet meeting, which lasted several hours, was attended by Mathias Erzberger, the Vice Premier and Minister of Finance, whose appearance was his first at a meeting of the Ministry since he was shot in the shoulder in the recent attempt of a former cadet officer to assassinate him.

Rumors that a crisis was impending in the Government were declared by the Lokal-Anzeiger to be groundless. The Cabinet members were in complete agreement on Germany's policy, the newspaper asserted.

It is learned that in addition to the names previously given the extradition list includes the names of Frederick von Ingenohl, Djemal Pasha, former Turkish Minister of War; Rupert von Gipper, and Admiral von Schroeder, former commander of the Naval Corps. These men were demanded unanimously.

The deliberations of the Cabinet last night were wholly informal, as neither a verified list of the men wanted by the Allies nor the covering note was at its disposal.

Mangled List Received in Berlin.

The list received in Berlin contains approximately 900 names. Fully 80 per cent. of the men are unknown even to the general public of Germany. Faulty transmission resulted in gross misspellings and the omission of initials and other marks of identification to indicate the respective persons meant, while names like Mueller and Schmidt recur a score of times. France and Belgium each demand the surrender of 334 men; England of 97, Poland of 57, Rumania of 41, Serbia of 4 and Italy of 23. There is one woman on the list, Frau Elsa Scheiner, who is wanted for alleged mistreatment of French women at a German concentration camp.

Unless the covering note is accompanied by additional documentary evidence or specific indictments, the work of tabulating the list for the purpose of identifying the men will consume several days.

Field Marshal von Mackensen is wanted by Serbia and Rumania, and General Count Sixt von Arnim by England. The U-boat commander, Delaperrière is demanded by Italy, as are also Captain Valentiner and Robert Moraht, who operated in the Mediterranean.

Both France and Belgium demand Field Marshal von Hindenburg, but only the former wants General Ludendorff, former First Quartermaster General of the German Army, and Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, former Imperial Chancellor. Admiral von Tirpitz is on both the Belgian and English lists.

Others demanded by the Allies for extradition are Herr Auer, former Bavarian Minister of the Interior; Admiral von Müller, former Chief of the Naval Cabinet; Herr von Rossig, a prominent manufacturer, and General von Morgen.

According to the newspapers Herr Auer, who was shot at a session of the Bavarian Diet in February of last year, has not yet completely recovered from his wound. They say that he probably will be wanted by France in connection with the destruction or removal of industrial plants.

Vorwärts, however, says that Auer was placed on the list of persons desired owing to secret denunciations by Communists and other Bavarian opponents who hold him responsible for the death of ex-Premier Eisner, who was assassinated at the same time Auer was shot. France, according to this newspaper, also demands Major Gen. Reinhardt, former Prussian Minister of War, who served against France.

Several of the Culprits are Dead.

The list also includes Inspector Steinmetz of the Berlin police, who during the war was head of the Police Department of of Antwerp, and field police and soldiers who participated in the proceedings against Edith Cavell. It also contains the names of several officers whose deaths have been announced, among them General Fritz von Below, commander of the First Army in 1915, who is demanded by France, and General Otto von Below, who is wanted by Italy.

France demands the turning over to her of the old Field Marshal, Count von Haeseler, who stayed at the headquarters of the German Crown Prince as an observer of the war. Concerning this soldier the Zeitung am Mittag says:

"It is unthinkable that the French War Ministry failed to hear last year of the death of 'Le Diable de Metz,' once so feared by them." (Haeseler's death was reported in October, 1919.)

Admiral Oscar von Ingenohl, former commander of the German High Sea Fleet, who is demanded by Great Britain, and Captain von der Planitz, formerly Aid de Camp to the German Crown Prince, who is wanted by Belgium, are both dead. (Von der Planitz is reported to have been killed in Flanders in October, 1915.)

A declaration was read by the Prussian Minister of the Interior at a public sitting of the Imperial Council to-day. It said:

"The Council shares with the German people its indignation at the Entente's demand, and with the Imperial Government declares that it cannot be fulfilled. The Council appeals against this ignomy inflicted upon the German people to the world's sense of justice."

Alluding to this declaration, Dr. Eduard David, Minister without portfolio, said there was complete unanimity among all German communities that the demands of the Entente powers could not be fulfilled by any German Government, which also fitted in with the German Government's policy.

Dr. Meyer, Rector of Berlin University, in a statement today declared that if the demand for the extradition of the Germans desired by the Allies should be officially presented, it would be torn up.

The Rector is returning diplomas conferred upon him before the war to the Universities of Oxford, Liverpool, St. Andrew's, Chicago, and Harvard.

Noske Enjoins Dignity.

"Preserve all your dignity" is an added injunction issued by Gustav Noske, Minister of Defense, with regard to the demands of the Allies for the extradition of Germans desired for war crimes.

"As great as is the excitement of the population on account of the Entente Governments' extradition demands," says Herr Noske, "the expectation must be expressed that the requisite dignity will be preserved by every one, and that all molestation of members of foreign missions and of military commissions be refrained from, so that I may not be obliged to take more drastic protective measures."

Vorwärts says that if the Government attempts to arrest those persons demanded by the allied powers severe internal disorders will occur. "The Government," it adds, "cannot enter upon such a struggle unless backed by its own convictions and a majority of the nation. There is no question of sympathy for the accused, but the method of dealing with them is purely a German affair."

SPECULATORS RAISE STERLING TO $3.30

FRENCH FRANCS GAIN, TOO

Bankers Contend Cut in Exports, Due to Money Situation, Will Reduce Living Costs.

Yesterday's foreign exchange market was better than the day before, never getting below $3.22¼ to the pound for sterling bills on London, while its high was $3.30¼ and its closing $3.29. Wednesday's lowest was $3.19. The improvement was explained by bankers, however, as being due to buying by speculators who had gone short earlier in the week and to some buying by Scandinavian countries, which were able to purchase sterling here cheaper than in their own markets. Business was in fair volume, probably exceeding that of Wednesday, but still below what is usually done in a busy day.

Other European exchanges were decidedly mixed. French francs sold off early in the day but recovered later, closing at a net gain of about 2 centimes. Italian exchange, on the other hand, was notably weak, suffering a further loss of 90 points to 19.72. Neutral rates moved irregularly, but generally in favor of New York. Oriental rates also tended to favor America on the day's movement.

Most interest, of course, centred in the action of sterling. This market was very nervous and comparatively small bids or offerings caused price changes running into 2 or 3 cents. Reports from the other side that the European Governments are interesting themselves in the course of the market tended to make speculators here more cautious, and a good part of the buying of bills was said to have been for the account of those who had sold freely earlier in the week. Bankers found it difficult, however, to see just how Great Britain could do anything which would put a sharp stop to the decline in sterling and the fact that most of yesterday's buying came from speculators gave rise to some fear that the market will undergo another sharp break in the very near future, possibly today.

A report in cotton circles said Liverpool merchants and importers of American cotton would reduce future importations and ruship to this country some of the better grades of American cotton now held abroad in warehouses. This report was not generally believed, for it was contended that the British could do much better by converting the cotton into goods and then selling the goods. Yesterday's reports of cotton cleared for export to Europe included 11,593 bales for Great Britain out of Galveston and 26,740 bales for France from New Orleans and Savannah.

The steadiness of French francs was attributed to Paris reports that a consortium of American banks and banking houses would take over and offer in this market a considerable quantity of the new French internal loan. Inquiry among leading banking firms here failed to substantiate this report in whole, although it was said several firms probably would arrange to transmit orders for the new bonds. Some bankers believe $50,000,000 of these bonds could be marketed here, but it was insisted there would be no underwriting.

The loan is to be of unlimited amount, to pay 5 per cent. interest on the issuing price of par, and to mature in sixty years. The bonds will be in denominations of 100 francs and interest will be payable semi-annually, May 1 and Nov. 1. The bonds are to be redeemed at maturity at 150 per cent. of par, and there are to be semi-annual drawings Sept. 16 and March 16, also at 150 per cent. of par.

Belgium Considers Similar Loan.

A similar loan is being considered by Belgium. Private reports received here said the Belgian Finance Minister shortly would request authorization for a new internal loan for 2,500,000,000 francs. It is understood this loan also will have a drawing attraction at a high figure. It was brought to light yesterday that France is making efforts to reduce her floating debt in this market. A leading banker said that in the past year this debt had been reduced from about $250,000,000 to less than $100,000,000. This banker believed moneys accruing to France from the sale of internal bonds here would be used further to reduce this floating debt.

The influence of the collapse of the foreign exchange market was evident in the Chicago grain and meat market. The local cotton market sold off at the start and continued heavy during most of the day, but before the close it rallied slightly above Wednesday's prices. The Chicago market, however, fell abruptly at the start, and although there was some slight recovery from the maximum declines, closing prices were still well under those of the day before.

The contention that "greater production" of commodities will reduce the cost of living was viewed from a new angle by bankers here yesterday. It was emphasized that as far as the United States is concerned, the fall in exchange, which is expected to greatly reduce our exports of all kinds of goods and commodities to Europe, will have the same effect as a great expansion in production.

Expect Drop in Living Costs.

It was believed that production will be slower to contract than exports, which will serve to increase the supply of goods of all sorts for American consumption. In this way, many expect, living costs will be brought down sooner than generally was expected a short time ago.

It is felt in some places, however, that the contraction in exports also will tend to correct the exchanges at a not far distant date. As evidence of this, sterling balances for delivery next Aug. 1 were sold yesterday at the rate of $3.50 to the pound. One large importing house, which will bring over considerable quantities of goods during the Spring and Summer, for which it will have to make settlement Aug. 1, paid this price for a rather large block of sterling for August delivery yesterday, and it was said other importing houses were making inquiry for similar accommodation.

The money market yesterday showed no ease in conditions. The renewal rate for demand loans on the Stock Exchange was fixed at 17 per cent., the highest renewal rate since the panic days of 1908, and after the renewal was established the rate rose to 20 per cent., at which figure it remained for the rest of the day. This high figure was considered especially significant of the extreme tightness of general money conditions, as it is understood there are to be no Government withdrawals of funds from local banks today.

he got the impression from Lord Grey that Great Britain would prefer the Johnson amendment, giving the United States six votes, to the Lenroot reservation, under which the United States would refuse to be bound by decisions participated in by the colonies.

"I don't think Great Britain cares now many votes we have," he replied, "but she does not want to risk internal troubles by allowing her colonies to be disfranchised in the league."

Doesn't Know Wilson's View.

President Wilson's attitude on the Grey letter is something about which Mr. Hitchcock said he had "no idea." He was asked concerning a report that the President had written him a letter on the subject of reservations.

"I have had a number of communications from the White House, but have received none on the general proposition of the treaty," he said. "I have written the President several times on specific points, and have had replies from him. I have no idea as to his attitude on the Grey letter, though I have a very clear idea as to his attitude toward my engaging in negotiations on the reservations."

"Has there been any change that you know of in the President's attitude on reservations?"

"I don't think I can tell you that."

Mr. Hitchcock then went on to state that he has "never felt that either Great Britain or France would send a protest on reservations, if acceptances were left in acquiescence. There was danger so long as the preamble of the resolution of ratification required specific acceptance in writing."

This point is one on which Mr. Hitchcock and Mr. Lodge agree. In the recent bipartisan conferences, Senator Lodge agreed to modification of the preamble so that a failure to file an objection to the reservations would indicate their acceptance. The other day, in announcing that he would present the Lodge reservations to the Senate next week, after the treaty had been taken up, Mr. Lodge said the preamble would be altered from its original form, adding that it had never satisfied him. The fact is that Mr. Lodge has been constantly in rather close touch with those in the French and British Governments who were qualified to forecast how those Governments would view American reservations, and he knew that the provision for affirmative acceptance would cause trouble.

Continuing his discussion of the Grey incident, Senator Hitchcock said he thought the British diplomat's letter was written primarily for "home consumption" that Viscount Grey wished to allay the growing hostility in England toward the United States, and that the effect of the letter on this would not be very great.

"It was a very extraordinary thing for a British official to come out in the papers that way," said Mr. Hitchcock. "Lord Grey did it for a purpose. He could not do it here. He observed the proprieties while in this country. It has the appearance of being done to placate British feeling against the United States. I do not consider it a discourtesy to this country.

"The letter has been magnified beyond its importance. As far as its influence on Senators is concerned, I do not find that it has changed any Democrats."

Insists It Is Home Question.

Mr. Hitchcock said that the fact should not be lost sight of that no matter how many well-intentioned efforts were made elsewhere to help the Senate ratify the treaty, by indicating a willingness to take almost any terms, the decisions involved in reservations were the affair of the United States. The question of obligation under Article X., for instance, he said, could be settled for the Senate and the American people only by themselves.

"Do you think the treaty will be ratified by the Senate?" Mr. Hitchcock was asked.

"I do not know," he said. "There is a good deal of division of sentiment among Democrats, and we can tell better as to the final outcome after our meeting on Saturday. Many Senators favor a compromise, but not very many are in favor of a surrender."

"How are Democrats going to answer the charge that those who oppose the Lodge reservations are more English than the English?"

"That answers itself. We have been against the Lodge reservations because we wished the United States to enter the League of Nations whole-heartedly."

While Mr. Hitchcock's return set under way Democratic preparations for the new treaty discussion, the Republican irreconcilables began to consider what measures they would adopt to beat the treaty. Some of them favor a filibuster against Senator Lodge's motion to suspend Rule 13. But at a meeting today, ten irreconcilables is was decided to postpone definite formulation of a program until Saturday. The irreconcilables do not wish to make their plans until they know definitely what Mr. Lodge is going to do.

Mr. Lodge said today he had not determined all the details of procedure. He did not yet know, he said, whether he would present the Lodge reservations in practically their original form, with a changed preamble, or whether he would offer them in the form of the modified draft partially agreed to by the bi-partisan conference. Some Republicans have strongly advised him to the latter course, on the ground that it would show his willingness to accept certain modifications and would strengthen his position when the Article X. and Monroe Doctrine reservations came up and he announced that he could not accept any change in them.

It became reasonably certain today that Mr. Lodge would not attempt to impose closure during the treaty debate unless it is prolonged unduly. Two proposals for modification of the Senate's closure rule, offered by Senators Kellogg and Curtis, were referred to a sub-committee of the Rules Committee, which, it was stated, had no intention of reporting any modifications while the treaty debate was on. Hence if closure is sought to be applied, it will require the invocation of the present elaborate rule, which takes a two-thirds vote.

President's Influence May Be Felt.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 (Associated Press)—Indications today that the influence of President Wilson might again be felt in the Senate controversy developed an angle full of interesting possibilities, but there was nothing to reveal how active a part he might play when the fight is renewed in the open. It became known that he had been in communication indirectly with some Democratic Senators, and the Republicans heard a report, which Senator Hitchcock declined to discuss, that a letter setting forth the Executive's views on compromise reservations had been sent to the Democratic leader.

Some Senators believe that the reported letter from the President to Senator Hitchcock may be laid before the Democratic conference on Saturday and may have an important bearing on the trend of the treaty fight. In Democratic quarters, however, there was no confirmation of the report and the White House remained silent regarding the President's probable course.

BAKER IN MEDAL DISPUTE.

Ordered Decoration for Nitrate Contractor, Overruling Board.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Secretary Baker awarded a Distinguished Service Medal to D. O. Jackling of Salt Lake City, after the Board of Awards had ruled that such an award could not be made legally. Colonel Thomas M. Spaulding, a member of the board, today told a House Investigating Committee. Jackling had contracts for the construction of the Government nitrate plant at Nitro, W. Va., and sublet the contract, Colonel Spaulding said. Mr. Baker overruled the Board, awarded the Distinguished Service Medal and asked the Board to write a suitable citation, the Colonel said.

Only one recommendation of an award, that of Brig. Gen. Samuel McRoberts, was disapproved by Secretary Baker, Colonel Spaulding said, adding that no reasons were given for the action.

General March "steered clear" of any recommendations for awards, Colonel Spaulding said.

"Too many officers and high-brows working for the War Department received medals and very few soldiers who did the actual fighting," Representative Bland, Republican, Indiana, commented.

BAN ON COTTON STIRS BRITISH

asks every patriotic man and woman to lend to the State the gold they have. Your watch chain, your ring, your sleeve links, your bag purses, cigarette cases, match boxes, your gold dinner service—all these things are dross. They are unproductive. They earn nothing for you. They advance no single interest of the State. Many of them are duplicates. Many are seldom used. Few have that intimate sentimental value which can only be foregone with tears.

"Between us in all the homes of this country we have gold enough to liquidate our American debt, to pay off our foreign creditor. The Daily Express does not suggest that all these gold trinkets and gewgaws should be surrendered to the State without equivalent. What we propose is that every one should be encouraged to surrender gold in exchange for its equivalent value in a Government security.

"Having secured this gold we could pay off with it our debt to America. Having done that the adverse exchange now crippling and impoverishing us in every way would right itself. The pound sterling would again be worth $5. Instead of owing all these millions to America, we should owe them to our own people. In place of a crippling debt we should create an asset."

Walter Leaf, Chairman of the London County, Westminster and Parrs Bank, a leading financial authority, speaking at a meeting of his bank today, referred to the need of strict economy, mainly on brandy, rum, port and champagne. He added:

"It is a scandal that when every one should be earnestly doing his best to put the national balance sheet straight, we should during 1919 have imported no less than £26,695,000 worth of foreign wines and spirits. It is an increase over 1918 of £16,500,000, all dead loss. It would not be an overestimate to say that of the sum which last year represented our addition to our foreign indebtedness, at least one-third, perhaps one-half, might have been saved if we had been content to live in comfort and eschew mere vulgar ostentation."

Banks' Action Here Approved.

LONDON, Feb. 5 (Associated Press).—Reports from Washington regarding possible action on the international financial situation were eagerly read here today, as was a report from New York that some of the banks there have discontinued the discount of dollar bills against the export of merchandise because of the drop in exchange. The reported action of the banks created satisfaction, as it would mean that fewer goods would be sold to Great Britain. The stopping of the importation of articles of luxury is strongly advocated, and it was reported that further orders for this class of goods recently placed in the United States had been canceled.

Drastic reduction of importations of manufactured luxuries from America is advocated by Arthur M. Samuel, Member of Parliament for Surrey, in the course of an interview published in The Manchester Guardian. Mr. Samuel also deprecates the "squandering" of money at holiday resorts on the Continent and the importation of wines.

The worst effect of the exchange situation is felt on the Continent, he says, because payments from countries there must be made through London.

"This prevents them from buying raw material and foods from America, without which Europe cannot be put on its feet again," he says. "The worst phase of the situation is near, and the whole of Europe is being pressed toward starvation and ruin."

Opinion in financial circles seems to be that an international conference may decide upon the granting of credits for European countries to set the wheels of commerce in motion, the guarantors agreeing to abstain from unnecessary expenses and to carry out drastic financial reforms themselves. One of the principal objectives counted as necessary is undoubtedly the expansion of exports to America. This aim is being fostered officially.

The exports of Bradford (the wool centre) to the United States during January were nearly £1,000,000 above January of last year, while the President of the Board of Trade, in a speech yesterday, declared that in a few weeks the value of the export trade of this country would be in excess of the value of its imports.

TO PLACE FRENCH LOAN IN DOLLARS HERE

Estimates That as Much as $2,000,000,000 of Bonds Will Find a Market.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—A portion of the new French loan will be floated in the United States through a consortium of bankers and will be placed in dollars, with a view to easing the exchange situation, it is learned here. These bonds will bear 5 per cent. interest as in France, being redeemable, with a 50 per cent. bonus within sixty years.

It is understood the amount of bonds to be placed in the United States has not been fixed, as estimates of American financiers who have been consulted have varied considerably as to the total subscriptions probably obtainable. Some of these estimates have run as high as $2,000,000,000.

Subscriptions will also be received at London in pounds sterling on the same terms as those given United States financiers.

EDWARDS TO CARRY DRY FIGHT TO NATION

At Cummings Dinner Jersey Governor Says He Will Make It Convention Issue.

SENATOR LODGE ASSAILED

Mr. Cummings Blames Him and Fellow Republicans for "Haggling Over Treaty."

Announcement of his intention to carry his fight against prohibition to the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco, regardless of who might oppose him, was made last night by Governor Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey at the dinner given by the National Democratic Club for Homer S. Cummings, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, at the Hotel Commodore.

Governor Edwards referred humorously to the attacks made upon Mr. Cummings and himself by William J. Bryan following their joint presence at a dinner to Governor Edwards in Newark, N. J., and said he did not wish his remarks to be construed as committing Mr. Cummings to his program. He declared he did not consider that the issue was prohibition, but a matter of protection to the principles of State rights and home rule, upon which, he said, this Government was founded.

Mr. Cummings in his speech attacked Senator Lodge and the Republican majority in the United States Senate for having made the League of Nations a partisan matter, and asserted that the Democratic Senators continued to stand for ratification of the Peace Treaty as it is or for the adoption of reservations which will not make resubmission necessary.

Assails Republican Congress.

The Republican Party had been shown to be entirely without constructive leadership, Mr. Cummings said, and added that the failure to obtain needed constructive legislation on many important domestic matters was the price the people of the United States were paying for having elected a Republican Congress. Mr. Cummings also found considerable amusement in the Committee on Policies and Platform named by Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, with a total membership of 171. "If the committee ever meets," he said, "it will be necessary to call out the militia to preserve order."

Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, the third on the list of speakers, gave personal credit to President Wilson for having seen in advance of the naval staffs of the allied nations the necessity of shutting the German submarines off the seas as the only successful method of combatting them. The mine barrage across the north Sea, Secretary Daniels said, was the American Navy's effective answer to the President's suggestion.

The Democratic viewpoint on the controversy between Secretary Daniels and Rear Admiral Sims was revealed immediately after the former's speech, manifestations of disapproval coming from all parts of the ballroom when John M. Riehle, the toastmaster, declared that Admiral Sims was the only man who had opposed the North Sea barrage, which Secretary Daniels had just stated President Wilson suggested. Mr. Riehle said:

"Secretary Daniels spoke of the great barrage laid across the North Sea. Admirals Mayo and Wilson and all the members of the Naval Board favored it. Admiral Sims was the only one who opposed it."

Pronounced hissing followed this statement.

Governor Smith Attacks Drys.

Despite the storm, which kept many away, more than 1,000 were present at the dinner and gave Mr. Cummings an enthusiastic reception. Governor Alfred E. Smith, who was to have been one of the speakers, was detained at Albany by a slight illness, but sent a message in which he also attacked the prohibition amendment. The Governor said:

"Let the Democratic Party preach the doctrine that America must never lose sight of her God-given mission in the world to provide a government of free men, enjoying the priceless heritage of liberty guaranteed to all by law and offering to the downtrodden and poor of every land a harbor of refuge where opportunity knocks at the door of the rich and poor alike.

"Do not forget the time-honored Democratic doctrine that the Government is most effective which governs the least. This precept of Democratic faith in the recent past has been grievously and wilfully sinned against, when in the name of democracy there was imposed upon 100,000,000 free people without asking their direct consent a restriction to their personal liberty which Russia in her palmiest days never dreamt of."

Governor Edwards declared that the question involved in the prohibition amendment went far beyond the question of prohibition. "We as Democrats can only win next Fall by presenting a united front. The past has gone beyond recall, but out of the past a great national issue has grown, and that issue is nothing less than the issue of State rights and personal liberty.

"It is not a question whether liquor is abolished or not, for I am a total abstainer, and it matters nothing to me personally. But, notwithstanding Mr. Bryan, I am intensely interested in this question. I claim that the people have not spoken on this subject."

Pleads for State Rights.

"There is no middle ground. The morality or immorality of John Barleycorn cannot hide this one great issue, which must go to the people next November, in my judgment. It is the most crucial question in the life of this nation, for, if the Federal Government may subvert the doctrine of State rights and without a mandate from the people enter into our homes with a bureaucratic system of office holders and over lordship, the theory of constitutional government and all the rights incident to home rule and local State Government are destroyed.

"To me, this situation is a political sacrilege, and I purpose to carry the fight to San Francisco, regardless of what any man or any set of men may personally think, so as to bring about a popular restatement of the doctrine of State rights and popular local home rule, upon whihc our fathers founded this government."

Mr. Cummins received great applause when he charged the Republicans with playing politics with the Peace Treaty and with their failure to pass needed domestic legislation because of jealousy of a Democratic President. "For the present," he said, "we are enduring with what patience we may, an interlude of Republican incapacity.

Blames Lodge for Treaty Course.

"Senator Lodge set forth a year ago to make the treaty of peace a partisan issue. He has never deviated from that course. While the Peace Conference was in session he exerted all his efforts to create dissension between the President and the representatives of the Allied Governments.

"The Democratic leadership in the Senate has, at all times, been upon solid ground. It had stood for unqualified ratification. When that became impossible, it has stood for such reservations as would preserve the spirit of the document, and make its resubmission unnecessary. If Republican leadership, blind to the overwhelming necessity for an honorable and speedy peace, drifts this issue ultimately into the arena of politics, the Democratic Party will unfalteringly take up the gage of battle. Upon that issue, we shall have the support of the moral and spiritual forces of the nation. We shall have the support of the churches of the land. We shall have the support of the business interests which are now suppering from the delay in the restoration of the peace of the world. We shall have the support of the laboring men of American who do not want to be driven again into war; and we shall have the support of the women of the United States."

Pokes Fun at Hays Committee.

Mr. Cummings caused laughter by his reference to advertisements of the Republican National Committee offering prizes of $10,000 for suggestions for a platform. "And now I am informed," he said, "that Chairman Hays has appointed a committee of 171, consisting of Bull Moosers, Standpatters, Taftites, Rooseveltians, Irreconcilables, Mild Reservationists, Wild Reservationists, Ratificationists, Militarists, Anti-Militarists, Economists, Liberal Appropriationists, Governors, Laborites, Capitalists, former campaign managers, and seventeen women, to go upon a voyage of discovery to ascertain what Republican principles are. If the Committee of 171 ever meets, it will be necessary to call out the militia to preserve order."

Mr. Cummings said that no one doubted that a Democratic Senate would have ratified the Peace Treaty and that there would not have been the present situation of the United States haggling over the terms of a treaty to which the rest of the world has assented.

Quotes Speech by President.

Secretary Daniels, in giving credit to President Wilson for determining the method to cope with the German submarines, told a hitherto unrelated incident.

"You must shut up the hornets in their nest," the President was quoted by Secretary Daniels as having said in a quarterdeck speech to the officers of the battleship Pennsylvania early in the war, "for you can never end the submarine peril if you let them out and have to devote yourselves to chasing them all over the ocean."

Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany, who returned from French Lick, Ind., for the gathering, was delayed by the storm, and came in after the dinner was nearly over. His entrance was greeted with applause.

Among those on the dais were District Attorney Edward Swann, Charles B. Alexander, Frederick A. Wallis, Mrs. George Bass, Frederick B. Lynch, Abram I. Elkus, Robert S. Hudspeth, Norman E. Mack, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Senator Key Pittman, Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President; William W. Farley, Democratic State Chairman; Mayor John F. Hylan, Martin T. Manton, the Rt. Rev. M. J. Lavelle, John H. McCooey, Miss Elisabeth Marbury, Mrs. John Sherwin Crosby, Controller Charles L. Craig, and William L. Saunders. About one quarter of the thousand persons present were women.

WOMEN DEMOCRATS DIVIDED

Miss Marbury, Tammany Ally, Reveals Opposition to New Body.

The serious opposition to the newly formed Women Democrats of America, organized on Wednesday at a meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria under the direction of Miss Margaret Vale, exists among women allied with Tammany was made evident last night when Miss Elisabeth Marbury issued a statement disclaiming any connection with the organization.

Miss Marbury, who has been slated for selection as one of the four delegates at large from New York State to the Democratic national convention, was elected an active Vice Chairman of the Women Democrats. Her statement said:

"Miss Elisabeth Marbury disclaims any association with the organization planned by Miss Margaret Vale and known as the Women Democrats of America.

"Miss Marbury's name was used without her authority as an indorser of the movement despite the fact that she had requested it removed from the proposed list of officers and members at the meeting held on Wednesday at the Waldorf-Astoria."

Miss Vale said last evening that the election of Miss Marbury had been intended as a compliment and that she was at a loss to understand her disavowal of the movement.

ELECT TWO DELEGATIONS.

South Carolina Republicans Will Contest for Convention Seats.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 5.—Two sets of delegates were elected today to the Chicago National Convention by the Republican State Convention. Both whites and negroes were included in the two delegations which will contest the right to sit in the convention.

The Rev. George F. Mills of Spartanburg, was elected State Chairman to succeed Joseph W. Talbert.

Milwaukee Club Expels Berger.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb 5.—Charging that Victor L. Berger, editor of The Milwaukee Leader, twice ousted from Congress on his conviction of violating the Espionage act, has been a "preacher of sedition and disloyalty," the Milwaukee Press Club has dropped him from membership. The report of the Board of Governors recommending his expulsion was adopted by the club by a vote of 18 to 2.

WOOD UNDECIDED ABOUT RESIGNING

Wants Leaders to Sound Sentiment Further on Advisability of Leaving Army.

MANAGERS' VIEWS DIFFER

Some Favor His Retaining Command—Butler and Johnson Booms Progressing.

Whether Major Gen. Leonard Wood should resign from the army in order to devote his time exclusively to furthering his candidacy for the Republican Presidential nomination, or whether he should wait until his actual nomination at Chicago in June before taking this step is the problem that is causing General Wood's campaign managers more uneasiness than anything else at present. Representative Norman J. Gould, Eastern manager of the Wood campaign, returned from Chicago yesterday with the information that although the matter was under discussion at the recent conference of managers there, no decision was reached.

Increasing criticism of General Wood for not resigning has convinced some of his managers that he should not delay any longer, but come out with a clear-cut statement setting forth his position and taking the people into his confidence. As to the political expediency of the General's resigning, the Wood camp is about equally divided. Several of his managers have advised him not to take any action at this time on the theory that the criticism he is receiving is emanating almost entirely from his political rivals, and that for him to enter into a controversy as to the wisdom of his maintaining his present silence on the matter is just what his rival candidates for the nomination want.

Two Opinions on Resignation.

Should General Wood resign, some of his managers point out, he would lose the advantage he now maintains by speaking as an official of the United States Army on the question of law and order. Those who have advised him to resign argue that a serious situation might develop at any time along the lines of the recent Gary (Ind.) labor dispute whereby it would be necessary for the General to take a definite stand on labor and the right of the United States Government to take extreme measures to put down a labor upheaval.

These friends of the General point out that he may not emerge from another Gary situation as he did last Fall, when the workingmen considered that he performed a fine job, and even wanted him to run for Mayor of Gary. If the General is no longer connected with the army, these friends assert, he will be in a position to meet all issues squarely and make many friends on both sides. The General himself is said to be in as much of a quandary as his managers, and has instructed them to continue to sound out sentiment on the subject.

Representative Gould said that as a result of the Chicago conference, at which reports from all over the country were received and discussed, the national situation never looked better. He said the managers were well pleased with the reports received from Maine, while the situation in Connecticut, which looked alarming last week, when there was a prospect of National Committeeman John T. King raising trouble, had been smoothed out, and that the prospect was excellent for General Wood receiving the delegation from that State. Mr. Gould declared that the report that James J. McGraw, National Committeeman from Oklahoma, had resigned from active work on the Wood Campaign Committee was not true.

No Fight in New York Districts.

Mr. Gould declared that it was decided at the Chicago conference not to make a fight for delegates in any of the New York Congressional districts.

"Of course," said Mr. Gould, "we hope that most of the New York delegates will be for General Wood at the convention, but we have decided not to mix in any of the factional fights in the State. In some counties where there is a fight on the local Republican organization we have been asked to favor one side or the other, but we will steer clear of both factions. We hope to have General Wood clubs started everywhere, but they will be started as the result of spontaneous sentiment for the candidate and not for the purpose of taking advantage of a local situation."

John R. Davies, executive head of the Nicholas Murray Butler campaign committee, declared last night at the headquarters in the Hotel Commodore that reports so far received from all sections of the country indicate a steadily growing sentiment in favor of Mr. Butler's nomination. Ben E. Chapin of Newark, N. J., editor of the "Railroad Employe," sent a letter to Mr. Butler's mangaer yesterday in which he said:

"I have just returned from a trip through the West, during which I found organized labor enthusiastic in the support of Mr. Butler because of his clean-cut utterances relative to labor and capital. Mr. Butler's strength with labor is undoubtedly greater than that of any other man who has been mentioned for the Presidency, either Republican or Democrat."

Call for Butler Clubs.

It was announced at the Butler headquarters that G. Hinman Barrett, Director of the National Columbia Alumni Nicholas Murray Butler League, had received many communications from Columbia men asking for the formation of "Butler for President" Clubs in Buffalo, Rochester, Troy, Syracuse, Erie, and Elmira, N. Y.; Newark and Paterson, N. J.; Hartford, Conn.; Wheeling, W. Va.; Philadelphia and Baltimore. Among the letters received indorsing the candidacy of Mr. Butler was one from Archdeacon R. H. Brooks, Rector of St. Paul's Church, Albany, who wrote: "Nicholas Murray Butler is the man of the hour. He stands out as the one great American to lead the country out of the mire at this time."

At the headquarters of Senator Hiram W. Johnson at the Hotel Pennsylvania, Manager Angus McSween, who has returned from a western trip, declared that Johnson sentiment was crystallizing rapidly into organized activity as the result of Mr. Johnson's speech-making tour. He said that there was a strong working Johnson organization in Missouri and that his managers there were confident of winning a "satisfactory share of the delegates."

William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, has written an open letter to Herbert C. Hoover asking him if he is in favor "of repealing or emasculating the national enforcement act in behalf of beer and wine." In his letter Mr. Anderson said:

"You are being interrogated by the New York League because a New York anti-prohibition paper is furnishing most of the motive power behind your candidacy."

PLEDGE DELEGATES TO OWEN

Oklahoma Democrats Elect 40 and Indorse Wilson Administration.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Feb. 5.—Forty delegates with half a vote each were elected to the National Democratic Convention at San Francisco, pledged to support Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma for the Democratic Presidential nomination "until he is either nominated or releases them from further support," at the State Democratic Convention which adjourned here tonight. The convention indorsed President Wilson's Administration.

A resolution asking Governor Robertson to call a special session of the Legislature to ratify the constitutional woman suffrage amendment was adopted.

After the convention Senator Owen launched his candidacy when he declared: "My hat is in the ring," and that he was in the race to the end. Among the planks of his platform are repeal of the excess profits tax, the return to private ownership of the railroads, and the adoption of a national budget system.

DELEGATES UNINSTRUCTED.

Wisconsin Democrats Choose Davies to Head Them—Wilson Indorsed.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 5.—Joseph E. Davies of Madison, former National Democratic Committeeman from Wisconsin, today was nominated at a State conference to head the Wisconsin delegation to the Democratic National Convention. The delegates will go uninstructed. Those named today will, it is expected, be ratified at the election on April 6.

Resolutions were adopted commending the work of President Wilson in connection with the Peace Treaty and sympathising with the Chief Executive in his illness. National Chairman Cummings also was indorsed.

SAFE ROBBED ON BROADWAY

Detectives yesterday investigated the theft of bonds, money and jewelry worth $3,500 which were stolen on Wednesday between 4 and 6:30 P. M. from the personal safe of Charles N. Porcher, New York manager of the Pittsburgh Steel Company, in the offices of that company in the Equitable Building.

The safe was an old-fashioned one and had evidently been opened with a combination. The contents included two Belgian bonds of $1,000 each, ten shares of Standard Oil Stock, a $20 gold piece, and some heirlooms.

CHECK UP $257,813 IN NEWBERRY FUNDS

MORE CASH IN SAFETY BOXES

But It Is Shown That Labels Found Were Not Traced to the Senator's Agents.

Special to The New York Times.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 5.—Cash literally flowed through the Newberry headquarters into banks and safety deposit vaults during the Newberry primary campaign, according to the testimony of four bankers and two vault keepers before District Judge Sessions today.

The Government was able with the help of the bankers, to check up on $178,857.20 in one bank, with another bank carrying at one time a Newberry Campaign Committee account of $78,956. A part of this $78,956 was paid out up to Aug. 20, 1918, when, for some reason, the unexpected balance of some $55,000 to $60,000 was supposed to have been transferred to another bank, where Paul H. King did his banking, consolidating the two bank accounts.

Money was also shown to have been kept in safety deposit boxes, and the only evidence of the amounts hidden in boxes that could be obtained came from the testimony of one of the vault keepers, who said he frequently picked up "money bands" with the figures "$500" and "$1,000" thereon. These bands were supposed to have been torn from the money packages as the funds were used.

Bank accounts of Paul H. King and Charles N. Floyd, campaign managers, laid before the jury, showed that King opened an account with the Commonwealth Federal Savings Bank March 6, 1918, with $2,000. A total of $5,083 was deposited, and the entire account was withdrawn May 4. This account was in the name of "Paul King, Chairman."

Floyd Opened $11,286 Account.

Floyd opened an account with the Grand Rapids Commercial Savings Bank April 30, 1918, with a total deposit of $11,286 up to Nov. 5. Virtually all of these funds were withdrawn during that period.

Albert R. Moore of the Commonwealth Federal Savings Bank, Detroit, testified that the Newberry Senatorial Committee through King opened an account with that bank March 6, 1918, with deposits of $10,000 on Sept. 5, and $53,456 on a later date. The deposits are supposed to cover the transfers which the Union Trust Company, which Frank W. Blair, the President, also under indictment, says it made for the Commonwealth Bank, which is claimed to be a part of the $178,857.20 the Government found record of in the Commonwealth Bank.

The Government maintains that the financial affair of the committee was badly handled, according to the records, and although hundreds of withdrawals of various amounts were read to the jury, there was no way of tracing the funds which went into safety deposit boxes.

Attorneys for the defense freely admitted the bank records as they were presented.

One significant fact developed which countered on the claims of the defense made during the early part of the day. The last check account shows that money was deposited in the bank in behalf of the committee as late as Sept. 9, 1918, with the final withdrawal Dec. 19, 1918. The defense holds that the Newberry committee went out of business before the close of the primaries, Aug. 27, 1918.

Frank Meyers, master key vault keeper at the Old National Bank, Detroit, the last witness to testify, gave Newberry a hopeful ray of light when he said in answer to Littleton: "Many Detroit automobile manufacturers do their banking business through the safety deposit vault methods and it is not uncommon for many of them to come in regularly and use our rooms, getting money out of the vault to make up payrolls."

Newberry Is Jubilant.

Newberry was jubilant. "That's the blow that knocked out the Government," he said.

Meyers knew nothing about the finding of money bands in rooms used by the Newberry committee, nor did he even know they kept money in the vault. He said he had no knowledge of the committee's work, in fact couldn't remember much about the committee except that B. Frank Emery and Harry O. Turner came to the vault regularly.

James Gorsline, also master keyman at the Old National Bank vault, had a distinct recollection of refusing Harry O. Turner the right to enter the safety deposit box, which is rented by Emery May 9, 1918. This was about the time the Government charges that money began leaking out of the banks into the hidden places, even into the private rooms of the committee headquarters.

The Government continued to link up the Detroit and Grand Rapids headquarters offices with the work of the field agents. Allen K. Moore of Grand Rapids gave a complete view of the work of the committee through his connection with the case. He traveled over Michigan for twenty weeks at a salary of $75 a week and expenses, engaging organizations and workers to stir up enthusiasm for Newberry. He said he paid out money to hundreds for various kinds of work and did business through nearly a score of respondents. Floyd, he said, sent him to King and King put him on the payroll.

Moore denied he had any idea he was doing wrong when Martin W. Littleton put him on record as to his good intentions in the work.

"I gathered petitions, got signatures, visited railway men's meetings in the company of George R. Murray, head of the Railway Men's Association; paid his expenses, and talked to the crowds to get up Newberry enthusiasm. Murray was on his annual round installing officers and doing other official duties as the head of the organization. He was boosting Newberry."

Attorney Dailey asked: "Did you do all this for pay and was it to help Newberry by stirring up enthusiasm in his behalf."

"That's what I was doing, helping to elect Newberry."

Moore said he was paid a total of $2,750 for his work and expenses. He gave $900 to other workers, he said.

The defense bitterly fought against every movement made by the prosecution and offered many motions for the records which were denied.

At one time when testimony was going in as to Floyd's bank account Attorney Barnard of Pawpaw, one of the grouped counsel who watches his client's interest from the side seats, jumped to his feet.

"I protest the admittance of this hearsay evidence."

"Take an exception," said Judge Sessions calmly, and the case went on.

The Government will continue the introduction of testimony Friday relative to the bank accounts of the Campaign Committee.

DEMOCRATS OPPOSE UNIVERSAL TRAINING

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—A call for a caucus of the Democratic members of the House on next Monday, to consider universal military training and other matters that may figure in the coming campaign, was issued today.

Democratic House leaders assert that they intend to commit the party against compulsory military training, as a policy, and in that way expect to meet the attitude of those Republican House leaders who are opposing such an expansion of the military forces on the ground of economy.

In the opinion of several Democratic leaders, the country is opposed, not only to compulsory training, but to a vast expenditure for the military and naval establishments. They say they think that sentiment in the country is favorable to a League of Nations, which will bring about disarmament and make unnecessary large appropriations for military purposes. The Democratic politicians of the House plan to place the party on record in favor of a League of Nations and against compulsory military training in the belief that it will strike a popular note in the West and South, which made possible the election of President Wilson.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—Ten gunmen in evening dress held up a dance in a fashionable Paris street last night, and eight of the number got off with all the jewels of the women and the pocketbooks of the men. The raid had been planned and was carried out with the finish of a moving picture drama. When the dance was at its height, ten men came in and joined the dancers. It was a free and easy place and partners were easily procurable.

After some time the men worked round to separate parts of the room and at a signal from the leader pulled out automatic pistols and covered the dancers. They controlled the whole room and no one could move. Leisurely they proceeded to work. While five kept guard three relieved the guests in turn of all their valuables and two carried the booty to a waiting automobile. Among their captures was a fur coat valued at 50,000 francs.

When they had almost finished their work the police arrived. They had been summoned by one of the dancers, a girl, who had managed to slip down the back stairs when the holdup began and who had run in her ball dress down the street till she had found a policeman. Eight of the men managed to escape, but two were arrested. The dancers then made their way home, in many cases minus cabfares. The police expect to be able today to arrest the remainder of the gang and recover the booty.

M'ADOO AND HOOVER TICKET PROPOSED

BRYAN IS NOT IN FAVOR

Conservative Southern Democrats Reported to be Turning to Attorney General Palmer.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Democratic politics is beginning to liven up a bit, as much as is possible with President Wilson still silent as to a third term.

The general opinion here is that the party will not be dominated by Mr. Bryan and will not nominate a radical upon a radical platform. Southern Democrats appear to be more conservative than usual. Sentiment among strong Southern members of Congress seems to be turning toward Attorney General Palmer.

Several Democrats close to the Administration were urging today the nomination of ex-Secretary McAdoo for President and Herbert Hoover for Vice President. They said that such a ticket would present a strong appeal to the country, that Mr. McAdoo would find favor with organized labor and that Mr. Hoover would satisfy business men and the women voters.

Mr. Hoover, in the opinion of some astute Democratic leaders, does not possess sufficient strength to head the ticket, because of opposition to him among the farmers. The combination, the leaders thought, would enter the race with a large bulk of people in the country favorably inclined toward it.

Representative Claude Kitchin is opposed to Mr. Hoover for the head of the ticket. "First he offered himself to the Republicans, then to the Democrats, and if he is not taken up by either of them, will form a third party," said Mr. Kitchin.

Republican Women to Celebrate.

The Woman's Republican Club, of which Mrs. James Griswold Wentz is President, will give a luncheon at Delmonico's on Lincoln's Birthday, to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of its organization. The principal speakers will be Senator James W. Wadsworth, Nicholas Murray Butler, the Rev. Ernest M. Stires, Mrs. Douglas Robinson and Ogden L. Mills.

TAKES GOLD FROM MINT IN HOLLOW FALSE LEG

DENVER, Col., Feb. 5.—Orville Harrington, 41 years old, a skilled worker in the Denver mint, was arrested early today by Rolland K. Goddard, chief of the local branch of the Federal Secret Service on a charge of having robbed the Denver Mint of gold bullion valued at more than $100,000. A search of Harrington's home revealed the gold bars buried and hidden in various parts of the premises, and all of it was recovered, according to Goddard.

Harrington, according to the officers, carried the bars out of the mint concealed in a hollow false limb which he wore. Because of the unusual means taken to get the gold out of the mint the officers were unable to trace the source of the thefts for several days. Harrington was taken into custody as he was coming off shift, a search of his person disclosing a $1,400 bar of gold hidden in the false leg.

The thefts which began two weeks ago had been traced to the refinery and watch was set over all employes of that department. The list of suspects narrowed down to three and watch was placed on the homes of the suspected ones. Tuesday night, officers who were watching the Harrington home saw Harrington bury a bar in the orchard and subsequent search of the orchard disclosed four other ingots. The search of the house early today netted fourteen other bars which had been buried in the cellar.

PLANS TO HOUSE 85,000 WORKERS

It is absolutely essential, for instance, that the New York Central Railroad tracks are either elevated or withdrawn from Eleventh Avenue. As it is now, and I have been over the district carefully, it is positively unsafe for children in this district until the railroad tracks leave the street level, and should this not be accomplished the Save New York Committee intends to see that proper development is made elsewhere, probably in Long Island City.

"This represents the first broad movement to improve the housing situation in New York. Businesses are moving here, land for office and factory is being bought up and buildings are going up rapidly, but while the population is rapidly increasing, composed mainly of working people, tenement construction was never so dead as it is today. This is a problem which must be solved in a large way with an eye toward the future, for cost of production necessarily must increase if rents are high and living conditions are congested."

GALES AND SNOW SWEEP THE COAST

Brooklyn Favored.

Brooklyn suffered less than did Manhattan with respect to surface cars for the snow did less harm to overhead trolley wires than to third-rail slots. A few outlying lines there, such as the Avenue C shuttle, the Flatlands shuttle, and the Myrtle Avenue line east from Dry Harbor Road, were suspended that all available forces might join the fight for clear rails in more congested districts.

Trolley service in both Queens and Richmond was very nearly nil. The New York and Queens road, running to Jamaica and nearby points, was practically tied up, and the New York and North Shore, operating to Whitestone, Bayside, and other places, has been at a standstill since 10 o'clock Wednesday night.

The Long Island Railroad suffered badly. Snow plows and extra engines did their best, but trains generally were late and slow-moving, and crowds of tardy commuters reached their homes only after a variety of difficulties.

Staten Islanders for the most part perforce stayed away from Manhattan. Plows opened a way for two of the five bus line routes, those between Concord and Port Richmond and St. George and Westerly. High water forced the suspension of trolley service on the St. George-Port Richmond road and the steam lines of the Richmond Light and Railroad Company were hard hit, so that the borough, already traffic-crippled by the suspension of the Midland service, faced very nearly a transportation blockade.

Throughout the five boroughs vehicular traffic, particularly heavy trucks, was badly hampered. Not only horse-drawn trucks, but heavy-duty motor conveyances were snowbound in outlying places or broke down oftimes, in the middle of busy streets and were abandoned.

The going was so bad in places that the news companies could not deliver newspapers and in others, notably Flushing, the big handling concerns could not send out milk trucks.

Street Cleaners Scarce.

A very real scarcity of labor confronted the Street Cleaning Department and extraordinary means, including a call upon former service men, followed a conference between Mayor Hylan and Street Cleaning Commissioner MacStay. The Board of Estimate authorized Mr. MacStay to pay unusually well for trucks and the pay of shovellers may be increased from the present rate of 50 cents an hour if things do not improve. The Knights of Columbus led in the appeal to former soldiers and sailors, and the Municipal Civil Service Commission wrote the Mayor that it was exhausting all means to recruit men and would undertake a publicity campaign.

Late last night many streets had become so slippery or high-piled with drifts that automobile traffic was all but suspended. Such hardy taxicab drivers as managed to keep going made it pay well, but some of the larger companies refused to send out cabs at any price.

Harlem was in particularly bad shape as midnight approached. No trolley cars were operating, except a shuttle service over Washington Bridge at 180th Street, and mid-Manhattan was suffering almost as severely. A statement issued by Job E. Hedges, receiver of the New York Railways Company, which operates the green cars, said:

Owing to the unprecedented severity of the present snowstorm, which has been the worst since the snowstorm of 1905, the lines of the New York Railways, in common with all of the other surface lines of Manhattan, have been unable to operate their customary service.

"The fine, dry snow, sifting into the conduits, has filled them up to such an extent that it is impossible to maintain electrical contact and operate the cars."

In the Yorkville section last night surface car traffic was disrupted, the crosstown, First, Second, Third, Fourth, and Lexington Avenue lines were out of business and snow was piling higher and higher.

Many courts in all parts of the city yesterday had to suspend, because judges, jurors, litigants or lawyers either were snow-bound or influenza-bound.

At 8:50 yesterday morning the automatic high tide gauge at Pier A, the Harbor Police Station, registered 8.23 feet above the mean low average, an increase of some four feet over the average high tide and a record for the thirty-three years that statistics have been kept, since 1886. Dr. James H. Scarr offered this explanation of the phenomenon:

"The high tide can be attributed to three causes. In the first place, with the storm centre in Southern New Jersey, there is a low barometer in this territory and higher pressure at sea. The effect of the air pressure on the middle of the ocean is to squeeze the water into a region of lesser pressure. Also the highest tide comes with the full moon. That was at 3:42 A. M. yesterday, but the neap tides continued this morning and will be about as high tomorrow morning. The third reason for the record tide is the strong northeast winds blowing from the sea toward shore. The wind in the vicinity of New York is blowing thirty miles per hour with a sixty-mile wind in Southern New Jersey."

Heavy Damage by Tide.

While a few complaints from lower Manhattan described cellars as flooded along South and West Streets, Coney Island and Rockaway Beach were having troubles and had spent a night of anxiety. Estimates of damages at these places ranged from $500,000 to $1,500,000. Coney Island, Manhattan Beach and Brighton Beach all were flooded continuously during the night, the great tide at moments arousing fears that the whole district would be carried away. At Brighton the Brighton Beach Hotel, the Parkway Baths, the Shelburne, Brighton Casino and dozens of smaller resorts were isolated in seas three feet deep and torrents rushed into cellars, putting out the fires.

Bathing pavilions, many of them large and costly structures, all the way to Sea Gate, were undermined and floated away, and hundreds of small bungalows, built near the water's edge, particularly at Manhattan Beach, drifted away, seaward. Coney Island Creek overran its banks and it was decided to be unsafe to operate trains on the elevated structures which cross it. The West End line maintained service only to the Bay Fiftieth Street station, and the Sea Beach line to the Eighty-sixth Street station. The flood prevented automobiles from operating, and homecomers had a bad time of it. The Brighton line managed to keep up one-track schedule all the way to Sea Gate, but its service was far from adequate. Some of the larger residences at Sea Gate were flooded, but the seawall there prevented the great damage of lesser tides in other years.

The Hotel Pasadena, a modern four-story structure at Rockaway Beach, was pounded to pieces by the tide at 7 o'clock yesterday morning and is a total loss. A big slice of the Knickerbocker Hotel there was washed away. Part of the Iron Pier at Seaside disappeared and bungalows, apartment houses, and miscellaneous structures fell prey to the waters.

The tide swept over the business part of Seabright, N. J., joined the ocean with the Shrewsbury River, undermined boulevards, damaged buildings in the heart of town and piled sand so high on the railroad tracks that traffic halted for hours. A new bulkhead saved the residence part of the town. Not a trolley wheel has turned in the town for two days, and last night it was using candles because the electric plant was flooded.

Wildwood, N. J., was cut off from rail communication with the mainland; the Anglesea fishing fleet was hurled inland in a splintered jumble. Atlantic City reported widespread damage from two days of storm and flood with the new $200,000 sea wall at Longport partly wrecked. Sections of the boardwalk there and at nearby resorts were carried off. Some cottages at Cape May were undermined, and others tumbled into the sea. Bulkheads and several houses made up the day's toll at Monmouth Beach and Galilee, while Long Branch, luckier than most of its coast neighbors, complained only of halted trolley service.

Part of an expensive retaining wall at Red Bank was washed away, and a few small houses went with it, while Sandy Hook was isolated from telephone and telegraph communication and hundreds of Government employes were unable to reach Fort Hancock because train service throughout the vicinity was stopped. Schools there were closed. Small boats were gathered in by the tide, wires were washed away, and traction in and about Perth Amboy was limping very badly. Trains were stalled in drifts at Matawan, and service on the Central to Freehold and East Long Branch ceased.

Elizabeth reported wire service crippled when the tide snapped off telegraph poles, and a consequent slowing of both trolley and train traffic.

An east wind swept the mounting tide into the Erie terminal in Jersey City, the water pouring into the ferry station and through the waiting room at daybreak. Sand bags saved the tube station from being flooded. Ferries stopped running till the flood receded late in the morning.

Schools were closed in Newark. Jitney buses tried to do the work of stalled trolley cars there, and street cleaners made some headway when the storm eased for a few hours only to become more intense again. Traffic was demoralized in New Brunswick, with many cars half buried in snowdrifts.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 5.—This city is buried under eighteen inches of snow as the result of the worst storm of the season, which is still raging. The public schools are closed and Vassar College practically isolated.

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—A northeast blizzard, which ran from 36 to 64 miles an hour, put southern New England under seven inches of snow before noon today. Transportation was crippled and city streets not yet cleared of recent snows were further blocked.

Fatalities Due to Storm.

PATERSON, N. J., Feb. 5.—Three fatalities resulted from the storm in this vicinity today. Father Francis Koch, head of the Franciscan Monastery at Butler, and known to the order throughout the United States, died of exhaustion returning from a trip to New York.

George W. Devoe, Sr., retired manufacturer of this city, and Mrs. M. A. Dilzer of Butler dropped dead in the snow.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 5.—The Rhode Island General Assembly was forced to cancel today's session, the transportation tieup making it impossible to get a quorum of members together. All Superior Court sessions were canceled at noon. All New York boat sailings from this city were halted.

MANY HARBOR MISHAPS.

Storm Cripples Steamer Service—Several Boats in Distress.

Yesterday's storm caused many harbor mishaps and the crippling of the Long Island Sound steamer service. Wireless calls for help came from two ocean-bound steamships. The tide was one of the highest on record. The harbor police and the coast guard cutters were busy all day. Fast in ice at the entrance to Long Island Sound or tied at piers waiting for clearer weather are many vessels. Tugboats spent most of yesterday trying to pound their way through ice fields and open a channel.

The steamer Maine of the Bridgeport Line, which sailed Wednesday afternoon from New York was reported ashore just north of Execution Rock. She had three passengers and a crew of seventy. It was reported the vessel's hull had been badly damaged. Tugs were sent to her relief but were unable to get to her. The last report said the vessel was resting firmly and there was no immediate ground for alarm.

PAID BY INTERBORO, WORKED FOR UNION

SALARY ROLL IN EVIDENCE

About Thirty I. R. T. Officials Receive More Than $6,000—Publicity Bureau's Methods.

During the month of December, Patrick J. Connolly, President of the Interborough Brotherhood and leader in the strike last Summer, spent fifteen days of his time in the work of the organization for which the railroad paid him his regular salary as a motorman. This fact was brought out yesterday at the continuation of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment's traction inquiry when James L. Quackenbush, general counsel for the Interborough, produced the time record of Connolly at the request of Mayor Hylan.

Mayor Hylan asked whether the Interborough paid Connolly when the latter was engaged in the affairs of the Brotherhood.

"There is not the slightest doubt in the world about that," Mr. Quackenbush replied; "the company pays every one of these men for the time they have devoted to the Brotherhood."

"That is because it is an Interborough institution," remarked Corporation Counsel Burr; "the Interborough drew its constitution, and no amendment can be made without the consent of the company."

"Didn't Connolly amend it a couple of times?" asked the Mayor.

"Yes, Connolly and his friends amended without the consent of the Interborough and declared a strike," said Mr. Burr sarcastically.

Mayor Asks About Almirall.

"Was Mr. Almirall acquainted with that when he was holding the Extraordinary Grand Jury proceedings, in which he was unable to find any evidence of the alleged abuses that existed between Connolly and the Interborough?" he asked, looking at Mr. Quackenbush.

Mr. Quackenbush said that he did not know, adding that he was so little interested in the proceedings of the Grand Jury of which Mr. Almirall was foreman that he had not read the minutes.

"Perhaps we will inquire into that Grand Jury before we get through here," the Controller said.

"That is not of the slightest consequence or interest to me," Mr. Quackenbush retorted. He said there was no reason why the Extraordinary Grand Jury should not have known that the brotherhood members were paid by the railroad, as the fact had been notorious since the organization of the employes' body.

"I should like to know if Brother Connolly was working for Brother Hedley during last August," interjected the Mayor.

"We'll furnish you with the information. I think that the time Brother Connolly, as you call him, was out on his own he didn't get paid," Mr. Quackenbush answered.

The entire session yesterday was devoted to the introduction of reports, statements and records of the Interborough and its affiliated lines which had been requested by the board and Corporation Counsel Burr. The contents of a few of these papers were made public when the Mayor or Controller Craig asked questions about them. At the next hearing the board will take up each in detail.

Salary List Produced.

One of the papers offered in evidence was a salary list showing the names of all officials earning more than $6,000 a year. There were about thirty names. Frank Hedley, President of the Interborough, was shown to be the highest paid official, receiving $85,000 a year, with Mr. Quackenbush second at $60,000 per annum. The salary of H. H. Vreeland, whose position was designated on the statement as Director of Welfare, was placed at $15,000. Edward F. J. Gaynor and J. H. Campbell, Auditor and Treasurer, respectively, receive similar amounts for their services.

The production of the payroll and expense sheets of the publicity department of the railroad precipitated a lively discussion over the amount of money and the activities of the bureau, of which Ivy L. Lee is director at $12,000 a year. The statement showed that the expenses from April, 1916, to last November totaled $83,806.49.

"It takes more than a million passengers to pay for that," observed F. H. LaGuardia, President of the oBard of Aldermen.

"Was Mr. Lee responsible for the propaganda in the Subway Sun and Elevated News?" Corporation Counsel Burr wanted to know.

"Yes, it includes those two," said Mr. Quackenbush.

The cost of getting out The Subway Sun from July, 1918, to last November was shown to be $5,876 and The Elevated News $5,138.

The Mayor, who had been studying a copy of the figures, turned to Corporation Counsel Burr and said:

"If the Interborough in The Subway Sun and Elevated News, through their abuse of public officials, had brought about an increased fare, which would have cost the people from $65,000,000 to $100,000,000 a year at an expense to themselves of about $10,000, it certainly would have been a profitable investment for them."

No Intention to Abuse Officials.

"Mr. Mayor, if there has been any abuse of a public official I apologize for it. There has been no intention of abusing anybody," Mr. Quackenbush replied. "All the purpose of The Subway Sun and Elevated Express is this: If the public authorities having to do with this matter, after the facts have been presented, reach a conclusion that something ought to be done, then public opinion has already been enlightened as to our necessities, and your action will have been justified."

"Do you anticipate that our actions will be approved by the Interborough?" Controller Craig asked.

"I have such confidence in your sense of fairness and justice that I am quite sure anything you do will be approved by us," replied Mr. Quackenbush.

"Well, I'll take up right now what is going to be handed to you when we get through," retorted the Controller.

When Mr. Quackenbush produced copies of the contracts between the Rapid Transit Company and the city for construction work under contract 3 Controller Craig said that he saw no reason for marking them in evidence. The attorney replied he was complying with a request of the board and wondered why the Controller objected.

"Because I am going to give Mr. Hedley a chance to back up his assertions here that the two years' delay was not the fault of the Rapid Transit Construction Company," the Controller said. "He volunteered that the city had not furnished the money for construction, and that was one reason why they did not buy equipment."

Among the data produced by the railroad was a record of the transactions with J. P. Morgan and the War Finance Corporation in the sale of Interborough 7 per cent. notes; an account of the power sold by the Interborough to other lines for which the railroad received $1,385,908, and the history of the capitalization of the Steinway Railroad Company.

The hearing will be resumed next Wednesday morning.

N. Y. RAILWAYS VALUATION.

Stone & Webster Estimate Properties Worth $144,055,177 in June.

The report of Stone & Webster showing the appraised values of the lines in the New York Railways system was made public yesterday by Federal Judge Mayer. The total value of the property, including all of the leased lines before the disintegration began, is fixed at $88,998,970 before the war and at $144,055,177 in June of last year. In figuring these values the report accepts the arbitrary 10 per cent. allowance for depreciation set by the Public Service Commission. Deducting these allowances the two totals are $71,516,188 and $112,526,657. Outstanding against the June estimate of $112,526,657 are underlying securities of $18,000,000 of 4 per cent. bonds and $30,000,000 of 5 per cent. income adjustment bonds.

The lines owned by the company, with the 10 per cent. allowance for depreciation, are appraised at $34,926,660 before the war and $55,153,210 in June last; the leased lines are appraised at $34,304,003 and $54,691,361, and the values of the property not used in railroad operation for the two periods are fixed at $2,285,525 and $2,682,086.

The value of the three leased lines separated from the railways system for the pre-war and after the war periods, less depreciation, are: Eighth Avenue Railroad Company, $5,480,360 and $8,885,975; Ninth Avenue Railroad Company, $3,586,341 and $6,206,838; Fourth and Madison Avenue Railroad Company, $5,761,722 and $9,878,675, making totals of $14,828,423 and $24,971,488 which must be deducted from the totals of the values given above to show the appraised value of the Railways Company's property as it exists at present, as well as totals of $1,513,769 and $1,067,743, showing the value before the war and after it of the property owned by the Eighth and Ninth Avenue Companies not used in operating the lines.

Representatives of the City Administration have frequently stated that in appraising the value of railroad properties, with a view to taking them over for municipal operation and control, and in considering the amount the companies should earn to pay a fair return upon the investment, the lines would be appraised on the basis of the precise amount of money spent to build and equip them and for maintenance. On this basis the question of present value of the properties on war costs would not interest the city officials.

NAMES 2D AV. RECEIVER.

Justice Platzek Selects C. E. Chalmers to Succeed Late A. E. Kalbach.

Justice Platzek in the Supreme Court yesterday appointed Charles E. Chalmers receiver of the Second Avenue Railroad Company to succeed Andrew E. Kalbach, who died on Monday. Mr. Chalmers has been connected with the company for twenty-one years, and since the road went in the hands of a receiver on Sept. 19, 1908, he has served as the receiver's counsel.

With the appointment of the receiver the court signed an order permitting a committee representing the holders of 96 per cent. of the outstanding receiver's certificates to intervene as co-defendants in the foreclosure action against the company. The total issues of receiver's certificates made between Sept. 26, 1913, and Sept. 26, 1916, amount to $3,140,000. Intervention of the committee was consented to by Brainard Tolles, attorney for Alexander J. Hemphill and other holders of First Consolidated Mortgage bonds of the company.

The suit was begun by the Guaranty Trust Company, representing holders of $5,631,000 in bonds. George W. Linch, the first receiver, died Dec. 15, 1915. George W. Beaver, the second receiver, died April 19, 1917, and then came Mr. Kalbach. A recent opinion by the Supreme Court was to the effect that the company was without hope of resurrection.

SAYS MRS. SPANG LOVED DAUGHTER

Contestant in $2,000,000 Will Case and Companion Describe Affectionate Letters.

REPEATS TALE OF "BRATS"

Mme. Kline Testifies Term Was Applied to Children Husband Proposed to Aid.

Mrs. Mabel Crome Ancker of Copenhagen, Denmark, who is contesting the will of her mother, Mrs. Rosa E. Spang, which gave her only $10,000 a year and left $2,000,000 to a foundation for poor children and babies, and Mme. Adele von Lessicker Kline, who became the daughter's legal guardian in 1905, when Mrs. Ancker was only 19 years old, to protect her on an extended sojourn in Europe, were witnesses yesterday before Surrogate Cohalan and the jury that is hearing the case.

Mme. Kline testified that Mrs. Spang always showed deep affection for her only child, although she was compelled to take legal action to remove her daughter from the control of a woman whose influence Mrs. Spang deprecated. That action caused the daughter to be sent to Europe with Mme. Kline. The witness stated that letters from the mother to her daughter spoke of "forgiving the past," but were always affectionate. The daughter always got letters containing drafts and expensive presents on each Christmas and Easter and on her birthday. When Mme. Kline returned here in 1910 with the daughter, Mrs. Spang met them, and they remained here that Summer. She said that Mrs. Spang did not have religious beliefs and the daughter was not baptized until Mme. Kline had the rite performed in Switzerland, when she acted as godmother and bestowed her own maiden name, "Von Lessicker."

Mme. Kline said Mr. and Mrs. Spang wanted to give their daughter an elaborate wedding in 1916, but she objected and the ceremony was performed in their presence at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The parents gave a wedding repast at the Waldorf and the daughter and her husband returned to Denmark. The witness told of talking with Mrs. Spang over the will of the latter's husband providing for a foundling hospital in Pittsburgh and said Mrs. Spang told her she "thought it a shame for a man who had a wife and daughter to leave any of his money for a home for a lot of brats."

Mrs. Ancker testified concerning her marriage to a Danish newspaper man named Crome, from whom she later was divorced, and spoke of the exchange of affectionate letters between her and her parents. She said that after her mother's death she found a number of her letters to her mother among the latter's effects. She also testified concerning her unsuccessful attempts to see her mother on the morning the will was executed, the day before her death, Mrs. Ancker having just arrived from Denmark.

After objections by Henry W. Taft, counsel for the executors under the will, former Senator Brackett for Mrs. Ancker offered in evidence a letter he said had been written by Senator Lockwood, attorney for Mr. Spang, to George W. Wickersham, who drew Mrs. Spang's will, the day before the will was executed. Senator Lockwood called attention to an alleged understanding with Mr. Spang by which he agreed that his wife should have half his estate outright instead of the income as provided in his will, on condition that she leave half her estate to her daughter on her death.

Mr. Wickersham denied that he received such a letter and it was admitted in evidence by Surrogate Cohalan merely as a document written by Senator Lockwood without any presumption on the part of the jury that it never was mailed. The case will continue today.

BANKRUPT BROKER IS HELD.

Latrobe, After Financial Examination, Arrested on Federal Charge.

Laurason Raymond Latrobe, the investment broker who was adjudged a bankrupt last November and who proved reluctant to the verge of the issuance of a body attachment by the court to appear for examination, was arrested yesterday on a complaint preferred by Post Office Inspector Leahy, who charged him with using the mails to defraud. United States Commissioner Hitchcock held him in $25,000 bail for examination.

The arrest occurred after Latrobe had been questioned before Acting Commissioner William Tallman, who sought to discover what assets he had to counteract the upward of a million dollars of liabilities. But the effort was unsuccessful because Latrobe contended that it was impossible for him to remember the names of the thousands of persons for whom he had bought stock, or promised to buy it, on the installment plan, and from whom he had garnered something like $750,000.

KEEP UP NEAR EAST RELIEF.

Murder of Americans in Syria Will Not Deter Body Here.

Not one of the 511 American men and women at work for the Near East Relief in Syria and Armenia will quit as the result of the murder of three Americans by bandits in Syria, Clarence P. Burgess, Field Secretary of the Relief Association, announced yesterday. The headquarters at 1 Madison Avenue was still without detailed news of the attack and had received no information as to the identity of those killed.

"Ever since we began our work of saving the survivors of the Turkish massacres, deportations, and organized wholesale robberies," said Mr. Burgess, "our workers have been in constant peril. They have faced not only the bullets and knives of bandits, but almost insurmountable difficulties in transportation, hardships, exposure, disease, and even death. But, if the American people will only back them up with the necessary funds, they will keep right on with their noble work, regardless of the difficulties and dangers."

Mr. Burgess related two incidents to illustrate the danger of relief work in these countries. One was of the escape of "Jimmy" Carroll of New York City, who was in charge of a truck loaded with supplies in the Caucasus. After his native driver had been shot by bandits, Carroll seized the steering wheel with one hand and fought off his assailants with the other, escaping down a steep mountain trail.

The other incident was of the escape of Miss R. B. North, who headed a party to rescue Armenian and Syrian children from slavery among the Kurds. A Kurdish chieftain laid in wait for the party, and would have captured it if the mule Miss North was riding had not discovered the ambush and bolted in time.

can flag in public was read into the record today, one by Mr. Stedman from Joseph W. Nowlan, Secretary of the American Anti-Socialist League, Inc., of Brooklyn, denying that Miss Chivers was or ever had been a member of that organization, and another by Mr. Stanchfield from Speaker Sweet to Mr. Nowlan, contending that Miss Chivers was a member of a rival organization bearing the same name.

Chairman Martin ruled both out of the record and rebuked Mr. Stedman for reading the letter received by him.

The only witness of the day was Peter W. Collins, who has already testified at length and was recalled for cross-examination. He asserted 70 per cent. of the dues-paying members of the Socialist Party were aliens and that the Socialists, as a party, favored Germany during the war.

At the opening of the hearing Mr. Stanchfield offered in evidence a copy of The New York Call for Feb. 10, 1912. At yesterday's session he old the committee he understood a headline containing the expression "To Hell with the Flag" had been prominently displayed in that issue. Mr. Block denounced the statement as a lie. Mr. Stanchfield said today that he owed the committee an apology for his statement, but offered to read an article which he thought would prompt Mr. Block, too, to apologize for what he had said.

Say Federal Official Insulted Flag.

Seymour Stedman objected on the ground that he article was "remote."

"It is remote in time, but pat in relevancy," said Mr. Stanchfield.

Mr. Stedman persisted that it was "intolerable persecution" to hold what had been printed when they were 15 years of age or thereabouts as binding on his clients.

"I object on another ground," he added. "Would it be competent in a charge against the Democratic or Republican Party to say that Attorney General Bell of Colorado said "To hell with the Constitution and to hell with the flag' at the time he was leading the strikers in Telluride?"

"I will say to counsel," said Mr. Stanchfield, "that I have been a member of the Senate of this State and minority leader of the House, and if any member got up on either side and said 'To hell with the flag,' I would move to expel him."

"Then I will say that the Federal District Attorney of Northern New York, a man named Lucy, said 'To hell with the Constitution, our nation is in peril,' and that was on the 17th day of November, 1917, at 1:45 P. M."

"If he did say it, he should be removed, Democrat or Republican," broke in Assemblyman Cuvillier.

"The Assembly has no jurisdiction," remarked Mr. Stanchfield.

"Well, I want to charge it up to the Democrats and Republicans, just as you propose to do in this instance," said Mr. Stedman.

Mr. Stanchfield then read into the record the article from The Call, signed by Richard Perin and headed "Respect the Uniform, Honor the Flag," quoting these words:

"Honor the uniform? Spit on it. Make it a shame and a reproach, until a worker who wears it will not dare to show his face among decent working people."

"If I had been Samuel Gompers, when he was reproached by the capitalists for placing his foot on the American flag, I would have answered: 'Yes, I trampled on it, and more than that, I spit upon your flag, not mine. I loathe the Stars and Stripes, once the symbol of liberty for all, but now the stripes represent the bloody stripes left by your lash on the back of the worker and the stars bullet and bayonet wounds in his breast. To hell with your flag, there is and can be only one flag for which an intelligent workingman can have any respect, the flag of humanity, the flag of human brotherhood, the red flag of the working class."

Mr. Collins, who then resumed the stand, was asked by Mr. Stedman if "the Socialist declaration for peace in national and international gatherings of the party since 1870" was one of his "reasons for opposing it."

"The Socialists, nationally and internationally, have declared for universal war and have not only failed to support efforts for peace, but have voted for budgets to bring about war," Mr. Collins replied, referring to the German Socialists.

"Do you belong to a secret society—the Knights of Columbus—and that society opposed to socialism?" asked Mr. Stedman.

"Yes," said the witness, "but it is not a secret society. Any one who is anxious to find out what is going on at its meetings can do so."

"Can any one join it?" asked the lawyer. This question Chairman Martin would not allow.

"With very few exceptions—members who resigned from the party—the Socialists generally were unqualifiedly with Germany even when our country entered the war," said the witness in reply to a question from Mr. Cuvillier.

Controversy Over Miss Chivers.

Mr. Stanchfield at the beginning of the afternoon session introduced a report by Secretary Lansing entitled, "Certain Aspects of the Bolshevist Movement in Russia," made October 27, 1919, and addressed to Senator Lodge as Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. The document was sent to Mr. Stedman, who at the next session will object to its admission.

Mr. Stedman then introduced the letter from the Brooklyn Anti-Socialist League regarding Miss Chivers's connection with the organization.

"There has come to our attention," said the letter, through articles appearing in today's New York City papers that an Ellen B. Chivers appeared before the Assembly committee yesterday and gave evidence against the ousted Socialist members of the Assembly.

"Ellen B. Chivers swears she was and is now a member of the American Anti-Socialist League, Inc., Brooklyn, and is now paying 25 cents weekly dues in this organization. This is an absolute untruth. Ellen B. Chivers is not now and never was a member of this league. She never paid dues into its treasury and her name never appeared on our books. She is absolutely unknown to us.

"Russell J. Dunn, to whom she made references in her testimony, likewise is not a member of this league. Mr. Dunn was expelled from this organization last June on very serious charges and since that time has had no connection with this league whatsoever.

"Our league has been fighting socialism and its kindred isms in this borough for many years, but we must come forward and expose any one using the name of the American Anti-Socialist League, Inc., to gain notoriety for themselves and give prestige to their remarks.

"We are writing you of this in order to protest against the evidence of this woman going down on the records of this trial as coming from a member and representative of this league."

Mr. Stanchfield then produced the speaker's letter, in which the latter said: "My information is that Ellen B. Chivers, to whom you refer in your letter, is a member of the American Anti-Socialist League of Brooklyn; that the branch of the league of which she is a member holds its meeting at Acme Hall, the corner of Seventh Avenue and Ninth Street, Brooklyn; that she is a member in good standing and is regularly paying her dues in that organization.

"My information is to the further effect that there has been some sort of a split in the American Anti-Socialist League, and that proceedings are pending to determine which branch has the right to the use of the name.

"It would seem to me that you would be much more interested, if it be the fact that you are engaged in an earnest and sincere effort to suppress the socialistic activities that we are attacking, to measure up the credibility and truthfulness of the evidence of Miss Chivers, rather than to try and minimize the influence of an association apparently endeavoring to honestly fight the battle of Americanism against those who are endeavoring to destroy our form of government.

"I am not at all interested in the controversy between the conflicting parties of this association as to the right to the use of the name. My sole and only purpose in this entire proceeding has been to ascertain whether the Socialist members of the Assembly of 1920 have by their votes and speeches endeavored to hamper and impede the activities of the State of New York in participating with the other States of the American Union in an endeavor to bring the war to a successful conclusion.

"As a citizen and a man I am also very much interested in endeavoring to ascertain whether or not the five members belong to a party which is controlled by a subsidiary branch known as the 'dues-paying' branch of the Socialist Party and have promised to hand their resignation to a committee of this 'dues-paying' branch if they failed to comply with its requirements. The 'dues-paying' branch, as the evidence of Mayor Lunn of Schenectady already demonstrates, has on its roster of membership both aliens and minors. This 'duespaying' branch, which controls the policy and the votes of the Socialist members of the Assembly, represents a very small percentage of the votes cast for the Socialist Party.

"The constitution of the Socialist Party forbids, on pain of expulsion, its members when elected to such office to vote for any measure making provision for the support and maintenance of the army or navy. The Constitution of the State of New York requires the maintenance and support of a standing army of not less than 10,000 men, and makes it mandatory upon the Legislature annually to make provision for the support of such force.

"It is difficult to see how any of these Socialist members of the present Assembly can be loyal to their party, as they most solemnly declare they are, and at the same time can conscientiously take the oath as a member of the Assembly wherein they swear solemnly to support the Constitution of the State and the Constitution of the United States.

Says Aliens Control Party.

Mr. Collins, when recalled to the stand, was asked by Chairman Martin about the percentage of aliens in the "dues-paying" membership of the Socialist Party. His opinion was that 70 per cent. were aliens.

"So, if your contention is true," continued the Chairman, "then the public official who signs a paper to obey the orders of the dues-paying members through its committee necessarily is governed by a body of men of which 70 per cent. are aliens?"

"That is not only true, but we have that government existing today with the methods used in the resignation," Mr. Collins replied.

Assemblyman Cuvillier asked if the I. W. W. was a part of the Socialist Party, and when the witness answered affirmatively, offered in evidence an appeal for funds by W. D. Haywood, an expelled member of the Socialist Party. Chairman Martin excluded the circular.

On cross-examination Mr. Collins said that he meant that the majority of the membership of the I. W. W. were dues-paying members of the Socialist Party, but would not assert positively that the I. W. W., as an entirety, was a constituent part of the Socialist Party.

S. John Block, in cross-examining Mr. Collins, asked:

"Have you ever examined the official membership of any local of the Socialist Party?"

"I have never been allowed that privilege."

"And when you say 70 per cent. of the members of the party are aliens, you say that upon vague, indefinite hearsay and not upon any official statistics?"

The witness replied that he said it "upon careful analysis of fifteen years' experience covering every State in the Union."

Misunderstood, Says Lucey.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 5.—United States District Attorney D. B. Lucey of Ogdensburg today made this statement concerning the charge of Seymour Stedman made at the hearing to determine the eligibility of the suspended Socialist Assemblymen that he had said:

"To hell with the Constitution; our nation is in peril.

"I remember that it was a strenuous trial. I think what I said has been misunderstood. There was a lot of talk there about constitutional rights of people. In summing up I was dwelling on the talk. I brushed the talk aside. I don't remember saying anything like that."

in its special Near Eastern number gives a fascinating array of facts and stories—a cross section indeed of the spirit of the Near Eastern masses—silent victims of European imperialism on one hand and of the unspeakable corruption of the Turkish ruling class on the other. The old lands of the origin of man are a boiling caldron of suspicion and race jealousy.

What their future will be, we in America must help decide. Our future is bound up with theirs. It is not merely a question of humanity but of self-interest that compels us to lend a hand. How they really think—what they really do—is fascinatingly told in ASIA.

The Golden Highway to an Enchanted Land

From no other source could you get so well rounded—and absorbingly entertaining—a picture of these peoples and problems new to America as in this magazine.

In this number, Herbert Adams Gibbons, famous American correspondent who knows the Turk from intimate contact with him, tells fascinating tales of him that leave with you a vivid picture of Turk character.

Jackson Fleming, whose revealing articles about the Near East you have been following in ASIA this month, throws a searching light upon the rising power of new national feeling in the Near East, that will explode if repressed.

Theron J. Damon draws intimate pictures of the men who have been hiding all the way from Berlin to Constantinople—new young leaders and the old false leaders who are feverishly planning schemes that bode no good.

And Philip Marshall Brown, member of the Peace Commission, tells the personal story of Wahid Ed-din the new Sultan who looks westward. But all this is just a beginning. Read how Turkish women—and men too—are under the spell of Halideh Hanum, one of the most beautiful of Turkish women who long ago let down her veil and is now leading her people to intellectual independence.

Talcott Williams, born in Turkey, one of America's leading journalists, and Paul Monroe, educationalist, who knows how America acted in the Philippines, tell of our fitness as a mandate power.

Two Big Magazines in One

This special Near Eastern section is a magazine in itself. It is only a part of ASIA for January, which has in its other pages a story by an American engineer, one of the few Americans who have been in the country since 1840—of little-known Afghanistan now in the world's calcium light at war with Great Britain. The wonders of the plains of Mongolia as the next great supply of the world's meat as told by Luther Anderson, stimulate the imagination.

FIND A NEW CLUE TO HOXSIE MURDER

Police Hear That Suspect May Live in a Rooming House in the Neighborhood.

GIRL'S STEPMOTHER HERE

Mrs. Hoxsie Returns from New Orleans and Meets Detectives —Suspects Questioned.

Detectives under Captain Thomas Walsh of the West 100th Street Station yesterday took on new hope of arresting the murderer of Ream Constance Hoxsie, the 17-year-old daughter of Robert S. Hoxsie, when they received information that the man they sought might be found in a rooming house in the vicinity.

Just what the detectives learned from their informant could not be discovered last night, but it is understood that the volunteer called at the West 100th Street Station shortly after noon, and that Captain Walsh and Captain Arthur Carey, head of the Homicide Bureau, assigned more than a score of detectives to the clue.

Faint from loss of sleep and showing evidence of having wept much, Mrs. Marie Hoxsie, stepmother of the slain girl, arrived at the Pennsylvania Station last evening after a fifty-hour journey from New Orleans, where she had been filling a theatrical engagement. As she alighted from the train she was met by her husband and eight detectives under Captain Walsh. When she had recovered her composure after meeting Mr. Hoxsie she was hurried to the West 100th Street station in an automobile, where Captain Walsh and his detectives discussed with her possible clues to the identity of the murderer.

Captain Carey entered the station soon after the detectives began their interview with Mrs. Hoxsie. In about three hours Mrs. Hoxsie left the station with her husband, and Captain Walsh announced that she had given the detectives no information which they deemed important. She told the detectives that for fifteen years, in the summer months, she had singing engagements in beach resorts on Long Island, and that occasionally Ream called on her at places where she was singing.

When Mr. and Mrs. Hoxsie were leaving the station it was announced that the funeral of Ream would take place next Saturday morning, and that the burial would be in New Haven, near the grave of the slain girl's mother.

During the day scores of men and women called on Captain Walsh at the station, each to tell him that on Monday, the day of the murder, a swarthy-skinned man called on him or her in answer to an advertisement and inspected rooms. Others who called or telephoned said that on that day dark-complexioned men who had occupied rooms in their homes had disappeared. In every instance detectives were hurried to the addresses given, but in no case was cause for suspicion found.

Captain Walsh said he was not at all displeased with those who telephoned to him or called at the station because, it is only through information from outside that the police expect to get a clue to the murderer. He said that Captain Carey and he agreed that the murder was of the most difficult kind to solve, because from the manner in which the girl was killed it was evident that the police must capture a criminal of cunningly depraved propensities.

In response to a general alarm sent out on the day of the murder policemen all over the city have been questioning men who in any way answer the description of the supposed murderer furnished by Mrs. Mary O'Brien, janitress of the house in which the girl was slain. Detectives Murphy and Quinn of the Twelfth Inspection District, in Brooklyn, early yesterday morning met a man who they thought answered the description and brought him to the West 100th Street Station, where Mrs. O'Brien, who was summoned from her home, spoke to him. Later he was taken to the District Attorney office and examined by Assistant District Attorney Joyce, in charge of the Homicide Bureau.

The police refused to reveal the identity of the man, but persons who saw him said he was poorly dressed and wore a beard of at least three days' growth. It was said later that the man was suspected because he had visited several furnished room houses in Brooklyn in the last week in answer to advertisements. Later it was announced that he had been cleared of all suspicion in connection with the murder.

Records of the Children's Society revealed yesterday that Ralph Hoxsie, ten years old, brother of the dead girl, had been sent to a farm up-State on June 10 last, after he had been committed to the care of the Protestant Big Brothers by Magistrate Levy in the Children's Court. His commitment followed the receipt by the society of several anonymous letters from neighbors of the Hoxsie family.

Louis Falk, Agent of the Children's Society, the records show, called at the Hoxsie home and found Mrs. Hoxsie, his stepmother, ill in bed, and the boy playing in the street. The boy, the agent also reported, had a discolored eye, which he told the agent he received from his parents. When the boy was arraigned in court, the parents indignantly denied they had assaulted him. He was adjudged, however, to be without proper guardianship, and was committed to the Goodwill Farm, which is run by the Big Brothers.

ASSERT ATTENDANTS CHOKED VETERANS

Forced Them to Release Money Hidden in Mouths, Witnesses Testify.

SAY CLOTHES WERE RIFLED

Lieut. Gov. Walker Continues Inquiry Into Management of Soldiers' Home at Bath.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Mistreatment of inmates of the Soldiers' Home at Bath was described by witnesses here today, when Lieutenant Governor Walker resumed the investigation into alleged mismanagement of the institution. For the first time the Board of Managers was represented by counsel, Mortimer L. Sullivan of this city. He was not permitted to examine witnesses, but was allowed to suggest questions.

Harry Force of Elmira and Owen Townsend of Cameron, N. Y., former attendants in the hospital of the Bath home, testified they had seen money taken from the inmates. One method, they testified, was to order the veterans to the hospital for a bath. While they were in the bathroom attendants would rifle the pockets of the veterans' clothing. A nurse had taken $130 from one inmate and offered to Force one-third of it, the latter declared.

These witnesses also asserted they had seen the veterans choked with a wet towel in order to make them give up money they had hidden in their mouths while taking a bath. They said a wet towel did not leave marks when twisted around the necks of victims.

Some veterans told them, the witnesses said, that attendants tickled the bottoms of their feet. Force said he was discharged once for taking food from his home to an aged veteran who could not buy fruit and luxuries.

James Bolton, former Western Union office manager at Bath, testified to receiving a message for Governor Smith. The message was telephones to him and read: "Please hold up appointment until you get letter." The message was said to concern the appointment of George W. Peck, Mayor of Elmira, and a member of the Board of Managers of the Bath home, who was instrumental in bringing about the investigation.

The inquiry ended this afternoon, so far as Elmira is concerned, with the examination of George K. Knowlton, an Erie Railroad employe. His father, a home inmate, disappeared, the witness testified, yet the home authorities failed to notify the family.

Dr. Frank W. Ross of Elmira told of attending an inmate who was a drug addict and who told him it was easy to get "dope" in the institution. Addison Wheeler, an Elmira railroad detective, said his father had $700 when he went to the home and received a pension of $30, but when he died only $76 was returned.

John W. Dilmore of Elmira, Humane Officer, told of finding Andrew Notion, a supposed home inmate of unsound mind, living with a family named Robinson in a ramshackle house far from town. He was dirty and disheveled, his finger nails were like talons, and he was ill nourished. The family was living off his pension.

The inquiry goes on at Bath tomorrow and then will continue at Syracuse.

MRS. HERWIG GETS $2,000.

Army Officer's Wife Wins Suit Against Biltmore—Was Ejected.

A jury in the Supreme Court yesterday returned a verdict for $2,000 in favor of Mrs. Adelaide M. Herwig, wife of Major Robert W. Herwig, U. S. A., against the Biltmore Hotel because she was ejected from the hotel at 3 A. M. one morning for the reason that her husband, who was at Camp Mills on his way overseas, had gone to the hotel to spend the night and had not registered. Mrs. Herwig sued for $50,000

Mrs. Herwig testified she notified the hotel management she expected her husband. Witnesses said both gave proof they were husband and wife.

14 INJURED IN WRECK OF TRAIN BOUND HERE

NEARLY PLUNGE IN CREEK

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—More than a dozen persons were slightly injured at Frankford Junction, in the northeastern part of this city, today, when a Florida express train on the Pennsylvania Railroad struck the rear of a string of freight cars. The express was made up of sleeping and baggage cars, and several of the sleepers turned over.

Fortunately the train was running slowly and the cars were not badly damaged. All of the injured were treated by physicians at the scene of the accident and later proceeded to New York, where most of them reside.

The engine crew of the express stuck to their posts, and the train was brought to a stop after bouncing over the ties for some distance. It narrowly missed going into a creek nearby. Traffic was delayed several hours by the collision.

No passenger was seriously injured. All of the cars were of steel, and the slight fire in one of them was speedily extinguished.

The train consisted of nine sleepers and one dining car. It was made up at Washington of cars from Key West, Miami, Louisville, Hot Springs, White Sulphur, Augusta, and other Southern points.

The police issued a list of fourteen persons who had been treated on the scene for shock and contusions by physicians from the Frankford Hospital. All were able to proceed. They were:

EX-GOVERNOR GRAHAM CONVICTED OF THEFT

Jury Finds Him Guilty of Embezzling Vermont Funds—Case Will Be Appealed.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Feb. 5.—Former Governor Horace F. Graham was found guilty of embezzlement of State funds while he was State Auditor by a jury today. The jury was out nearly four hours.

The case was given to the jury just before noon.

Counsel for Graham immediately announced that the case would be taken to the Supreme Court on exceptions. The penalty in this State for larceny may be ten years in prison, or a fine of $500 or both. Sentence will be imposed tomorrow.

Judge F. M. Butler in his charge to the jury removed from its consideration ten counts for embezzlement and ninety-six for larceny, leaving fifty-six for larceny, upon which the verdict was given. He also told the jury that the only question that need be considered was whether any intent to commit a crime had been shown.

The trial began on Jan. 20, when the State announced that it would not prosecute for alleged shortages during Graham's incumbency from 1902 to 1913. The overdrafts in the period from 1913, it was charged, amounted to slightly less than $9,000. Graham contended that the amount represented not shortages but a balance on outstanding orders, and that in drawing to his personal account against the State he had acted solely with the view of expediting business and with entire honesty of purpose.

tion is curtailed stoppage of service may be forced immediately."

Then the statement of the commission says that the Brooklyn Edison Company has five days' supply, that twenty-three carloads consigned to them at Port Reading had been seized by the Railroad Administration, and that out of three hundred cars consigned only four came through. The situation, as it affects the other public utility corporations, is given in brief as follows:

New York Edison Company has in its station bunkers 22,045 tons of coal; alongside stations, 19,591 tons; at Shadyside, 7,584 tons, and has received from Hampton Roads 3,245 tons, making a total of 52,465 tons. This they assume will carry them for two weeks.

Gas Companies' Supplies.

The Consolidated Gas Company has coal enough to last for nine days, the Brooklyn Union Gas Company enough for two weeks, and the New York Steam Company, another important utility corporation, is in no danger whatever of being compelled to shut down its service.

Commissioner Nixon's telegram to President Wilson was to the effect that the coal shortage among public utilities "is alarming," and that the two big transportation companies were down to a two days' supply. Then the telegram read:

"The utilities claim that large amounts of coal consigned to them and plainly marked for public utility use have been requisitioned by the Railroad Administration and kept from coming to New York City, causing the present shortage. The situation is desperate and I strongly urge that the seizure of public utility coal by the Railroad Administration be suspended."

Mr. Nixon's letter to Mayor Hylan was equally alarming. Sentences from the letter read:

"Some of them (the public utilities) you will note face an almost immediate shutdown. A condition faces us requiring drastic steps. It would be readily understood that certain savings can be made in the operation of the transit systems. So far as the use of electricity by the general public is concerned, however, the savings are largely in the hands of the customers, and I beg you to call upon the people to exercise every possible care in the use of current. There is also a shortage in gas."

The Mayor is urged in the letter to ask his subordinates to co-operate with the efforts being made to conserve coal, and then this cheering paragraph appears:

"Of course with the improvement of present conditions in the harbor much relief may be obtained, but as it is impossible to take chances under such conditions I am shaping my work here on the assumption that these conditions may continue for a number of days."

Mayor Urges Reserve Supplies.

Mayor Hylan replied to this letter at once in characteristic phrases. He called Mr. Nixon's attention to the fact that similar conditions had occurred before and that "both the public utility corporations and the Public Service Commission were aware of the fact and should have had a reserve supply, which would last more than two days, on hand.

"I am going to ask you as Public Service Commissioner to see to it in the future that the public utility corporations have at least a two week's supply of coal in reserve for emergencies of this kind. The city will render every possible assistance to help overcome this dereliction and I hope you will see to it in the future that this condition does not occur again."

Among those present with Mr. Nixon at the conference were J. W. Lieb, Vice President and general manager of the New York Edison Company; W. F. Wells of the Brooklyn Edison Company; George Keegan, assistant to President Hedley of the Interborough Company; W. S. Menden, Vice President of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, and Walter R. Addicks of the Consolidated Gas Company.

At the request of Mr. Hedley the Board of Estimate yesterday gave the Interborough Company permission to lay tracks from the New York Central Railroad on Twelfth Avenue to the Interborough's power house in Fifty-ninth Street. Mr. Hedley stated that the company had plenty of coal on the Central's tracks, but that because of the bad weather it was found impossible to transfer it to the power house.

Amedee J. Casey, editor of The American Coal Journal, sent out a statement last night to the effect that the present shortage of coal was due to "gross bungling in the Railroad Administration."

The statement also said that production was much less than normal, and that the only way to repair the mischief already done was for Washington to release "the thousands of loaded cars standing idle at points where the coal they carry is utterly unsuited to the requirements of the locality, and on which the demurrage is piling up at a rate which has already put the price up to a prohibitive point."

30 DENOMINATIONS FORM UNION PLAN

Church Conference Adopts a Program for Organization Covering the Country.

TO HARMONIZE ALL EFFORTS

While Allowing Autonomy in Purely Denominational Affairs—Two Councils Provided For.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—A plan for organization of Protestant Churches in America was adopted here today by delegates representing approximately thirty denominations after a three days' discussion, and the new movement will be under the guidance of the American Council on Organic Union of the Churches of Christ, a name officially selected by the delegates. The plan was drawn by Henry W. Jessup, New York, representing the Presbyterian Church in the United States. Dr. William Henry Roberts, Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian General Assembly and Chairman of the Ad Interim Committee which considered the plan, was unanimously chosen President of the Council.

The plan was adopted with one dissenting vote, Dr. William McKinnin, Cincinnati, Presbyterian, opposing it on the ground that a change had been made to which he objected. This change was the substitution of the words "Christian church" for "evangelical churches" in the preamble.

The plan as adopted provides that Christian churches having the same faith in Christ shall agree to associate themselves in a body known as the "United Churches of Christ in America" for the furtherance of the redemptive work in the world. It holds for "autonomy in purely denominational affairs" with each church retaining its creedal statements, its form of worship and form of government. It provides for an executive body or council and a general council in which each constituent church shall be represented by an equal number of ministers and laymen, women to be included.

The specific functions of the council it was set forth, are to harmonize and unify the work of the united churches, direct such consolidation of missionary activities, as well as of particular churches in overchurched areas by uniting boards of churches of any two or more denominations or otherwise. Another duty of the council will be to undertake inspirational and educational leadership of such sort and measure as may be decided upon by the constituent churches from time to time in the fields of evangelism, social service, religious education, and the like.

It was decided to continue the ad interim committee with the same personnel and the same basis of representation of constituent churches unless changed by the churches making the appointments themselves. The committee was instructed to present the plan of union to the governing bodies of the several communions and to other evangelical denominations not represented.

Approval was given to the assembly of a preliminary conference of the proposed world conference on faith and order at Geneva, Switzerland, this Summer under the call of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Another resolution indorsed the plans of the Publicity Committee for the publication of Irenic literature on Christian unity by tracts, booklets and articles for the religious and secular press. This resolution was passed, but referred to the ad interim committee for the working out of the plans proposed.

It was also decided to have a world-wide special day of prayer for Christian unity.

ITALIAN SCIENTIST TELLS OF ODD SIGNALS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Feb. 5.—Italian scientists are busy arranging a scheme for testing the possibility of interplanetary communication. Dr. Hubert Bianchi, M. P., who for many years was director of the Reggio Calabria wireless station, says that fifteen years of study and experimenting on the subject has convinced him that the mysterious signals to which Marconi frequently has alluded are quite unexplained on the hypothesis either of the earth currents or of disturbance arising from atmospheric discharges or even of stray signals from neighboring stations.

"When I began my investigations in 1905," he writes, "I noticed almost nightly, between midnight and 12:45, that our telephone, inserted in a magnetic sector, and the Morse key inserted on a coherer wire, were registering rapid rhythmical signals, which could not be deciphered. These were followed by brief intervals of silence. The whole process resembled the regular transmission, only much quicker than normal. My corresponding station at the Villa San Giovanni and Messina never experienced phenomena of this sort.

The suggestion lately made that the signals may come from an unknown station in Japan or Siberia is discounted because at that period no station in the Far East was capable of transmitting electric waves of anything like the power required to reach Calabria.

FUR SALE TOTALS $1,016,000

Two Silver Fox Pelts Fetch $960 Each at St. Louis.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 5.—The fourth day of the Funsten Brothers' International Fur Exchange opened with brisk bidding on 8,800 white fox. These sold in prices ranging from $72 to $86 for the best quality pelts. The total receipts for the white foxes was $419,000. Prices were 10 per cent. higher than the sale of last September.

The 1,000 blue foxes aggregating the sum of $175,000 for the lot. The top price wos $390 per skin. These prices show no change over those of the September sale.

Fifteen hundred silver foxes were offered for sale before the noon intermission and the sale of the silver foxes continued well into the evening. The prices showed an advance of 40 per cent. over the prices of the Autumn. Two beautiful skins which sold for $960 apiece were a part of a consignment of high-grade silver foxes from W. Chester S. McClure of Prince Edward Island. McClure is the largest handler of silver fox in the world and the manager of the Fur Sales Board of the Blue Fox Association.

The complete sales today amounted to 11,000 skins. Receipts are estimated at $1,016,000.

TITO SCHIPA APPEARS.

Young Tenor and Mme. Galli-Curci Applauded in "La Sonnambula."

Former President Taft was in a box at the Lexington last night, when Bellini's "La Sonnambula" was presented by the Chicago Opera Association, as for two seasons past, with Mme. Galli-Curci as Amina, a rôle of prima donnas for three generations, while the young tenor, Tito Schipa, made on this occasion his first appearance in New York. The audience was a large one, and the late sleep-walking scene need have been missed by few, for the performance was made to end well before 11 o'clock, owing to traffic conditions. The coincidence of "Sonnambula" in the same week with its big sister, "Norma," brought into high light the fact that a more than one-sided melodist was that Bellini, who composed these unlike works some ninety years ago.

Mme. Galli-Curci sang and acted charmingly the unconscious heroine's passing over a broken bridge to the musical finale, long outmoded but not unsung, with its two soprano airs, the slumbering "Ah, non credea mirarti" and wideawake "Ah, non giunge." She was much nearer her best, her brilliant estate, after Monday's indisposition, though her admirers have heard her sing with more of that brilliance, but rarely more of gentleness and beauty. In the earlier somnambulist episode of the inn chamber, both the soprano and tenor finished the choral ensemble with an arpeggio of top notes that drew a storm of applause, while the opera's opening scene was Galli-Curci's own.

Mr. Schipa had begun hoarsely, as so many have done here and elsewhere of late, but he soon won his way. He is young, boyishly active, impetuous as a lover, and his voice, while described as a "light" tenor, is one of the manly sort and of emotional power. At the end of his solo scene midway in the final act, he received a merited tribute from the audience, which plainly liked him, and he took the final recalls with Galli-Curci patting his shoulder. Mme. Claessens sang the mother's sympathetic rôle, Mr. Lazzari the Count, Miss Sharlow was Lisa, and Trevisan and Oliviero completed the cast. Mr. De Angelis conducted.

Will Discuss 'Youth in the Theatre.'

"Youth in the Theatre" will be the subject of discussion at a meeting of the Drama League to be held at the Plymouth Theatre next Tuesday afternoon. The speakers will be Rachel Barton Butler, author of "Mamma's Affair"; Margalo Gillmore of the cast of "The Famous Mrs. Fair"; Glenn Hunter of the cast of "Clarence," and Laurence Housman.

Lieut. Gitz Rice Weds Ruby Hoffman

Lieutenant Gitz Rice, who first appeared in New York two seasons ago in "Getting Together," was married yesterday to Ruby Hoffman, a motion picture actress. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Moor of Madison Baptist Church.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Not So Long Ago," a comedy by Arthur Richman, was placed in rehearsal yesterday by the Shuberts.

The performance announced by the Actors' Fidelity League for the New Amsterdam Theatre Sunday night has been postponed until the night of Feb. 22.

Andreyev's "The Beautiful Sabine Women" will be given its first performance in New York at the Neighborhood Playhouse on Saturday night, Feb. 14. It will be preceded by a revival of Dunsany's "The Glittering Gate."

Nance O'Neil, star of "The Passion Flower," will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given by the Pleiades Club on Sunday night.

"The Servant in the House" will be revived in Montreal next Monday night, with a cast including Tyrone Power, in his original role, and Harold de Becker.

Three hundred employes of the Krower-Tynberg Co., Inc., will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of that firm by attending the Hippodrome tomorrow afternoon.

The Cameron Sisters have been added to the cast of the new Nine O'Clock Revue on the New Amsterdam Roof.

The production of "The Little Clown," in which Ida St. Leon is to have the principal role, has been delayed to permit that actress to continue to appear in "Mamma's Affair."

The Hippodrome announced last night that 2,200 seats which were paid for were unoccupied at the evening performance and that ticket holders who had been unable to reach the theatre could exchange their seats for any performance within two weeks.

MUSIC NOTES.

Clementine de Vere Saplo as Aida, Bernice de Pasquali as Lucia, and Carmen Pascova as Carmen will appear in the National Opera Club's special matinee for Music Week this afternoon at the Manhattan Opera House.

Hudson Guild House has a free Music Week concert in West Twenty-seventh Street tonight by Irene Williams of the Society of American Singers and Bernard Ferguson, baritone.

Music Week will have a final celebration at Newark on Saturday night in a concert at the 1st Regiment Armory by New Jersey's own prima donna, Anna Case.

MUSIC

By Richard Aldrich

The Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Some of the auditors of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who usually fill Carnegie Hall to the doors when it comes to New York, were kept away by the storm last evening from the fourth concert of the organization. Those who came heard a program composed of d'Indy's second symphony in B flat, the overture to Mozart's "Magic Flute," the prelude and final scene of Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde" and Liszt's symphonic poem "Les Préludes."

D'Indy's symphony has had a few, not many, performances in New York, the most notable doubtless having been the one by the Boston Orchestra under his own direction fifteen years ago. It seems now the most distinguished production of the modern French school, something that the composer himself has not surpassed and that he came far from equaling in his last symphony called "De Bello Gallico," played here earlier in the season.

The one heard last evening is a difficult and complex work, alike for players and listeners; nor is it too much to say that it is a profound one, the product not only of a fertile imagination and a masterly command of symphonic structure and orchestral technique, but also of a deep intellectual conception. In this symphony the principle of the development of a complex thematic outfit from a very few "generative themes" has been carried to its extreme. It is a principle that was much favored by d'Indy's master, César Franck, and one that he himself has worked much on in the compositions of his later period.

Such a principle, or any other in art, must be justified by its results. In this symphony the results are deeply engrossing, and comprise many pages of great beauty. Nor can the full significance of these results be seized by the most attentive listener except after considerable immersion in the work. It has been called "cerebral"; it is unquestionably an intellectual product, but it cannot be denied musical beauty of a high order, imagination, potent inventiveness.

D'Indy writes, of course, in the extreme of the modern French idiom. There are harmonic acerbities; there are involved unusual and frequently shifting rhythms. The orchestration has not always richness of a deep and glowing kind, but often a many facetted brilliancy of varied and sometimes piercing instrumental timbres. The melodiousness and pulsing rhythm of the first theme, the seizing beauty of the slow movement, the folk-like tune first announced in the viola in the third movement and another form heard later in the same movement, the fascinating rhythmic complexities in which these are developed, and the choral-like ending of the fugue in the last movement, are passages that easily absorb the attention. It is not at a single hearing that all the deeper significance of the cyclic thematic relationships in the symphony can be gathered and ordered in the listener's mind; but comprehension of the power and pregnancy of the work is not dependent upon this analysis.

Mr. Monteux's admirable musicianship and technical mastery were shown in his reading and performance of this difficult and abstruse symphony. The orchestra acquitted itself with distinction.

John Aubert, Swiss Pianist, Plays.

John Aubert, a Swiss pianist, appearing for the first time in Aeolian Hall yesterday, showed himself no mere matinée idol, but a man delighting in masses of sound and voluminous climaxes. With full command of the keyboard, he played a Bach-Tausig toccata and fugue, Franck's prelude, aria and finale, and Schumann's so-called symphonic studies, all piano works of sculpturesque solidity, though Cesar Franck has his moment of tender poetry as well. There were a toccata of Debussy, with lighter prelude and sarabande, Ravel's "Pavane pour une Defunte," and a study in waltz form by Saint-Saëns.

'CLEOPATRA'S NIGHT' AGAIN.

There was a new operatic triptych at the Metropolitan yesterday afternoon and night, the matinée, "Madame Butterfly," drawing a considerable audience from stalled traffic of drifted streets, while a subscription house last night greeted the second performance anywhere of Hadley's "Cleopatra's Night," followed in double bill by "Le Coq d'Or." Half the stars of the great constellation of Gatti-Casazza were visible. Half-hour intermissions prolonged the big show first and last until everybody was satisfied.

Of critical comment, the several performances call for no addition to what has before been said. Farrar, Martinelli, Scotti, all familiar, made the Puccini cast, with Moranzoni leading; Alda and Harrold sang the Anglo-Egyptian nocturne, a "Nile scene," with American-made scenes of beauty; and an American's music led by Papi. In the Russian opera-pantomime Miss Scotney headed the cast, with other singers and all the dancers as usual, but without Mr. Bodanzky, in whose place Mr. Bamboschek conducted with credit, as he had at last week's matinée of Rimsky-Korsakoff's work.

THE RAILWAY BILL.

The bill for the return of the railways to private operation has not yet been written, and cannot be discussed with precision. But there is reported a meeting of the minds of the conferees in a reassuring manner. The novelty in the Cummins proposal for a second regulatory commission is to be dropped; also the penal provisions against strikes are dropped. They were inserted in a panic, and are not peculiarly appropriate to the railways. If severe methods with strikes contrary to public interest are necessary at all, they are necessary in many industries, and should be dealt with, if at all, in a general rather than specific manner. As these were the most conspicuous and the most characteristic features of the Cummins proposal, it seems that the Esch plan has prevailed. That impression is strengthened by the increase in the number of the Interstate Commerce Commissioners corresponding to the increase in their duties.

Unfortunately these advantages are obtained by accepting somewhat too much of the Cummins plan for the regulation of rates. That plan is improved by increasing the amount over the stipulated rate, not exactly settled, it seems, which the more profitable roads are allowed to retain from their excess earnings, but it is open to remark, if not to objection, that the proposal is inspired as much by excess of consideration for the weaker roads as by excess of severity for the strong roads. The country needs strong roads more than it needs weak roads. Improvement in the outlook for the securities of the weak roads may be too dearly bought by the discouragement of the strong roads. The prime thing is the improvement of railway service, not the stabilizing of the security market, desirable and deserved though that is. However, the strong roads do not come off so badly. What is called the "guarantee," but which has seemed more like a restriction of earnings, and which was more a permission than a promise to the weak roads, is confined in both cases to earnings from operation. If there are other earnings, as from investments, they are added to the allowed percentage.

Over four billions of railway securities are owned by railways, and some of them are good properties. These investments of railways in railways have been criticised as diversion of resources. So they would have been if the regulation of rates had been reasonable. The interlocking of railways was their method of defense against a policy of low and lower rates as the epitome of the policy of regulation. If the new regulation of rates is more favorable to the railways, there will not be the same reason for the railways' persistence in their defensive policy of investment in one another's properties, so as to have an insight into what competitors were doing. Here there is a possible source of the new capital which the railways need, and in their bettered condition there will be taken off the investment market a grievous weight in the nick of time.

NECESSARY TO PREPAREDNESS.

The interest of the House of Representatives in preparedness for war must be slight, if it is to be measured by its appropriation of $50,000 for the work of the Council of National Defense in the next six months. Three times that amount was the estimate of Director CLARKSON, and he is as good a friend of economy as any member of the Appropriations Committee. Between Nov. 30, 1918, and June 30, 1919, he reduced the number of his employes from 295 to 130 and cut the salary list from $355,700 to $184,960. Of this example of retrenchment he has said in his report, "it is extremely difficult to find a parallel either in Government or civil life."

Reducing estimates two-thirds, the rule which the committee is disposed to make, is commendable when the estimates have no relation to work done and to value received by the Government. The Council of National Defense, established in 1916 "for the co-ordination of industries and resources for the national security and welfare," has handsomely proved its usefulness. It created the great majority of the non-military bodies that helped the armies in the field to win the war, and its mission did not end with the armistice. All that bears upon the national security is its concern: transportation, production of articles and materials essential to the support of the land and sea forces during a war, relations of manufacturers with the War and Navy Departments, community service, Americanization of new citizens—in fact, every phase of preparedness. The future of the Council of National Defense is the responsibility of Congress, which can neglect it or unmake as it has made it.

If Director CLARKSON cannot obtain more than $50,000 to carry on the business of the Council until June 30, 1920, it might as well make its bow and retire, abandoning the research work which would have to be done all over again at great expense with war once more imminent. Cutting down the estimate in the trenchant way of the House was parsimoniousness, not economy; short-sightedness, not wisdom. Director CLARKSON will ask the Senate Appropriations Committee for $50,000 more than the House was willing to give him, but shift would have to be made to get along with two-thirds of the requisite amount. There ought to be no question of recommending the increase in conference. The Council of National Defense is indispensable.

FINANCIAL TIMIDITY.

The root of the disorder of the exchanges is that we have too many goods for our own use, and that foreign buyers have too little money to relieve us of them. The alternatives are that we should consume more than is good for us, or that foreign buyers should go without what they ought to have to keep themselves in health. The crisis in the exchanges of currencies is different from the indigestion of securities which troubled us a few years ago. Our goods are digestible enough, just as our securities were, and only a little time was necessary to show their solid worth. An indigestion of goods is more serious, for it threatens an economic and industrial crisis. We are already consuming above a normal amount of everything. Our extravagant indulgence has already occasioned remark. When our friendly competitors in the world's markets are tightening their belts and increasing their efficiency we are making future troubles for ourselves by unduly reducing our productive capacity and increasing our consumption. If there were a method of selling all that we have in excess of normal wants, and of producing what the world is suffering for, that would be like walking downstairs instead of jumping off the roof. That is the difference between deflation in an economic manner and reaching the same result by constriction of credit to sound borrowers who will devote the funds to taking the weight of excess goods off our market.

Consider the reduction of the credit for exporting foodstuffs by the aid of a Government credit. Even so conservative a force in our official life as Senator GLASS when Secretary of the Treasury favored allowing $150,000,000, reduced later by a small fraction in consideration of similar grants from other sources. But Representative KITCHIN objects for political reasons to allowing even $50,000,000. What are political considerations worth when the cable reports that "the whole of Europe is being pressed toward starvation and ruin"? Is it in our interest that our best customers should be starved? Can it be possible that it is beneficial to our producers of foodstuffs that their prices should shrink in the manner of hogs at Chicago, instead of being exported? What will happen to prices of farmers' products generally when the Grain Corporation is liquidated, according to the bill Senator GRONNA reported yesterday? The proposal is that the profit of $50,000,000 shall be returned to the Treasury. Americans should blush to pocket such profits when there are larger profits in cash and humanity to be made by using at least those profits for exporting more foodstuffs. Consider further that the Edge bill, specially provided for relieving our banks from the burden of financing exports, has not yet been of any considerable help. Even the rules for operating under that bill are not yet ready. Even the action of our Federal Reserve is not operative as intended. It was intended to reduce the finance paper in the Reserve banks, and the idea is a good one. But the discounts against Liberties last week were $1,457,000,000, against $1,386,000,000 a week ago and $1,357,000,000 a year ago. All other discounts are smaller, while bank clearings are larger and rediscounts are larger. The national debt has already been reduced by $1,000,000,000, and that was necessary considering our sermon to other Governments. But it is open to question whether there is unalloyed benefit in that.

The cable provides contrasts by which we may be able to judge whether our policy is braver or wiser than that of those whose conditions are more disturbing than ours. Consider the collapse in our cotton market and the bold front put on the situation by the British consumers of cotton. The bold British take this time to establish a gold standard for India, while one of our Senators on the same day reopens the flirtation with bimetallism. The vigor of British banking attests a conviction in banking principles which we profess, but hardly practice. England believes that now is the time to be liberal with the right sort of credit. We hear nothing about alarm in London over call money rates. England is selling on credit to the weaker nations of Europe the goods which are bought for cash in dollars, at a premium, and is less worried by the balance of trade against her than we by a too large balance in our favor. There will come a time when England will profit by her boldness, just as now we are paying the penalty of excess of caution. The world of trade lies at our feet, and we are faint-hearted.

SCIENCE AND SNOW.

Shortly before this unmannerly storm hurtled in upon us from the Atlantic, Forecaster SCARR, pinnacled among the stars above the Whitehall Building, declared that "scientifically" there is no east wind in these latitudes." Be that as it may, it was demonstrated yesterday that, scientifically and otherwise, New York is not nowadays equipped to do battle with even a baby blizzard, whether it comes from the east or whether it canonically sweeps down upon us like a young Lochinvar out of the western altitudes of Medicine Hat.

There was a time when the Street Cleaning Department marshaled a multitude of carts and an army of shovelers, who attacked the storm before its last flurry was spent. Fifth Avenue and Broadway and all the main cross streets remained passable to traffic. If trouble was encountered, it was in the fashionable district bordering Fifth Avenue, where private motors did battle unaided. Delivery wagons, buses, and business trucks rendered an almost uninterrupted service. The force of snow carts now at the command of Commissioner MACSTAY being obviously insufficient, he pressed into service and manned a number of horse-drawn trucks; but of these 300 were rendered useless because the horses were improperly shod. If there was a shortage of men, it did not count in the situation. As a result of the breakdown of the emergency service, the number of men fighting the snow was reduced at one time to the 400 regularly employed by the department. Yesterday afternoon he had only 3,000 men at work where the need was for 14,000.

The breakdown of the Street Cleaning Department caught the whole city unprepared. Motor trucks and buses, unprepared for such an emergency, neglected to provide chains for their tires. Running into a drift, the wheels revolved impotently, glazing the snow beneath them. Fifth Avenue was lined with stalled green buses, about which taxis and motor cars had the utmost difficulty in making their way, and were often themselves stalled. If the blizzard had been of the usual severity, the motor truck and automobile traffic of the city would have come to a standstill. The trolley lines, meantime, suffered serious interruption of service. On the subways the service was normal.

It is Mayor HYLAN'S proclaimed intention to do away with the surface trolley lines, replacing them with lines of buses. All calculations have been made, we are told, and the result will be an economy of expense and an increase of service. It may not be amiss to inquire whether his budget includes an item for tire chains to be held in store against a recurrent breakdown in his Street Cleaning Department. Without them, it is to be feared, a system of surface bus lines will some day prove as unscientific as a blizzard off the Atlantic.

THE LIMIT OF FREE SPEECH.

In his testimony before the House Judiciary Committee Attorney General PALMER spoke words of needed truth and soberness about free speech, in whose name the Government is continually asked by well-meaning persons, too easily duped by a phrase, to abandon its own right and duty of self-preservation and self-protection. Obviously, the right of free speech or free public assembly or of free press is not absolute. The guarantees of the Bill of Rights, guarantees of the liberty of the citizen, must not be used to destroy all the rights of free citizenship and the forms of free government itself. As Mr. PALMER says: "There must be a dead line across which men cannot go in the exercise of the right of free speech, if the Government is going to protect itself as a popular Government in the interests of the people." He would draw that dead line "at the place, of course in a general way, where injury results, where there is a threat or promise or necessary implication of the use of force."

There are thousands of persons in this country who do intend and threaten such physical violence who intend or threaten to destroy the Government by physical force. Mr. PALMER says that there is no Federal statute which adequately covers their case. He objects, and on good grounds, to the proposed Sterling-Graham bill as too extreme, and in particular as lodging in the Post Office too great power of censorship and exclusion of publications from the mails. He believes that what is needed is an act of Congress, simple, violating none of the guarantees of the Bill of Rights, but providing punishment for the individual threatener of violence, the physical force seditionist.

Mr. PALMER read from some threatening circulars sent to Federal officials at the time of the bomb outrages last Summer, and asserted that, so far as one of these was emitted by an individual, no Federal statute makes the threat a crime. A man could come to the house of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court "with a bomb in his hand and a notice like that, and, so far as the Federal law is concerned, the Chief Justice would have to run away and hide to save his life, because there would be no Federal statute that we could use to punish the man for his act." The idolators and misunderstanders of "free speech" have been telling the Attorney General for months that the Department of Justice has plenty of power under existing statutes and that no new ones are needed. He thinks otherwise, and he may be supposed to know his own business.

There is a temperance and good sense about Mr. PALMER'S remarks too often wanting in the criticisms of the excellent but somewhat hasty gentlemen who manifest their own little obsession or hysteria by accusing of hysteria or obsession those who believe that incitements to disorder and revolution, threats of physical violence, should be punished. The people of this country have the power to amend and alter their Constitution and form of government by peaceful and constitutional means. The aliens or citizens who propose to substitute disorder, assassination, murder, the forcible upheaval of society, for those peaceful methods, deserve to be punished rigorously. No Bill of Rights can be stretched to protect them in the intolerable wrongs which they are eager to perpetrate.

EXTRADITION AND GERMAN HONOR.

Baron KURT VON LERSNER, in his letter returning the demand of the Allies that the Germans charged with crime be extradited, did not speak for himself alone when he said:

> I remind your Excellency of my constantly repeated declarations that no German functionary would be disposed to be in any way whatever instrumental in the realization of the demand for their extradition. I should be instrumental in it if I were to forward to the German Government the note of your Excellency. I therefore send it back herewith.

It may be thought that Baron VON LERSNER was taking a strained view of what would be "instrumental" when he declined the mechanical office of forwarding the note and resigned his place as head of the German delegation at Paris. But it merely shows how far extends the German resolution to have nothing to do with the execution of that part of the Treaty. He is now backed up by the whole German Cabinet, which unanimously declared that the extradition of these alleged criminals was an impossibility—"an utter physical impossibility." The only sense in which the alleged impossibility could be physical would be in case the Government did not believe it had physical force enough to carry out its decrees. It is more probable that the Cabinet simply took the same ground that was taken by LERSNER, that no German would be willing to aid in turning over another German to foreigners to try.

The Germans, then, repudiate that part of the Treaty which they signed agreeing to the punishment by the Allies of the assassins, firebugs, thieves, kidnappers, and other criminals who are charged, not with loyalty to Germany, but with crimes debarred by every code in Christendom. It is not the first time they have repudiated a treaty. This clause is nothing new in treaty-making; the world's history shows many cases in which the successful party has demanded and received the surrender of persons alleged by it to have committed acts outside of law. Germany refuses to carry out the Treaty, not because it is unprecedented or barbarous, but because she thinks she can refuse successfully.

It is not by any means certain that many of the accused persons will be convicted, or that if convicted they will suffer severe penalties. The United States, after its internecine war of nearly sixty years ago, tried a number of Confederates charged with violating the laws of war, but convicted very few and administered severe punishment to almost none, the most notable case being that of Captain WIRZ, the keeper of Andersonville prison camp. The German position does not apparently rest on the fear that severe penalties will be inflicted so much as upon the belief that German honor would be stained if any of these alleged criminals should be extradited.

German honor has stood a good deal. It is a queer product. It made a national hero of the Admiral who sank the ships of which he was trustee, an act which the rest of the world regarded as disgraceful. It even applauded the surrender of the whole German fleet without its having once been engaged in a general battle with the English fleet. It struck medals in honor of the sinking of the Lusitania. Apparently the German conception of honor is that it is honorable to win and dishonorable to be beaten. The means do not enter into the case. Why did Germany sign the Treaty if she is not going to carry it out? Because FOCH would have marched through her country if she had not. She would have agreed to anything to avert that calamity, but agreed in the hope of being able to dodge it later on, after the Allies had partially disbanded and returned to work.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Good Luck Not Appreciated.

Mr. FRANK HEDLEY doubtless has many worries and harassments, but they can hardly be regarded as excusing him for his contempt of one of nature's bounties. Called up before the Board of Estimate, Mr. HEDLEY seems to have let his eyes wander, and was promptly rebuked for it by the Friend of the People. "Look at me, HEDLEY," said the Mayor, "and answer my questions frankly." Whereupon the ungrateful lord of the subways responded: "It bores me to look at you all the time, Sir. I look at you most of the time, but once in a while I like to look around the room."

What artistic beauties can there be in the interior decorations of the City Hall comparable with the auspicious glow of that countenance? Mr. HEDLEY cannot excuse himself by pleading that he looks at the Mayor most of the time; why does he waste the rest of the time. It bores him! He is the kind of man, apparently, who would keep his eyes on the pages of Baedeker as he walks through a great cathedral. Elsewhere they have better taste; down at Palm Beach, for example, the season will not really begin until they see that august countenance, as splendid as the moon on the fourteenth night, beaming out over the sands in search of more enlightenment on the natural history of the jellyfish and the toad.

Telephones and Fire Hazards.

In this Winter of storms New York has had, it seems, an unusual number of difficult and dangerous fires, and that none of them has led to great loss of life or property must be ascribed to the excellence of that institution whose merits, though generally appreciated, are never appreciated enough—the Fire Department. In the case of the fire on West Ninth Street early Wednesday morning, the public interest is aroused by the apparent fact that in this case the loss of life could have been prevented. Fires from overheated furnaces are common in this weather, and it is not known whether in this case greater care could have prevented the fire; but almost certainly there would have been no loss of life but for the peculiar construction of the house. No fire escapes, a top floor set back from the street and barred off from access by an iron grating, a roof exit apparently not easy to reach, a heavy door which only the firemen's axes could break down—under such conditions the occupants of the house could have escaped only by extraordinary good fortune. In the difficult housing conditions of the last few years there seems to have been, perhaps unavoidably, a slackening of the strict insistence on safety regulations. We all accept it because we want to have a place in which to live, but such events as Wednesday's fire remind us that now and then somebody pays the penalty.

But the most important feature of this fire was the fact that several neighbors who discovered it tried to send in an alarm by telephone, and after trying for a time which probably was not so long as it seemed, but evidently was too long, found it impossible to get "Central" and ran out to hunt a fire alarm box. The difference of a minute or two in the arrival of the firemen might have meant, it is thought, that all three lives could have been saved. This is a difficulty which blaming a single operator will do nothing to mend; quite possibly it was not the operator's fault, for only a few days ago the family of a woman who had fallen eleven stories tried for twenty-five minutes, without success, to get the operator in another exchange in order to call a doctor. The telephone company has struggled against great obstacles for which it was in no way responsible, but somebody ought to find out what is the matter and how it can be remedied. If the telephone can no longer be depended on to summon help in case of fire, accident or crime, we ought to know it, and know why.

The Leap to the Planet Mars.

If communication with Mars must be definitely established and a rocket shot to that planet before Captain CLAUDE R. COLLINS of the New York City Air Police enters the multiple-charge projectile which is to take him as a pioneer to another world, he is not likely to bid farewell to this one. The Captain makes other conditions: he is to assist in devising the passenger rocket; ten prominent scientists are to agree about the success of his venture; he is to be insured for $10,000; he is to be allowed to make a lecture tour of the country by air "to awaken America to the menace we face" as a nation neglecting aeronautics; Colonel JEFFERSON DE MONT THOMPSON, President of the Aero Club of America; President L. L. DRIGGS of the American Flying Club, the aircraft manufacturers, and representatives of the press must help him in planning the adventure—the "leap," Captain COLLINS calls it—and in arranging his "tour of the nation."

Is the Great Risk Necessary?

If the Aero Club and the Flying Club, which are never backward in encouraging aeronautics, stand as sponsors for the "leap to Mars," they will surpass all their previous inspirations. If "ten prominent scientists" can be found to vouch for the rocket and the safety of its passenger, Captain COLLINS should have a great "gallery" when the time comes for him to be launched between two worlds. It should not be a free spectacle. In fairness to the daring adventurer that should be insisted upon. He would have been a man after the heart of JULES VERNE, whose Fancy was always ridden without a bit or blinkers. American aeronautics is certainly in need of stimulation, but does any enthusiast have to go as far as Mars to put America in the van of progress as Eclipse with her rivals nowhere?

FARMERS' GRIEVANCES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As one whose Winters are spent in New York City and Summers in trying to run a New England farm, perhaps my opinions on the subject of "Farmers' Unrest," as set forth by Government officials in your issue of Jan. 31, may have some interest and value.

I spent the first sixteen years of my life on a Maine farm. Most of the succeeding forty years were passed in cities of this country and Europe. A few years ago I bought the ancestral place on which I was raised and an adjoining farm, which gave me 200 acres altogether, and returned to boyhood occupation. I had never lost touch with agricultural interests and I returned to farming with a good knowledge of the improvements that had been made in this business during the last forty or fifty years.

After four years' experience I sold my stock and confined the cultivation of my farm to a large garden, of one acre, on which I can raise enough vegetables for my own use. During the war I felt it my duty to respond to the appeals of the Government. One year I grew six acres of potatoes and the next year the same acreage of wheat, and I found myself several hundred dollars out of pocket as the result of these efforts. I contented myself with regarding my loss as my contribution toward winning the war. I know from my own experience that there is not one farm in a hundred in New England which can be run under present conditions, and on the same basis that most other kinds of business are managed, and yield any profit. I can supply all the necessary facts and figures to prove this. I gave some of these facts and figures in a letter to the late Colonel Roosevelt soon after the speech which he made at Springfield, Ill., in which he touched on the subject. I received a prompt reply, in which Colonel Roosevelt said, "I thank you for your fine letter and I entirely agree with most of your statements." He added that it was his intention to do what he could to relieve the existing condition of things in this field.

That member of the Senate committee who remarked that the replies to the Government circular seemed to have come "mostly from a bunch of Bolshevists" is a very foolish man and one of a considerable number of foolish men who are misrepresenting the people in Washington. Let them beware how they refer to the farmers of the United States as Bolshevists. There is no more patriotic class of men in this country. They are anti-Bolshevist and anti-Communist. They are the bedrock of conservatism and safety during times of industrial unrest and upheaval. They have been very patient under gross injustice and mismanagement.

They think somewhat slowly, but today they are thinking to some purpose. They are asking many practical and pertinent questions, for which the member of the Senate committee above mentioned would find no answer. They want to know why the price of wheat was fixed while they were forced to pay more for fertilizer to raise that wheat than the selling price of the wheat would yield. They want to know why they were compelled to see their fruit rot because they could neither get a price which would pay the cost of picking and shipping nor sugar to preserve this fruit for their own use, while at the same time any city or town dealer could buy a hundred pounds of confectionery at one time if he wanted it. They are asking these and many more questions of similar import. They are aware that many of the city papers present a hostile attitude toward them, and they know that this hostility is based on selfishness and a profound ignorance of the conditions and circumstances under which they live and work.

The whole situation which involves the relation between farmer and consumer must be taken in hand at once and handled in an honest, intelligent and effective manner if disastrous consequences are to be avoided. There is no false alarm about that statement.

Fighting the High Cost of Living.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit another of your readers to say that he has followed the same conduct as to personal expenditures as that set forth by "J. T. D. B." in his letter which you publish today.

I eat simple meals and have not bought a suit of clothes, nor a hat, nor a pair of shoes in two years and more.

Shabby, do I appear? What of it? I have preserved my pocketbook from a heavy strain and my soul free for higher things.

St. Paul sums it all up in his saying: "The things seen are temporal; the things not seen are eternal."

"J. T. D. B." presents the only way to reduce the high cost of living. Unless this is done in 1920 we shall face a fearful panic in 1921. We are encompassed by a vicious circle; or, as I heard a thoughtful speaker say last night at the Open Table of the National Arts Club, a vicious spiral, which increases its enfolding grasp in geometrical ratio.

A vicious circle loses its all-embracing viciousness if you break it at any one point. A vicious spiral disappears if, instead of trying to stop its growth at the top, you confine your attack to a destruction of it at the bottom, where it is weakest.

So simple. So easy. Let every individual deny himself all luxuries, confine his personal expenses to mere necessities during 1920, and 1921 will find this country not facing a panic but peace. JABEL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read in my TIMES this morning that "at a conservative estimate it will cost the Federal Government $8,000,000 to enforce prohibition for the year"; also that "the Anti-Saloon League announces that it will devote the sum of $12,500,000 to the same purpose"! It seems to me that in making such a statement the A.-S. L. very effectually answers its claim that prohibition is the people's choice. EDWARD EMERY.

A WINTER DREAM.

I saw a mummied monarch yesterday
Upon whose brow a sacred scarab shone—
Circled with opal like the early dawn,
Bearing within its heart an emerald ray.
And as I watched the Winter firelight play
Upon the hearthstone, while the night drew on,
I dreamed of Rameses and Ctesiphon,
And many another far removed as they.

Without the moonlight showed its pallid smile
Upon the silent reaches of the snow;
Within, as scrolled on an Egyptian urn,
A dahebiyeh, with its sails aglow,
This cryptic figure lolling at the stern. CLINTON SCOLLARD.

ALCOHOL IN MEDICINE.

In Favor of Leaving the Decision to Doctors, Who, However, Disagree.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Feb. 3 Mr. Clyde L. Eddy discusses interestingly the question of whisky as a medicine. He correctly states that the American Medical Association went on record as being opposed to alcohol in 1917, and presumes apparently from this that the physician has declared himself opposed to the use of alcohol as a stimulant.

While it is true that the A. M. A. did pass resolutions in 1917 against the use of alcohol, its action was vigorously opposed by some prominent physicians, notably Dr. Hobert A. Hare of Philadelphia, Dr. Abraham Jacobi of New York and many others, and at the 1919 meeting of the A. M. A. Dr. Solis Cohn and Dr. Lambert Ott of Philadelphia and others declared prohibition a sociological error, and indorsed alcohol for medicinal purposes. The opinions of the leading physicians of New York City were recorded a few months ago when at a meeting of the New York County Medical Society a resolution was adopted condemning prohibition as being "irrational, unscientific and against the accepted usage of civilized countries elsewhere throughout the world."

The question as to the value of alcohol as a medicine being of interest, may I be permitted to point out that this phase of the alcohol question was carefully considered by Congress? It was my privilege to compile, for the late Congressman Meeker of St. Louis, abstracts from the writings of the foremost medical authorities with reference to the medicinal qualities of alcoholic preparations. The abstracts referred to were laid before Congress and were published in the Congressional Record, Sept. 14, 1918. Doubtless opposing views were also laid before Congress, yet Congress deemed it advisable, in passing the drastic National Prohibition act, to expressly provide for the manufacture and sale of alcoholic preparations for medicinal purposes, and while it has restricted the prescribing of spirituous liquors to one pint in ten days, it has placed no restrictions as to quantity upon the prescribing of wine and beer for medicinal purposes. Medical literature written from a purely scientific standpoint, and at a time when the prohibition issue did not cloud the minds of students, is replete with attestations of the value of alcohol.

Even our good friend Dr. Wiley has a guarded word of commendation for alcohol in his book, "Foods and Their Adulteration," 1918, from which I quote the following:

"There are some cases of ill health in which the advice to drink fermented beverages has been given and followed with benefit, especially if the mother, before the birth of the child, has been in the habit of using a moderate amount of alcohol. In such cases perhaps it is not advisable to prohibit entirely the use of these articles during the period of lactation."

The question is admirably summed up by Dr. W. Gilman Thompson, the noted New York physician, in his work, "Practical Dietetics," 1906, from which I quote as follows:

"Alcohol is a most helpful food and stimulant in emergencies when other food cannot be had or when the body is temporarily endangered from acute disease and the higher rate of combustion in fever or from failure to assimilate other nourishment. To offset the numerous cases of fatal alcoholism and the still larger number of cases of disease which would not presumably be fatal without the existing condition of chronic alcoholic poisoning of the system, are very many cases among both infants and adults in which life is undoubtedly saved by the prompt resort to this food and stimulant and its energetic use. So long as man is exposed to hardships and conditions arising from improper and deficient food supply, as well as to the numerous infectious diseases to which he is heir, alcohol must still be regarded rather as a blessing than a curse, for there is no form of food and stimulant combined, or stimulant alone, which, taken all in all, can be so completely relied upon in cases of emergency.

"Alcohol when taken alone will prolong life beyond the period at which it would terminate from starvation.

"Whatever controversy still exists over the physiological effect of alcohol as a food, it is still undeniable that in some cases of disease it is clinically indispensable."

In having placed upon the shoulders of the doctor the responsibility of seeing that alcoholic preparations are judiciously employed Congress recognized that the true physician can be depended upon to do his full duty to his patient and his country. CHARLES A. ROSEWATER.

One Country Only.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This insidious Irish propaganda, coupled with German propaganda and other evil agencies parading under sacred cloaks all over this land of the free, is getting to be very serious. It is to be feared more than any other evil agency known or suspected. I trust that the daily press will come out openly and stand for the right. Fight this thing and hit it squarely in the face. Tell the Irish the truth. Tell them that their shepherd is only a wolf in sheep's skin.

I am an Italian by birth. Have lived in the United States since 1892. Became naturalized American citizen in 1898 and fully appreciate the value of the oath of allegiance I took when admitted to citizenship. I respect my native country and next to the United States I love it, but America first. If for any reason at any time I should feel like taking up the cause of Italy or any other country, contrary to the attitude of the governing authorities of this country, I should first leave this country before I uttered a word against my country of adoption. The D. S. C. for Enlisted Men.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The championship of the cause of enlisted men in the American Expeditionary Forces, recommended for the D. S. M., is deserved. Contrary to apparent general belief, the major part of the enlisted personnel of the Expeditionary Forces had no opportunity to earn the D. S. C. Of the 2,200,000 men and officers in France, but 600,000, it is reported, were engaged with the enemy in active combat. The remaining million and a half were not in combat, and were, therefore, not eligible for the D. S. C., no matter how distinguished their performance of duty. The men who made the most of a discouraging situation, doing the work of the services of supply with such distinction as to call for the award of high honors, should not be denied the D. S. M. because they held no commissions. PHILIP WAGER LOWRY.

The Kaiser's Palaces.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Hearing recently of the German people's buying the Kaiser's wonderful palaces and paying him the price for them, I would suggest that the Allies demand this sum from the Kaiser to finance Europe at this time. Surely all this wealth accrued from his palaces—of which I believe there were fifty-eight or thereabouts—would be a splendid sum to alleviate somewhat the misery caused by this one individual. It is also suggested that if any of the other war lords associated with the Kaiser in this world plot would also donate any funds they may possess, enough could be got together to help distressed Europe indefinitely. CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The question as to whether or not capital punishment is effective as a deterrent of crime has been brought squarely before the people of this country by the recent public hanging in the county jail in Chicago.

A storm of protest against this public hanging has arisen, but up to the present time attention has centred on the action of the Sheriff and his method of inflicting the punishment, and very few have given consideration to the punishment itself. We feel that the broader aspect of the question should have consideration, and on behalf of the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor are asking the courtesy of your columns to bring before the public the result of research conducted by the committee.

When we first heard of the Chicago hanging we wired to Colonel John H. Wigmore, Dean of the Law School of Northwestern University and a Trustee of the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor, for the facts. Colonel Wigmore ascertained that the hanging was witnessed by not more than twenty-five convicts, who were not removed from their cells because of overcrowded conditions in the jail. The statement, therefore, that 200 convicts witnessed the hanging from special seats erected for the purpose was an exaggeration, and the Sheriff's motive was carelessness rather than the desire to produce moral effect on the prisoners. The fact remains, however, that twenty-five men did witness the hanging, and their ribald shoutings were the last sounds the condemned man heard! Yet if capital punishment is a deterrent for crime, there would have been some excuse for the Sheriff, provided he had intended to produce a moral effect on the prisoners. Would not the sight of a man done to death for his crime be a greater deterrent than the knowledge that somehow, some time, somewhere, a man paid with his life for the evil deed he had done?

The National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor has conducted extensive research into the history of capital punishment—there yet remains to be conducted scientific research into the natures and minds of the men who commit crimes of violence. Whether they will be found to be of such calibre that anything would deter them is a matter of doubt. At present our knowledge of the impulses which lead to crimes punishable by death is based on court evidence, theories of interested individuals, and last word confessions of the condemned. The conclusions which may be deduced from the above sources of information are that crimes of violence are committed in moments of blind rage, are acts of revenge, or of a person obsessed by fear, or by the desire to acquire the property of the person slain, or of one mentally disturbed or under the influence of alcohol.

Would the fear of the death penalty deter a person blind with rage? Would it hinder a man plotting to take the life of an enemy and revenge himself for a wrong done to some loved one? Too often under the latter circumstances the murderer follows his crime by suicide or gives himself up, willing to pay for his revenge. Does the woman destroying an illegitimate child stop to think of the consequences when terrified by the discovery of her betrayal? Does the man plotting to acquire the property of another expect that he will be caught? Can the feeble-minded, the insane, the drunkard, realize the sequence to their acts?

Historic research sustains the contention of Beccaria, the Italian criminologist of the eighteenth century, that "crimes are more effectively prevented by the certainty than the severity of the punishment." For instance, in England a remarkable dropping off of crime followed the mitigation of punishment, which began in 1830. When hanging was inflicted for trivial offenses, life was held cheap and crime was rampant. Capital punishment did not deter from the commission of crime even at public executions, for the preamble to a statute enacted in the days of Queen Elizabeth reads:

"Whereas, persons in contempt of God's commands and in defiance of the laws are found to cut pockets and pick purses even at places of public executions while executions are being done on criminals, be it therefore enacted that all such persons shall suffer death without the benefit of clergy."

Furthermore, the death penalty deters from conviction, as it has been the universal experience of jurists that juries are not inclined to bring in a verdict which will result in the infliction of the death penalty, and the retention of this punishment serves as a method of intimidating the jury rather than the would-be murderer. The experience of every State which has abolished the death penalty has been that the percentage of convictions to indictments is always higher after the death penalty has been abolished.

The State of Maine affords a striking illustration of this increase in convictions; prior to the abolition of the death penalty in Maine, 15.04 of the number on trial for murder were convicted; after the abolition of this penalty the proportion of convictions rose to 64 per cent.

The first requirement of a reorganized penal system is the interesting of men of broad viewpoint and recognized ability to undertake the administration of penal institutions. Such men are deterred from serving by the fact that to be "Lord High Executioner" is practically a part of their duties, not that the Warden actually pushes the electric button or draws the noose, but he issues the official invitations to the execution, he orders what shall be done. He may be absolutely convinced that capital punishment should be abolished, but he must perforce countenance its continuance by accepting the office of prison head. Those who are actively in the prison work realize too well the effect of this mediaeval form of punishment, both on the recruiting of a prison staff and on those whose duty it is to inflict the punishment.

Our human minds are not infallible. The records of State after State disclose the fact that innocent men have been convicted on false testimony, often on the testimony of enemies. Many States are attempting to determine how to make reparation to a man for unjust conviction. The death penalty is irrevocable!

The arguments against the death penalty are many. As citizens we must evaluate them. The Sheriff in Chicago has offended the good taste of the nation. May he not have done good service in forcing us to face this matter, to reach a just conclusion unprejudiced by precedent, and, if convinced that the death penalty is not eff

MISS HECHT WEDS IN BOWER OF ROSES

CRYSTAL ROOM A GARDEN

The wedding of Eric H. Marks, a son of the former Borough President and Mrs. Marcus M. Marks, and Miss Beatrice Hecht, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Hecht of 55 West Fiftieth Street, was celebrated at 7 o'clock last evening in the Crystal Room of the Ritz-Carlton, which was turned into a chapel for the purpose. The wedding ceremony, performed by Dr. John Lovejoy Elliott of the Society for Ethical Culture, took place in a large pergola covered with trailing white roses, the bridal party entering through a rustic gate to the pergola.

The guests, coming from the snowdrifts piled high in the streets, were ushered into a veritable garden, for Spring flowers and foliage were arranged in profusion around the foyer and up the balustrades of the stairways leading from the Crystal Room to the ballroom, where fuchsia trees in full bloom, several feet high, formed the centrepieces of the dinner tables. Later the tables were removed and the fuchsia trees added to the other decorations of the ballroom, and there was dancing.

Miss Hecht, who walked with her father, wore a gown of satin, covered with Carrickmacross lace, and her lace veil was held with orange blossoms. Miss Margaret Hirsh, the maid of honor, was in blue tulle and carried a large lavender fan. The bridesmaids, in lavender tulle, with blue fans, were the Misses Virginia Cole, Ruth McCabe, Doris Marks, Rosalie Dannenbaum, Katherine Bernard and Claire Weiss. Alan Marks was his brother's best man and the ushers were Herman Schram, Warren Marks, Mortimer Elsner, George Hecht and Myron Marks.

Mr. and Mrs. Marks have gone to Jekyl Island, and later will go from there to Cuba. On their return to New York they will make their home in one of the hotels here.

SEE NATION MENACED BY SMOKING WOMEN

FEAR DANGER TO UNBORN

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church in a statement issued from its headquarters in Washington tonight condemns smoking by women in the United States as a menace to the nation.

"The increase in the use of tobacco by women during the past year is alarming," the announcement read. "A phase of present day feminism demands every privilege for women that man claims for himself. Concerning the justice of this demand there can be no question. Concerning its expediency much can be said.

"The more sedentary life of women tends to an excess in the use of tobacco and produces more serious results than is caused by its use among men. The nervous constitution of a woman has been compared to that of an adolescent boy. The effect of tobacco upon them is similar to the effect on immature youths.

"The most serious factor, however, is the innate physical difference between men and women, involving a difference in responsibilities, a difference in duties and privileges. The tobacco habit when contracted must be satisfied at all times.

"The woman at regular periods suffers nervous disturbances. She must bear children for nine months, during which the undeveloped child is drugged by tobacco in the blood of a smoking mother. She nurses her child, if possible, for many months, and if the mother uses tobacco it is present in distinct quantities in the milk. At this time of change of life, the woman is nervously unstrung, sometimes to the point of insanity. If she uses tobacco at this time her health is seriously handicapped.

"There has been a great deal of pretended alarm over the possibility of tobacco prohibition. This should not blind any one to the necessity of making an earnest appeal to women to refrain from the use of tobacco in the name of the country's welfare, no matter what strict justice may declare their right and privilege to be."

MRS. ASTOR MEETS LEAGUE.

Foreign-Born Citizens Gather at Her Fifth Avenue Home.

In spite of the storm, which made traveling difficult last night, many men and women interested in familiarizing the foreign born with American ideals attended the sixth anniversary meeting of the League of Foreign-Born Citizens at the home of Mrs. Vincent Astor, 840 Fifth Avenue. Mrs. Astor told of the important work done by the league since its growth in membership from five in 1913 to its present enrollment of almost 5,000.

"The misguided foreigner who advocates changes in our Government by violent methods is no more dangerous to American ideals than the native-born American who exhibits an attitude of ignorance and indifference toward the foreign born in our midst and who is quite willing to remain ignorant on the question," said Mrs. Astor.

Colonel Arthur Woods, Chairman of the National Americanization Commission of the American Legion, told of the problems of Americanization and of the need of a better program of education. Nathaniel Peffer, President of the league, said the most important problem was the social unrest among the foreign born, due, in a large measure, to the profiteering.

George W. Wickersham, Vice Chairman of the advisory board, said that if the league had existed thirty years ago there would have been a more united country during the recent crisis. George Gordon Battle presided.

Crescent A. C. Players Defeat Columbia Club Men—Both Contests Close and Interesting.

CLASS B.
Final Standing of the Clubs.

Club.	Played.	W.	L.	P.C.
Yale	8	8	0	1000
Harvard	8	5	3	.625
Crescent	8	4	4	.500
Princeton	8	2	6	.250
Columbia	8	1	7	.125

The squash tennis players of the Yale Club yesterday put the final touch upon their winning of the team title in Class B of the Metropolitan Association by defeating the representatives of the Princeton Club, the sharers of their home courts, three matches to two, and thus closing their schedule with a clean score of eight successive victories. At the same time the Crescent Athletic Club made sure of its clear title to third place by winning from the Columbia University Club also by a score of 3 to 2, the wearers of the blue and white thus remaining at the bottom of the ladder, with Princeton just ahead of them. The Harvard Club, which completed its schedule last week, finished in second place, but had already taken first honors in Class A.

The Tigers came very close to handing Yale an upset as their parting gift yesterday, for two of the most dependable Eli racqueters, William Adams, Jr., and C. J. MacGuire, were defeated, the former by Jesse Hoyt and the latter by E. C. Olds, and if any one of the remaining three Princetonians had been able to come through with a victory the final team score would have been reversed.

As it was, both Stuyvesant Wainwright and J. C. Tomlinson, Jr., had their troubles to win in straight games, the second session in each case going to extra points. Wainwright defeated B. Harris, a newcomer on the Princeton side, 15–10, 17–15, while Tomlinson nosed out George Walker, Jr., by the close count of 15–9, 18–14.

Stern to the Rescue Again.

As usual, it was up to the anchor man of the Yale team, H. R. Stern, to save his side in the final match of the day, and once more he came to the scratch by disposing of Lloyd Richards in impressive fashion at 15–4, 15–4.

The surprise of the afternoon was the triumph of young Hoyt over the newly crowned individual Class B national champion. Adams seemed to be suffering from the natural reaction due to the strenuous week which he had put in in the process of acquiring his new title. He had brought himself up to the highest level of squash of which he is capable in defeating such men as F. S. Whitlock and A. H. Tomes of Harvard and his club mate, Stuyvesant Wainwright. Yesterday there was a distinct let-down in his play and after he had won the opening game at 15–11 he seemed to have very little in reserve. Hoyt ran through him in astonishingly easy fashion to square the match at 15–3, and then kept up his fine all-around hitting to take the rubber by a count of 15–11. The play of the winner would have been formidable yesterday against the best of the men in his class, and even though he enjoyed a slight advantage in the natural relapse of Adams, after his championship form of the past few days, his victory was well earned.

Olds also played impressively against the steady and reliable MacGuire. He took the first game, at 15–11, by clearly superior placing and harder hitting, and although he lost the second by the same score, he had enough in reserve to come through the rubber handily at 15–8. Wainwright was the first man to score for Yale, and his victory by no means came easily, as the less experienced Harris put up a splendid fight, particularly in the second game, which ran to 17–15.

Tomlinson Has Hard Match.

Tomlinson also had to travel at his fastest pace to dispose of George Walker, Jr., who, in spite of his recent illness, displayed a stubborn defense, which forced the second game to a total of 18-14 before the match was over. Stern took no chances with Richards, with the final result of the match and Yale's clean slate depending upon his efforts. He went right after his opponent from the start, and hammered the ball to all parts of the court with relentless speed and accuracy. Richards did well to score four aces in each game against the quality of squash tennis that his rival put on exhibition in this crucial struggle.

There were surprises, too, in the meeting of the Crescent Athletic Club and Columbia, the greatest perhaps being the defeat of R. L. Strebeigh by Harold Rowe at 18–16, 18–16. Almost as sensational, however, was H. W. Dangler's victory over R. E. Wigham, scored at 18–15, 15–4, 15–0. I. M. Cornell gave Columbia a good start by winning from A. W. Baxter, Jr., at 15–12, 15–11, and F. M. Simonds, Jr., contributed the other point to the loser's score with a hard-won victory over J. W. Ivins in three games; scores, 13–15, 18–16, 15–9. Harold Somers, a newcomer to the Crescent team, clinched the victory for his side by eliminating George A. Gould, Jr., also making his appearance for the first time this season, at 17–14, 15–5.

The two games in which Rowe defeated Strebeigh were about as close as a game of squash tennis permits. In each case the Columbia man seemed to have a safe lead, only to be caught by his hard-working opponent and beaten in the extra hands made necessary by a tie score of 13—all. Dangler's exhibition against Wigham was even more remarkable, in that he lost the first game and then romped through two sessions with a total loss of only four points, the last game going at love.

Yale (5), Princeton (2).

E. C. Olds, Princeton, defeated C. J. MacGuire, Yale, 15—11, 11—15, 15—8; Jesse Hoyt, Princeton, defeated William Adams, Jr., Yale, 11—15, 15—3, 15—11; Stuyvesant Wainwright, Yale, defeated B. Harris, Princeton, 15—10, 17—15; H. R. Stern, Yale, defeated Lloyd Richards, Princeton, 15—4, 15—4; J. C. Tomlinson, Jr., Yale, defeated George A. Walker, Jr., Princeton, 15—9, 18—14.

Wigham, Columbia, 15—13, 15—4, 15—0; F. M. Simonds, Jr., Columbia, defeated J. W. Ivins, Crescent, 13—15, 18—16, 15—9; Harold Somers, Crescent, defeated George A. Gould, Jr., Columbia, 17—14, 15—5.

Athletics Minus Football Cost Harvard $30,000 Loss

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 5.—Athletics at Harvard during the academic year 1918-1919 were conducted at a loss of more than $30,000, according to the report of the Graduate Manager and Treasurer, Fred W. Moore, made public today. Baseball was the only sport to show a profit. The omission of 'Varsity football was largely responsible for the deficit.

The expenses of the athletic program from September to June totaled $62,419.88, while the receipts reached only $32,211.78. The loss on the five major sports was about $7,500, although baseball netted a profit of $5,500. Soccer, golf, lacrosse, boxing and general athletics were maintained at a loss of $15,000. More than $16,000 was spent for athletic construction and improvement.

MRS. MALLORY WINS FROM MRS. WARING

Ex-Champion Enters Final of Brooklyn Tennis Tourney by Straight-Set Victory.

Mrs. Franklin I. Mallory, who as Miss Molla Bjurstedt, four times won the women's national lawn tennis championship of the United States, yesterday entered the final round of the invitation indoor tournament in progress at the Brooklyn Heights Casino, by defeating Mrs. Samuel E. Waring of the New York Tennis Club in straight sets, 6—0, 6—1. Miss Eleanor Goss of the West Side Club became the other finalist through the default of Mrs. De Forest Candee, who was stormbound in her Long Island home. The final match will be played this afternoon and the doubles will probably be brought up to the last bracket as well. Only one match was played in the team event yesterday, Miss Caroma Winn and Miss Phyllis Walsh defeating Miss Marie Wagner and Mrs. Edward Raymond, 6—4, 6—2, and thus reaching the semi-final round.

It was a pity that Mrs. Waring was facing so irresistible a game as that of the ex-champion yesterday morning, for her own tennis on this occasion would have defeated almost any of the other ranking women players. Never has she hit so hard or so steadily and never have all the departments of her game, service, ground strokes and volleying been so consistently dependable. It was only because Mrs. Mallory could always show at least a slight superiority in all of these details that the games went so steadily against the new star of the courts.

The actual play was far closer than the game totals would suggest and the one tally which fell to Mrs. Waring's credit late in the match, was earned by pure merit at a time when Mrs. Mallory was trying hard for the impressive showing of two successive love sets.

Mrs. Waring began by holding the former title holder to deuce games in the first two sessions and seemed full of confidence in her ability to make her rival earn every point. The consistent speed and accuracy of Mrs. Mallory, however, upset her somewhat in the latter half of this set, and, after losing a love-game, for a lead of 4 to 0, Mrs. Waring could pick up only two more points before the set went against her at 6—0. In the second set, Mrs. Mallory made the remarkable record of earning 15 points by clean placement shots, Mrs. Waring's errors totaling only one more than her own.

The quality of tennis at this stage was very high, both women driving hard for the side-lines and coming to the net after they had forced the openings to finish off the rallies with sharply angled volleys. Mrs. Waring trailed at 0—5 before she finally achieved her ambition of taking a game from the famous Norsewoman. The points had gone to deuce before she was able to catch her opponent out of position, scoring once on a volley and then driving beautifully across court to the side-line for a cleanly earned ace. Mrs. Mallory, however, on taking the service again, cleaned up the match at 6—1, with the loss of only one more point.

The summaries:

Singles—Semi-final Round—Mrs. Franklin I. Mallory defeated Mrs. Samuel E. Waring, 6—0, 6—1; Miss Eleanor Goss won from Mrs. De Forest Candee by default.
Doubles—Second Round—Miss Caroma Winn and Miss Phyllis Walsh defeated Miss Marie Wagner and Mrs. Edward Raymond, 6—4, 6—2.

MIDWEEK GAMES PLANNED AT YALE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 5.—Yale football officials are discussing a plan which has been devised by Professor Clarence W. Mendell, Chairman of the Athletic Board of Control, for including a number of the New England, and possibly New York, smaller colleges on the Yale football schedule. Year after year, Yale has attempted to arrange games with a number of these teams, who formerly accepted their challenges, only to be politely informed that a game with Yale was out of the question because it invariably left the team badly exhausted for two or three weeks and interfered with the ambition of the small college to defeat some rival.

Professor Mendell has suggested forming a second team at Yale to challenge several small college elevens for midweek contests. He believes that the games would prove popular with the undergraduates of Yale and the smaller colleges, and that not only could Yale give the small college elevens a game in the Bowl, but that possibly the Yale second team could go to some of the small college grounds for a game.

Professor Mendell said today that he regretted that Yale had not been able to arrange football games recently with its sister-Connecticut colleges, Wesleyan and Trinity. Whenever possible, Yale meets these teams in baseball, basketball and tennis.

Professor Mendell does not believe that the plan which Fred W. Moore, the Harvard Director of Athletics, proposed, of arranging doubleheaders, would be practicable for Yale to attempt. It was not favored by several small colleges, whose representatives have been sounded, but the plan of games, especially on Wednesday afternoon, between the Yale second team and the small college elevens, has found favor. The plan will be brought up before the Yale Athletic Board of Control soon for definite action.

Dr. Albert H. Sharpe, Yale's new athletic director, favors the scheme. He increased the size of the Yale football squad from 75 to 200 players last season, and greatly desires expanding undergraduate interest in football. Both Dr. Mendell and Dr. Sharpe believe that the second eleven players would welcome matches with outside elevens, instead of being subjected the entire season to the dull routine of daily practice with the 'Varsity team.

MACK SHOWS PESSIMISM.

May Be No American League This Year, He Says—Backs Johnson.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, in a speech at the annual dinner of the Philadelphia Sportings Writers' Association tonight, said the fight against President Ban Johnson of the American League "by a certain crowd" cannot force him to resign.

"He can stay there as long as he wishes the position,' said Mack. "They will hurt none but the innocent clubs not taking part in the fight. President Johnson is the man who made the American League second to none."

"I am not certain if there will be an American League this year," Mack added, "but if there is, I expect to make a good showing with my team."

MAJORS MAY ADOPT NEW PLAYER LIMIT

Measure to Hold Clubs to 35 Men Out of Season Will Be Discussed Next Week.

President John Heydler of the National League said yesterday that when the majors had their joint meeting in Chicago next week a rule would be adopted limiting the number of players which each club can carry out of season to thirty-five. There is no limit now on the number of players a club can tie up outside of the season. Some of the clubs now have as many as forty to take South on the training trips.

Before the war the player limit for out of season was thirty-five, but when the break came with the minors and because of war conditions this limit was abolished. The result has been that some of the clubs have tied up many more players than they can possibly use. With the number limited to thirty-five, there will be many more players available on the baseball market. It will be a better thing for the players, as much of the young excess talent under contract to the more prosperous clubs may be able to land jobs with other clubs.

Last year the player limit in both leagues during the championship season was placed at twenty-five. The American League has always maintained this number, but the National League cut its limit down during the period of the war. When baseball prospered last season, the National League, at the suggestion of the New York and Chicago clubs, went back to the twenty-five player limit during the playing season.

The training season which begins at the end of the present month, will be the most elaborate the major league clubs have ever taken. Close to forty players, regulars and recruits, will be taken by nearly all of the clubs. If the leagues adopted a player limit of thirty-five, it will still be possible for the clubs to take other youngsters South but not under contract. More young players will get a chance to make good this season than ever before. Many of the major league veterans are about at the end of their baseball careers, and the recruits have a better chance to fill the vacancies, if they can make good.

Major league managers figure that the clubs will be in much better shape to begin the championship season than ever before because all of them will take part in interleague series. Games between the major league clubs bring about better results, according to the managers, than games between the majors and the minor league clubs of the South. A few years ago it was a novelty for National and American League clubs to clash before the season started. In fact there was a strong feeling against the practice among the baseball managers.

This attitude, however, has entirely changed, and this season more interleague games have been booked than ever before in the history of the game. Managers now consider that the players get into better shape playing against major league opposition than against the minor organizations. The batting eye finds itself quicker against real major league pitching than against the wild assortment of bush league batters, according to the opinions of the big circuit managers.

New York baseball fans are interested in the announcement credited to Babe Ruth, who started for the East from Los Angeles Wednesday, that he was going to demand part of his $125,000 purchase price before he signed a Yankee contract. According to Manager Miller Huggins, who talked with Ruth on the coast last month, the conditions proposed to him by the New York club were acceptable to the home-run slugger.

As it is understood here, the Yanks took over Ruth's contract for $10,000 a year, which has two seasons to run, and no new contract is necessary with the player to hold him. It is believed that Ruth signed some kind of an agreement with Huggins about a boost in salary. He demanded $20,000 a year from Boston. Ruth stated that he expected to arrive here next Tuesday, but if he does he will find no one at home in baseball circles, because everybody will be at the big baseball confab in Chicago.

SPRING TRAINING IS NOT A REST PERIOD

By CHRISTY MATHEWSON.

There is talk already of Spring training.

To many of the uninitiated this brings up visions of sunny Southlands, where baseball players stroll through verdant groves, picking ripe oranges from the trees, lolling about in white flannels during off hours, and plunging anon into the billowy surf. This is a mirage, it isn't a vision. Mighty few ball teams have ever trained anywhere near an orange grove; few, if any, are where they can hear the roar of the surf, and there "ain't no off hours." After a Spring training trip, about all my mind retains is a haunting memory of changing uniforms and having somebody yelling at me to move faster.

Well, a ball player's fancy turns to getting off weight, first of all. The heavier a man gets through the Winter the more trying his Spring training is going to be. I remember one year when Otis Crandall reported to the Giants looking quite fat. McGraw was still shaking hands with the new arrival when he opened up on him.

The Reducing System.

"What in thunder have you been doing this Winter, Otie," he growled, "appearing in a show as the stout lady? You'll have to take a lot of that off."

"Taking it off," was accomplished by running several miles every day in the tropical weather clad in arctic attire. At the finish of the run he would roll up in a number of blankets in order to perspire a little more. After that season, Otis's training, like charity, began at home. I think he was always pretty near normal in weight when he reported in later years.

While some men are always trying to take weight off, others are obliged to strive to put it on. Crandall was a man who played at his best when he was trained down light. George Wiltse was one who always needed to put it on to be at his top notch speed.

The recruits from the minors always lend a little variety to Spring training life, if nothing else. Many of them try to horn in with the stars of the big circuit, seeming to think that by doing this they stand a better chance of being retained by the manager.

When a young player really wants to learn something, any oldtimer who is not a crab will be glad to help him, but the trouble is that many of the youngsters think they are going to show the big league a lot of things about baseball. They usually show that they haven't anything valuable enough to keep them under the big tent.

I have seen many a young player from the minors ruin his career by trying too hard at first. Some of them come into camp and the very first day put everything they have on the ball, trying to impress the manager.

I can tell you that a pitcher has to start his old salary arm in easy in the Spring, and each year he's got to start easier and go through more tortures to get it into shape.

Pitcher's Life the Hardest.

I honestly think that the lot of the pitcher on the training trip is the hardest of them all. It is just a steady grind. He goes out each morning with acatcher who has a big mitt and a loud voice. The best kind of a catcher for this work is one who is never satisfied, no matter what you give him.

I never tried to throw a curve for ten days, at least, after going South. A misplaced curve early in the season may give a man a sore arm for the rest of the year. After warming up for an hour or so, the pitcher usually tries sending slow ones to a batter and getting the ball on the bound. This is good for limbering up.

The only real enjoyment of the day is playing he Yannigans (second team) in the afternoon. Each pitcher generally gets a chance on the mound then. The batters are out of form so early in the season and the widest kind of a curve will fan them out. This makes you feel for a while that you are "some pitcher." After the practice game, always comes a run a few times round the field—without cutting corners.

Yes, it's a great life, Spring training—if you don't weaken.

CHARLIE LEYDECKER SHOWS FAST HEELS

GREAT FINISH IN KENWOOD

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 5.—Mrs. J. Arthur's Charlie Leydecker, which recently gave evidence that he was again in form by taking the measure of George Starr and other good ones, made it two straight at the Fair Grounds today by scoring very handily in the City Park Highweight Handicap at six furlongs. He led home Courtship by a length and a half and never gave his backers a moment of uneasiness. Ticklish was third, and though well up throughout did not offer contention to the winner.

Charlie Leydecker had to carry 120 pounds in this highweight test, but this did not have much effect on the quotations made against him. He is a good sprinter when right and the patrons backed him so liberally today that he went to the post a 3 to 2 choice, with Courtship in considerable demand at 2 to 1. With only five starters this contest proved to be a good one, as there was no bumping and none of the starters suffered any mishaps.

Charlie Leydecker was away to a flying start and ran in front all the way, with Courtship close at his heels as he left the barrier. These two had the race pretty much to themselves for the entire distance, as Ticklish, after getting away third, was taken back almost at once to last place. The two front runners set a fast pace as was indicated by the time, 1:14 1-5, which was made over a track that was only fairly good. The winner soon raced Courtship into submission, and at the five-eighths pole the latter gave up the contest for first money but continued to make a good effort, and easily stalled off Ticklish in the battle for the place. Ticklish was able to dispose of Eulogy in the stretch drive, and Siesta, who got away well, quit after going a quarter of a mile.

One of the best finishes that has been seen here in some time occurred in the fifth race, the Kenwood Purse, at six furlongs, in which less than half a length separated first and third horse at the wire. This close finish resulted in a foul and a disqualification.

The race went to Arrowhead, which moved up with a rush in the stretch, after being badly outrun in the early part of the contest. Sweet Liberty, which had been in front from the start, was finally overtaken a sixteenth from home, and at the same time Minute Man, which had been second all the way, made a determined effort to go to the front. As the latter began to move up, Sweet Liberty swerved over and bumped him, for which foul Sweet Liberty was disqualified after finishing second, and the place was awarded to Minute Man. As Minute Man was running well at the time it is possible he would have been the winner but for the interference. As it was, Arrowhead, Sweet Liberty and Minute Man fought it out to the wire, and finished only noses apart. Arrowhead was a 12 to 1 shot.

The first race, for two-year-olds at three furlongs, provided a keen contest. The winner's share went to Get 'Em, a bay gelding by Marse Abe, but only after a hard tussle to outgame Repeat. There were nine starters in this juvenile event. Get 'Em had the most speed at the start, and gained a comfortable lead by the time the stretch was reached. But making the turn he went wide and permitted Repeat and Morning Face to come through on the inside. Stock shook up Get 'Em, and once straightened out still had enough to spare so he could win by a length. Repeat took the place from Morning Face by a length. It was the first start for the latter.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Feb. 5.—The Rutgers baseball team has booked an intersectional game with the University of California diamond athletes, to be played in this city on June 14, according to announcement made today by Graduate Manager Heitkamp of Rutgers. Whether or not Rutgers will journey to the coast next year for a return engagement has not been decided.

FRENCH PROMOTER NOW CLAIMS OPTION

Copyright, 1920, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—Theodor Vienne, well-known Parisian, who founded Wonderland—a sort of Riverview Park proposition—announces he has a sixty-day option on Carpentier's services dating from Feb. 1 until March 30.

Vienne now is at Chamonix for a short rest and will return to Paris in a few days. He has been in touch with Dempsey by cable trying to line up the American on some proposition.

He intends to make every effort to stage eight bouts at Pershing Stadium, and already has received promises from the French Ministry, which now holds the property at Vincennes, that he can rent it.

It was suggested recently that, due to the high cost of wood and the need for wood for construction of frame houses, the Stadium would be taken down and the lumber used. Vienne obtained a promise from the authorities that the Stadium would remain untouched until it was settled that the Carpentier-Dempsey fight would be held elsewhere than in Paris.

From confidential sources it is understood that Vienne promised to obtain Carpentier 2,000,000 francs for his end of the purse, win, lose or draw. However, Carpentier is not bound to accept Vienne's offer. The Frenchman is only engaged not to sign up with any other promoter until April 1.

Cochran dropped out of the negotiations on Sunday, when his option with Carpentier expired. Descaps went to London to see him after conferring with Abraham Carlos, who represents the Fox films here, and who offered $250,000 for Carpentier.

With the dollar worth almost fifteen francs today this makes Vienne's offer look trifling, but Vienne had a gentleman's agreement with Francois Descamps, Carpentier's manager, when the dollar was worth about ten francs last December.

BOXING CONGRESS ELECTS.

Lord Lonsdale and M. Rousseau Are Chosen Vice Presidents.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—The International Boxing Congress this afternoon elected the officers of the Bureau of the International Boxing Union. Lord Lonsdale, Great Britain, and Paul Rousseau, France, were elected Vice Presidents, the third vice-presidency being reserved for a representative of the United States.

The election of the President was deferred until a candidate is proposed by the Assembly and can be personally informed. Bell Hart, England, was appointed Secretary, and Mr. Douglas, England, Treasurer.

The union will have its headquarters in London. The next Congress will meet at Antwerp after the Olympic games. All the members of the Congress expressed the hope that America would be represented.

At the session today Great Britain, France, Brazil, Holland, and Belgium were represented. There was a discussion on statutes and regulations for the International Boxing Union and the designation of world boxing champions in all classes.

ROMANO WINS IN OVERTIME.

Outpoints Caplin in Four Rounds at Bensonhurst Y. C.

Final bouts in the Bensonhurst Yacht Club monthly boxing tournament furnished excellent entertainment last night when the amateurs in several divisions met for premier honors. J. Romano of the Greenwich House A. C. found as his opponent in the 118-pound class L. Caplin of Rutgers' Gymnasium and won after a hard tussle which went to an extra round before a decision was made.

In the 142-pound class A. Pearsall of St. Anthony's proved far too clever for Joe Fiorlo of the Paulist A. C. in the semi-final bout, and the referee stepped in to halt the melee after a couple of rounds. In the final Pearsall outpointed Jack Rooney of Holy Cross Gymnasium after Rooney had received the decision over E. Enner of the Clark House A. C. in the semi-final.

Semi-finals.

REYNOLDS TO MEET MALONEY FOR TITLE

Defeats Burdett and Will Play Leader in State Pool Tournament Today.

Player.	W.	L.	H.R.	P.C.
J. J. Maloney	6	0	15	1000
E. F. Reynolds	5	1	23	.833
J. J. Ahearn	4	3	14	.571

W. A. Tilt	3	4	19	.429
S. B. Burdett	2	5	29	.285
H. Foss	1	6	13	.143

E. F. Reynolds yesterday drew up to a position where he is again a serious contender for the New York State pocket billiard championship of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players by defeating S. D. Burdett at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn by a score of 100 to 88. Reynolds has now won five games and lost one, and today he will meet J. J. Maloney to fight it out for the title. Maloney has played six games without meeting a defeat, and a victory for Reynolds today will place him in a tie with the present leader. In other words, Reynolds has to defeat Maloney twice to win the championship.

Reynolds gained a long lead in the early part of the game, and at the half-way mark it seemed that he would win without extending himself. Burdett had not been able to get a good break all evening, and had only twice scored in double figures. But when he appeared to be badly beaten he suddenly came through with a fine run, in which he clicked off 29 points, making the high run of the tournament, and this put him right back into the contest with Reynolds.

Both men then settled down to cautious play, with Reynolds needing 8 to go out, and Burdett needing 12. Reynolds finally discovered a rather difficult combination, which, if he made it, would give him a good break shot and a chance to go out. He measured the shot and dropped the ball, got the break he was expecting and ran off the needed balls. Reynolds had previously made a run of 23, which was his best effort for the game.

In the evening, J. J. Ahearn defeated C. E. Hurd by 100 to 70, and had little trouble in annexing the game. This assures Ahearn of third place in the tournament. He had a high run of 25, which made his victory certain, but he had already gained a big lead when this run came.

The scores by frames:

Reynolds—14 7 1 10 4 14 14 8 7 4 0 0 0 9 8—100. High run, 23; scratches, 0.

Burdett—0 6 12 4 10 0 0 6 7 10 14 14 8 0—88. High run, 20; scratch, 1.

HERBERT DEFEATS LAWLOR.

A. Simei	1	5	15	.167
C. Fulton	0	5	13	.000

Playing at his best, but at a time when he no longer had a chance to land first place, Walter Herbert defeated Thomas Lawlor, of the Elks Club, rather easily in the national pocket billiard championship tournament of the American Amateur Billiard Association at John Doyle's Academy last night. He emerged victor by 100 to 75 and had the game safely in hand all the way.

The tournament has now come to a three-cornered fight for the title with Edward Kirby, Thomas McCabe and Morgan Hughes as the contenders. Kirby has to meet both of these youngsters while their only remaining games are the ones with Kirby. The present title holder, therefore, has a difficult task before him to win the honors again.

The score by frames:

Herbert—12 9 12 5 3 1 11 10 13 10 3 11—100. High run, 12. Scratches, 4.

Lawlor—5 5 9 11 13 3 4 1 4 11 6 4—75. High run, 13. Scratches, 5.

Scores Easy Victory Over Oriental Park Course.

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 5.—Poacher, the five-year-old son of Star Shoot, made it two in a row when he galloped off with the fifth event at the Oriental Park course today. He was the medium of a heavy plunge, being backed down from 7 to 5 to even money at post time.

Jockey Fator, who had the mount on the Polk horse, rode a very confident race, being content to wait until well in the stretch before making a move on him. Well inside the furlong pole the boy shook him up and the gelding, responding gamely, went into the lead and won by three lengths. Jellison was a length in front of Don Thrush.

Himiltrude was another good thing that went over, and the layers experienced their worst afternoon of the present meeting. A Collins had the leg up on Himiltrude and he never let any grass grow under the hoofs of the good thing.

Dimitri, the 2 to 1, favorite in the third race, had to do his best to defeat the field opposed to him. He was outrun to the head of the stretch when the boy brought him to the outside and closing with a rush was up to win by a length. First Pullet beat Pomerene a nose for the place. Orleans Girl was forced to put forth her best effort to land the fourth race from a fairly good field.

The results:

FIRST RACE—For three-year-olds and upward, claiming, purse $800; six furlongs. Himiltrude, 109 pounds (Collins), 7 to 2, 7 to 5, and 7 to 10, first; Leoma, 114 (Kederis), 6 to 1, 5 to 2, and 7 to 5, second; Hot Shot (Furness), 5 to 1, 2 to 1, and even, third. Time—1:14 1-5. Colonel Lillard, Director James, Baby Bonds, Acclamation, Venetian Boy, Magic Mirror, and Trumby also ran.

SECOND RACE—For three-year-olds and upward, claiming, purse $800; six furlongs. Buster Clark, 106 pounds (Carmody), 3 to 1, 6 to 5, and 3 to 5, first; Iron Boy, 111 (Corey), 12 to 1, 5 to 1, and 5 to 2, second; Jack Healy, 109 (Hunt), 3 to 1, 6 to 5, and 3 to 5, third. Time—1:12 4-5. Precious Jewel, Quin, Lillian G., Blanche Donalton, Blanchite, and Frank Burke also ran.

THIRD RACE—For three-year-olds and upward, claiming, purse $800; six furlongs. VETERAN OARS JOIN COLUMBIA'S SQUAD

The second half season of indoor rowing at Columbia was started yesterday afternoon, when Coach Jim Rice set thirty 'Varsity and twenty-eight freshman candidates to work on the machines. An even dozen of the first-string squad had previously rowed on a Columbia crew, and of these four were members of last year's 'Varsity boat. The other veterans were in most cases oarsmen who had left the university in 1917 or 1918 to enter some branch of the service.

Prominent among the returning oarsmen were Captain Duncan Leys, who stroked the 1916 'Varsity at Poughkeepsie; Bob Curry, a member of the freshman eight at Poughkeepsie in 1916, and Swinburne of the 1916 junior 'Varsity. Van Holton, who was forced by sickness to leave his place in the 1915 junior boat, also reported, and was placed by Rice in the first eight.

The boating of the 'Varsity at yesterday's initial workout was as follows; Stroke, Captain Leys; No. 7, Brodil; No. 6, Gallicoe; No. 5, Herman; No. 4, Curry; No. 3, Van Holton; No. 2, Scovil; bow, Saacke.

Among the veterans to report were: Gallicoe, of the 1919 freshman and the 1918 'Varsity; Herman of the 1919 junior 'Varsity; Waldecker, No. 2 in the 1919 'Varsity; Saacke, No. 7 in the 1919 'Varsity; Helwig, No. 5 in the 1919 'Varsity; Hyde, No. 4 in the 1919 'Varsity; Dreesbach of the 1919 junior 'Varsity; Thompson of the 1919 freshman; Scovil of the 1922 freshman; Brodil, stroke last year of the Union Boat Club. The latter's eligibility for 'Varsity rowing is still in doubt. The first string of coxswains were Cohen and Ford.

The squad is the heaviest that Rice has had to handle in many years and nearly every man is ideally built for rowing under the Rice system. The average weight of the squad was 175 pounds, the average height 6 feet 1 inch. Rice was obviously well pleased with the physical qualities of the squad, although the number of candidates was below expectations.

Both the freshman and 'Varsity were put to work at once on the rowing machines, the coaches foregoing the drill on the "polly-wog" until the practices are further under way. Each squad went through an hour's drill in elementary work before being sent to the showers. Three 'Varsity boats worked at a time, with Rice and Fialsted directing activities from behind the stroke position.

Mixing Things

Some chefs are so clever at mixing things that they can fool you. When you are through eating you don't know whether you've had a square meal or a raw deal.

Just the same with stores that mix extravagant claims with poor goods. You don't know whether you're buying quality at low prices or shoddy at high prices.

You know what you are going to pay before you see the goods. You know what to expect before you pay anything.

Shirts at $2.00 and $2.50—always the same dependable quality.

VALUABLE PAINTINGS RELEASED BY COURT

MANY INNES CANVASES

Chicago Art Concern Says Owner Broke Agreement to Sell Works for $250,000.

A decision by Supreme Court Justice Bijur yesterday releases from an attachment a valuable art collection owned by a collector in the Middle West of well-known paintings valued at more than $300,000, which have been held by Sheriff Knott under a court order signed several months ago. The decision yesterday was that the plaintiff in the case has no claim by which he can tie up the paintings pending the outcome of his suit.

The collection includes several canvases by George Inness, a Romney held at $35,000, and two by Sir Thomas Lawrence valued at $50,000 and $35,000, respectively, owned by Charles G. Conn, an Indiana manufacturer. They were brought here last Fall from San Francisco to be sold.

Mr. Conn was sued in the Supreme Court by Abraham Landow on an assigned claim of the North Shore Art Galleries of Chicago for $42,469, and the attachment was applied for on the ground that Mr. Conn is not a resident of this State. The case came before Justice Bijur on an application by Mr. Conn to vacate the attachment, because not sufficient merit was shown in the papers on which it was granted.

The complaint alleges that the Chicago art concern made an agreement with Mr. Conn last September to bring the collection of pictures here from San Francisco. After the galleries had been reimbursed for the expense of the shipment the collection was to be sold at a minimum price of $250,000. It was agreed that the seller could dispose of the pictures at any sum above that figure that could be obtained, and the excess purchase price would be divided equally between the owner and the seller. The expenses were $5,500, and the plaintiff alleged that the seller obtained a purchaser willing to pay a sufficient sum to allow the seller a profit of $37,000, but that Mr. Conn refused to carry out the agreement, and increased the prices for the various pictures in the collection.

A list of the paintings attached to the complaint shows that the Romney in the collection was to be sold for the base price of $17,000, but Mr. Conn increased his demand to $35,000. A landscape by George Inness, which was to be sold for $21,000, was increased to $45,000, and another Inness was increased from $7,700 to $18,000. Sir Thomas Lawrence's "Man" was boosted from $17,150 to $50,000, and his "Lady Hamilton" from $20,000 to $35,000. Henner's "Nude" was raised to $18,000 from $10,500, and a landscape by Dupre from $10,500 to $18,000. Two paintings by Bol were increased from $11,000 and $18,000 to $12,000 and $25,000, respectively, and two by Israels went from $5,600 and $6,737 to $8,500 and $11,500.

In deciding that the plaintiff did not make out a cause of action Justice Bijur said that the North Shore Galleries was employed merely as broker, and that when the respondent discharged the broker its commission to sell the pictures ended. A claim for damages can still be brought against Mr. Conn, the court said.

LIQUOR SHIP LIBELED.

Towboat Company Presses Claim for Service to Yarmouth.

The steamer Yarmouth, with its $5,000,000 cargo of whisky, was expected yesterday to finish coaling late today at West Eighteen Street in order to sail tomorrow for Havana. It is free to sail, as far as the United States Government is concerned; but a libel for $365 was filed against the ship yesterday by the Hudson Towboat Company of 68 Hudson Street for towing the Yarmouth about the harbor.

Permits to druggists and physicians to handle liquor for medical purposes and permits to hotels and restaurants allowing small stocks of wine, brandy and other liquors for culinary purposes will be issued by Charles R. O'Connor, Federal Prohibition Director for the State of New York, who has opened an office of 28 West Twenty-third Street.

Michael Hogan, proprietor, and John Chadwick, bartender of a saloon at 775 Ninth Avenue, and Carmalo Deblisti, saloon keeper at 146 Hester Street, were held in $500 bail each by Commissioner Hitchcock yesterday on a charge of selling liquor.

Supervising Federal Agent James Shevlin received a small one-gallon kitchen still yesterday from Albert Smith of Goshen, N. Y., who turned it in, saying he had read that it was unlawful to have such a device in his possession. This was added to a large collection in the possession of Mr. Shevlin.

"BLACK-COAT WORKERS" RESIST LABOR ALLIANCE

Need of an Independent Policy as a Third Industrial Party Is Maintained.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The attempt of the Labor Party to capture the support of the new "black-coated workers" associations is likely to meet with a good deal of resistance. Unfortunately, the conference of these associations it has called for Saturday is to be held behind closed doors, but already the organizer of one of the most important of the new societies has come out for keeping clear of the old movement.

Norman Wyld, General Secretary of the Society of Technical Engineers, in a letter to The London Times has pointed out that a number of black-coated associations have already formed a federation independently of the men of the trade unions and that they believe their interests in industrial disputes are quite as distinct from those of the hand workers as they are from the employers. So he proposes that a third industrial party should be formed from the brainworkers which should steer its own course.

When controversies arise such a party, he maintains, would be much more interested in the efficiency of production from the national viewpoint than either capital or labor, which are primarily concerned about profits or wages. Wyld will bring his view before the conference on Saturday and will oppose the proposal to hitch up with the Labor Party until time has been allowed for its consideration.

Vocational Guides to Organize.

A call has been issued to all men and women who are interested in vocational guidance or employment work to meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Russell Sage Foundation auditorium, Twenty-second Street and Lexington Avenue, to form a "local" or branch organization of the recently organized Vocational Guidance Association of the United State.

HITCH IN SPIKER WEDDING.

Fall River Clergymen Unwilling to Perform Ceremony.

Special to The New York Times.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Feb. 5.—Another hitch developed today in the plans of S. Guy Spiker to marry the mother of his brother's child, when it was learned that Fall River ministers look askance at the prospect of being asked to marry the couple. Unless there is a change of mind the wedding on Monday will have to be performed by a Justice of the Peace or by a clergyman from outside the city.

Miss Knowles mother of the baby, said today that the only reason she came to America was to save little Alfred Ray from having his illegitimacy thrown in his face when he was old enough to understand such things. She counted upon finding work here to support the child. If necessary, she was prepared to live under the same roof with the man who wronged her until such time as she could afford other quarters. While the baby was made legitimate in England under the War Babies act, it had to be registered as Alfred Ray Knowles instead of Alfred Ray Spiker. Now through the marriage to Guy Spiker the baby will become entitled to the Spiker name.

TRINITY PRIEST RETIRED.

The Rev. Joseph W. Hill Honored by Vestry After 38 Years' Service.

After serving on the staff of Trinity Church for thirty-eight years, the Rev. Joseph W. Hill has been retired with a salary of $1,500 a year. The Vestry told him to take a well-earned rest for the remainder of his life, but made it clear he would always be welcome in the church.

"Father" Hill, as he is known affectionately to thousands, is 83 years old. He is a bachelor and has no near relatives. He lives at 97 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn, and every day found him at Trinity.

"While now on the retired list, Mr. Hill will continue to take part in the services at the church and to perform such other duties as he may wish to undertake," says The Trinity Record. "He is held in warm affection by all of us, and we trust that we may long continue to have the blessing of his fellowship and presence among us."

ROSA RAISA—GIACOMO RIMINI

NOTED VOCALION RECORD ARTISTS

FALSTAFF

Friday evening, February sixth, Lexington Theatre

ROSA RAISA, world-famous dramatic soprano, and Giacomo Rimini, the distinguished baritone, will head a noteworthy cast in the Chicago Opera Association's revival of "Falstaff" at the Lexington Theatre, on the evening of February sixth.

Particularly adapted to portraying "Falstaff," Verdi's jocular hero, is Giacomo Rimini. This noted artist has already won great distinction abroad in this role, which he was chosen to interpret, in a notable presentation of "Falstaff," given by Toscanini in Milan. For the past four years, Rimini has been one of the leading baritones of the Chicago Opera Association, appearing with great success in La Tosca, Aida, The Barber of Seville, Isabeau, and The Jewels of the Madonna.

Rosa Raisa has been unanimously acclaimed by eminent critics of this country and Europe, one of the greatest dramatic sopranos of our time. Opera lovers the world over, who have been thrilled by her superb interpretations of dramatic heroines, will be impressed by the versatility of this gifted artist in the lighter role of Mistress Alice Ford from Falstaff.

The magnificent voices of Rosa Raisa and Giacomo Rimini are reproduced exclusively on Vocalion Records. There is inexpressible magic in the natural way the individual quality has been recorded. As voice imprints, whose beauty will endure through the years, Vocalion records of these two celebrated singers are rare achievements of phonographic art.

GREAT SUFFERING CAUSED

Epidemic Not to Blame—Service Bad Since the Lines Were Turned Back to Company.

MANY COMPLAINTS MADE

Company, After Receiving Letter from Judge Hand, Says Investigation Has Been Started.

Needless aggravation of sickness and prolongation of suffering has been caused in innumerable cases in this city, both before and since the epidemic, because of the inability of the families of sick persons to get physicians or hospitals on the telephone in emergencies without great delay, according to complaints which were made yesterday at several of the large hospitals.

The flood of complaints from hospitals, physicians, and individuals against the telephone service yesterday followed the statements of the immediate neighbors of Mrs. Edith Morgan and her two daughters, who died of suffocation in their burning home at 52 West Ninth Street, that their efforts to send the fire alarm over the telephone went unheeded for many minutes. According to Battalion Chief Edward Quinn, the mother and two girls could have been saved if the alarm had been received a minute or two earlier.

While the New York Telephone Company was starting an investigation of these complaints against its service, after receiving letters on the subject from Federal Judge Augustus N. Hand and others of the neighbors of the Morgans, it was learned that the company had received a great many complaints of the serious results of delays in telephone service, in cases where life was at stake or great physical suffering involved. These came from hospital superintendents and many physicians, including Health Commissioner Copeland.

According to the hospital Superintendents, the service has been but little worse during the epidemic than it was previous to it. The service has been continuous, with a tendency to grow worse, according to most of them, since last Summer, when the lines were turned back from Federal control to operation by the New York Telephone Company.

Service Bad Nearly a Year.

At Mt. Sinai Hospital it was said the service had been extremely bad for nearly a year, although much worse during the epidemic and the period immediately preceding it. There used to be a public pay station at the hospital, but this was ordered taken out because persons who tried to use it almost invariably failed to get their numbers or to get their nickels back.

The telephone operator at Fordham Hospital said that on Wednesday it had taken her eighteen minutes to get a call through to Police Headquarters and almost equally long periods getting the Board of Health and the Willard Parker Hospital. She said that the hospital had only four trunk lines, and for a long time had been seeking additional ones, but could not get them from the telephone company. A large number of the calls to the hospital, she said, came from persons who said they had been kept waiting for long periods before they could reach the hospital.

The Superintendent of the Lying-In Hospital said:

"The telephone service is a very serious problem for us. Delay is a grave matter in many of the critical cases. We have to wait untold lengths of time to get numbers. Of course, it has been worse recently, but it was very bad before the epidemic."

The Superintendent of Knickerbocker Hospital said it was the rule, rather than the exception, to get two or three wrong numbers before the right one, and that the service was quite as bad before the epidemic as during it. He said that many long delays had been experienced in emergency calls to physicians whose patients were in need of immediate attention.

At the Woman's Hospital it was said that it seemed at times almost impossible to get numbers.

Complaints were made at all of these hospitals of the long delays over the telephone when efforts were being made to summon relatives of dying patients. Complaints were also made that persons trying to telephone to hospitals continually got the reply "The line is busy" when this was not the case.

Delay in Calling Physicians.

While the telephone service during the epidemic was reported as very bad, it was stated at Harlem and New York hospitals that the trouble with the telephone service had not been extreme before that time. One of the letters received by the telephone company from a neighbor of the family who died in the fire on Wednesday morning read:

"New York, Feb. 5, 1920,
"65 West Ninth Street.
"New York Telephone Company, 15
"Dey Street, New York City.

"Gentlemen: That the inefficiency of the telephone service now rendered by your company constitutes a menace to the public appears from the following instances:

"1. The part played by the inadequacy of your service in the recent burning to death of Mrs. W. F. Morgan and her daughters in this city on Feb. 4 is too well known to require further comment. Suffice it to say that the families of two neighbors, one of them being Judge A. N. Hand of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, wasted many precious minutes trying in vain to get "Central" to notify the Fire Department and that, in the words of the Acting Battalion Fire Chief, 'if the call had been put through but a few minutes earlier those three lives might have been saved.'

"2. On Jan. 7 both the head of the Sloane Maternity Hospital in this city and writer tried for at least fifteen minutes to get the physician attending the writer's wife to rush to the hospital and attend her at the birth of our son. For fifteen minutes we tried in vain. The whole time the physician was sitting a few blocks away with the phone at his elbow. When he got the call and rushed to the hospital in a taxi he arrived some time after the patient had been taken to the operating room and too late to be of service in the first part of the birth labors.

"3. The authorities of Sloane Hospital state that shortly before this, in another maternity case, they also tried in vain for many minutes to reach the attending physician by telephone. When they did get him he arrived so late that the woman had had to be chloroformed for some time to prevent the birth before the doctor arrived.

"Inquiry at this and other hospitals will reveal repeated instances showing the dangerous inefficiency of your service. Such instances lend a tinge of irony to your recently advertised appeal to the public to 'help keep the lines open for carrying messages to physicians, hospitals, and nurses.'

"The long-suffering American public has not based and does not base its complaint on the well-known obstructions to its business and personal affairs caused by such service, but such instances as the above are too much even for its patience. No excuse can be based on the influenza epidemic, for it is a well-known and undeniable fact that exactly the same inadequacy of service has continued long prior to such epidemic and ever since such service was turned back to you by the United States Government, if not before that. Nor can the blame for such service be placed upon the individual operators, as such conditions are not confined to one exchange or one locality, but exist to the writer's knowledge throughout New York City and a large part of New Jersey reached by your lines, nor is it any excuse to say that the company cannot afford at the present rates to supply sufficient personnel to give efficient service. It is its duty under the law to give efficient service. If the present rates do not permit it an appeal to the proper authorities should obtain the necessary relief. The American public does not object to paying for what it gets, but to paying for what it does not get, which is the case at present. Yours truly,

Telephone Company's Statement.

Officials of the New York Telephone Company refused yesterday to answer questions regarding the alleged failure of the service to transmit the fire alarm on Wednesday morning, when good service would have saved three lives. The company made the following statement:

"The telephone company is now conducting an investigation into the matter of telephone requests for the Fire Department made in connection with the fire at 52 West Ninth Street.

"It has developed that several calls were received and promptly transmitted to the Fire Department around the time the fire occurred, and the Fire Department has record of these calls. At that time there was practically no traffic being handled in the Stuyvesant Exchange and there were sufficient operators on hand to adequately care for any calls received.

"In front of each operator a bulletin gives the number of Police Headquarters and Fire Department, so that if a subscriber calls for the Fire Department or the police without giving the number no delay should occur in making the connection."

The statement does not touch on the complaints of Major E. C. De Kay, Chester Dale and Mrs. Augustus N. Hand, neighbors of the Morgans, that they took down the receivers as soon as they discovered the fire, but did not obtain replies from the operator at all. Mr. Dale made one unsuccessful effort to telephone when smoke was pouring into the room where he was standing, then aided his wife to escape over the roof, and then returned to the telephone, where he stood for minutes without getting a reply. Major E. C. De Kay also said that he made two prolonged efforts to get the alarm over the telephone, but received no answer to his signaling.

WAGE DEMANDS FORCE BRITISH FIRM TO QUIT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—One of the leading British piano making firms has taken action which is regarded as an object lesson. John Brinsmead & Sons have announced their decision to retire from business and close their factory in which over 300 persons were employed, some of whom have been in the firm's employ forty years. Brinsmeads point out that for each piano turned out a week there are now twenty-six employes, against twelve in 1918 and six before the war. The factory wages alone for a piano exceed the selling price. The cost of polishing alone is approximately equal to the pre-war prime cost of a completed piano, including materials. The director of the company said:

"It is simply that we cannot go on manufacturing at the present high cost and selling at the outrageous figures we do. We shall recommence manufacturing, if ever we can, until we can manufacture economically and can sell at prices that will not be robbing the public. This is no quarrel with our workpeople. We have no difference with them. It is simply the unfortunate state of events that we are drifting into by the whole tendency of labor at the present time, which is to force prices up to such an extent that it is impossible to manufacture any more economically."

Other piano-making firms are in the same difficulty as Brinsmead's. Sir Harry Foster, President of the Pianoforte Manufacturers' Association, speaking of general conditions in the trade, said:

"There is the fallacy general in the labor world today that by increasing production you either deprive the fellow-worker of employment or run the risk of over-production and consequent unemployment for yourself. In the piano trade today it is impossible to overproduce. We cannot overtake the demand. Meanwhile Germany is creeping into business again and will be taking our orders if we cannot produce more. We agreed twice within the last twelve months to increased minimum wage and to the principle of maximum number of working hours. We also offered a bonus on increased production either for the individual or for the trade as a whole if leaders and men seem passive under them and have the foolish notion that any attempt to give the men means of increasing their earnings by this method is what they call the thin end of the wedge to get back to piece work. They repeatedly refused a bonus as though it were an evil thing. I know many of the men would welcome it.

"Before the war all piano manufacturing was piece work. It is almost the universal experience of the trade that since the introduction of the minimum wage production per man has decreased by anything from 25 to 40 per cent. Human nature being what it is, I believe that without some incentive to individual effort the result of the minimum wage must be the reduction of output."

PLEADS FOR MORE WHEAT.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Lord Lee, Minister of Agriculture, addressing a meeting of farmers today made a strong appeal for the increased production of home-grown wheat, so that the country would be less dependent on American supplies.

He said a quarter of wheat, bought in America, cost 150 shillings, and that if this country was going to maintain the subsidizing of the nine-penny loaf at that rate it would cost British taxpayers during the coming year a hundred million pounds.

CHARGE CARRANZA EMPLOYS OUTLAWS

OFFICERS INVOLVED IN RAIDS

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Feb. 5.—United States Government officials, Texas Rangers, and American ranchmen, who live or are on duty in the Big Bend district of Texas, testifying today before the Senate subcommittee which is investigating the Mexican situation, asserted that at the present time Chico Cano, the most notorious bandit leader in the section of Mexico opposite the Big Bend, is now a Captain in the Mexican Army, and is in command of a company of Carranzista scouts, with headquarters at Ojinaga, the principal town on the Mexican side of the Big Bend. It was the Chico Cano band that in August last captured and held for $15,000 ransom Lieutenants Peterson and Davis of the Army Air Service, and it is this same band that has directed most of the raids into the American side of the Big Bend in the last three or four years.

That this testimony as to the present status of this bandit is correct is shown in an official report to the War Department under date of Jan. 31 last. This report from the headquarters of the Southern Department at San Antonio is signed by Major Gen. Joseph I. Dickman, and reads as follows:

"Chico Cano, implicated in the kidnapping of the two American aviators, Lieutenants Peterson and Davis, and one of the most notorious bandits and cattle rustlers in the Big Bend-Ojinaga district section of the border, is in the service of the Carranza Government. He has about thirty-five men under him, and his headquarters are at Ojinaga, Mexico."

Every witness called today stated under oath that conditions in the Big Bend were at the present time so unsafe on the American side of the Rio Grande that without army protection American farmers, ranchers, and business men would not be able to do business in that part of the United States. The testimony showed that in the last three years the Mexicans had made scores of incursions into American territory and that in these raids American soldiers and civilians have been murdered, in one instance a United States mail carrier being hung and his throat cut by the bandits.

Creed Taylor of the United States Border Customs Service was the first witness. Mr. Taylor narrated the story of six raids into the Big Bend. One of these was the Neville raid, the story of which was told yesterday by Edward W. Neville, the victim of the incursion, whose only son Glenn was killed by the raiders. The other raids Mr. Taylor told of were those on the Brite, Cleveland, Granger, Petit, and Russell ranches.

In none of many raids mentioned, the witness testified, had the Mexican authorities in control in the Mexican Bend district ever made any effort to capture or punish the bandits or other persons concerned in the raids. None of the cattle or other property stolen has ever been recovered.

R. H. Wadsworth, also of the United States Border Customs Service, told of the murder by Mexicans of Sitters of the Customs Service and Hewlin of the Rangers. He said:

"They were ambushed and murdered on the American side in May, 1916. They were not killing Mexicans who were trying to get back into Mexico with stolen horses; the trail led into a deep canyon where the Mexicans had prepared a trap and when Sitters and Hewlin went in they shot them. Sitters's body was terribly mutilated. I was one of the posse that tried to get the Mexicans. When we found Sittors's body it had eleven bullet holes in it and his head had been crushed in with heavy rocks. There were thirty men in the raiding band."

"Who was in charge of that murder band?" Senator Smith inquired.

"In Ojinaga they have stated it was Chico Cano's men. Chico had boasted that he would get Sitters's scalp. All of our information shows that Cano was the leader of the assassins."

Commander of Outlaws.

Sergeant H. A. King of the Big Bend Texas Rangers was the next witness.

"Why is the American side of the Big Bend unsafe?" Senator Smith asked.

"The reason, as I figure it out, is that the so-called Mexican Government has given its official commissions to the outlaws," replied Sergeant King.

J. F. Tigner, a ranchman of the Big Bend, told of the several raids on his ranch in a raid of April, 1917. American cavalry men followed the Mexicans into Mexico and fought a battle with the bandits. In this battle an American soldier was killed and two other wounded. A native-born American, who was Mr. Tigner's foreman, was also killed. Conditions have become so bad, the witness said, that he had disposed of his river ranch and now was living at another nearer Marfa. His Rio Grande ranch was raided more than a dozen times.

The story of the Glenn Springs raid of May, 1916, was told by Capt. C. D. Woods of Alpine, Texas, one of the northern towns in the Big Bend. In this fight three American troopers and a little son of William Conklin, an American citizen of Glenn Springs, were killed. On the body of one of the Mexicans killed in that fight was found a commission which showed that the dead man had been an officer in the Carranza army. The commission, Captain Wood stated, was in the possession of Captain Cole of the United States Army.

TO EXPEL FALL WITNESSES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 5.—Secretary of the Interior Manuel Aguirre Berlanga, in a short talk with the press yesterday afternoon said the outcry in the United States against Mexico's supposed protection of Bolshevism was absurd, as the attitude of the Government was always against Bolshevism. The department has given strict orders to all immigration officers which would make very difficult the entrance of Bolsheviki or other outlaws into Mexico. In a number of cases the Government has expelled from Mexico the followers of Bolshevist doctrines.

Commenting on the Fall investigation he said the Mexican Government could not but consider that foreigners living in this country who continue to injure it, either within or outside of the country, would be considered as coming under Article 33, whatever nationality they possess. Article 33 provides for expulsion from Mexico.

NEW STEPS AGAINST JENKINS.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 5.—Julio Mitchell, State Prosecutor of Puebla, has been notified that the exequatur of William O. Jenkins, United States Consular Agent at Puebla, was cancelled on Feb. 1, it was learned yesterday.

The Federal Government is awaiting action by the Puebla courts in Mr. Jenkins's case before taking steps regarding its alleged intention of requesting him to leave Mexico. Decision in the case is expected the coming week.

Railway Shopmen Now Urgent in Demands; Threaten Strike if Wages Are Not Raised.

DETROIT, Feb. 5.—Little hope of a satisfactory adjustment with Railroad Administration officials of wage demands which would avert a strike of 300,000 members of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way and Railway Shop Laborers was expressed tonight by grand officers of the organization in conference here.

The conference, called with the announced purpose of ordering a strike if wage increases averaging 40 per cent. are not granted, opened this afternoon. It will continue, it was indicated, until definite announcement is forthcoming from the Washington conferences between Director General Hines and representatives of the various railroad brotherhoods.

Representatives of the brotherhood declared today that arbitration was out of the question. It was admitted, however, there was a possibility that in the event of a final disagreement with the Railroad Administration the entire wage dispute might be submitted to President Wilson as a last resort.

Declaring that members of the brotherhood "are in no mood" for the delay that arbitration would entail, William Robeson, assistant to the President of the organization, said today: "We could not hold the men back now, even if we wanted to, and we do not want to. They cannot live on a wage of 27 cents an hour, which many of them are getting."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Officials of the Railroad Administration and union leaders, conferring here on wage demands of the railroad employes, expressed the hope tonight that another day's discussion would bring a crystallization of argument on both sides. None would say positively that a settlement would be effected tomorrow, but all were optimistic concerning the negotiations. It was recalled in this connection that Director General Hines several months ago said that the Railroad Administration was not adverse to adjusting inequalities as between workers of similar classes.

FOCH BECOMES ONE OF IMMORTALS

EULOGIZED BY POINCARE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—Marshal Foch was today received into the company of the "Immortals" of the French Academy. The sessions of that august body are usually decorous to the point of dullness, but today was different. For every score of people admitted to the ceremony a hundred had to be turned away. The cheering suggested a political meeting rather than a gathering of savants when Marshal Foch entered, wearing the traditional green tail-coat and black trousers and accompanied by his sponsors, Marshal Joffre and Charles de Freycinet.

The seat in the Academy which Foch will occupy is that formerly held by the Marquis de Vogué, and, in accordance with custom, the Marshal had to deliver a eulogistic speech on the work of his predecessor. Some part of it, however, he devoted to himself.

"In honoring me," he said, "you have wished to acclaim those glorious phalanxes which during more than four years withstood the rigors of our climate at the price of unknown sacrifice, till the moment came for the most violent and most continuous of battles. Above this grandeur of duty accepted by all, this relentless pertinacity, this united determination to conquer at all costs, you have seen the soul of the country, and to render homage to its centre in the army you have received among you a soldier."

In a passage of fervent oratory the Marshal acclaimed the glory of French arms throughout history, under the old monarchy, in the Revolution, and under the Empire, and in the persons of "those whom the war of 1914 found greater still in the eternal crusade of right and liberty against force and oppression. That epic will for ages astonish the world by showing men capable, in four years of continuous effort and giant battles, of snatching victory from repeated peril."

Of the writings of his predecessor Marshal Foch then proceeded to discourse learnedly and critically, for De Vogué was the historian of the campaigns of the Duke de Villars, a subject with which the Marshal is familiar.

It was President Poincaré who replied. He addressed the Marshal as "Monsieur," according to the academic custom, but added: "Monsieur le Maréchal, the title by which I was the first to call you and by which you will be always known."

In an eloquent speech the President traced the history of Foch's service to his country in the war. Speaking of the first Battle of the Marne, he recalled the famous message from Foch to Joffre: "Hard pressed on my right; my centre is giving way; it is impossible to manoeuvre; the situation is excellent; I attack." "Grave writers," said the President, "have given this text as authentic. I have not the courage to undeceive them. If you did not write these optimistic words, you have thought them, and, better still, you have translated them into action."

After recounting the moving hours in March, 1918, when Marshal Foch took the supreme command, and all the great events which came of that, the President, turning to the Marshal, said:

"You made the war, but it was not given to you to make the peace. You had, however, the right to say what in your opinion the peace ought to be like to prevent a repetition of the war. Let us hope that the world will never have to regret that it did not completely follow your advice. Your idealistic spirit sees things as they are; and, though our country sheaths her sword, you will remain one of our most clear-sighted and precious counsellors.

"None better than you can supervise the disarmament of Germany; none better than you see realities through camouflage—Uhlans dressed up as police, soldiers of the guard as firemen, and armament factories behind commercial screens. Over 1,400,000 trenchmen are dead that France should not die, and besides them lie thousands of strangers come to defend our liberties. It is still part of your work to see that the sacrifice must never again be demanded, and that posterity can work in calm, order, and security."

BANDITS ABDUCT AMERICAN.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The Department of State was advised today that the Mexican City newspapers yesterday reported the abduction of an American citizen, named Joseph E. Askew, following a bandit attack on the Tlahualilo Company plantation at Lerdo, State of Durango, Mexico, on the night of Feb. 2. The report of the abduction was later confirmed by a telegram received by the British Legation at Mexico City from Gomez Palacio, a town near Lerdo.

The American Embassy presented to the Mexican Foreign Office an "urgent request that immediate steps be taken to effect the release of Askew unharmed."

The Mexican Department of Foreign Affairs reports the arrest of the alleged murderer of Roney and Boles, two Americans killed at Campamento Internacional. Two accomplices also have been arrested.

BATTLE WITH FISTS IN ITALIAN CHAMBER

SITTING IS SUSPENDED

ROME, Feb. 4.—Amid deafening insults hurled at each other by the Catholics and the Socialists during a debate in the Chamber today on the economic situation, particularly relative to steps taken by the Government to requisition oil, Signor Pandebiano, Socialist, gave the signal for a free-for-all scrimmage by rushing among the Catholics and raining blows upon Deputies all about him.

The trouble began when Signor Murialdi, the Food Controller, was asked to explain the scarcity of oil and recent orders commandeering supplies. Signor Murialdi asserted that, while there was complete liberty of commerce, "oil had disappeared from the market." At this point, Deputy Vella, Socialist, shouted: "Oil exists, for there is still in stock the whole production of last year. It is you who are hiding it."

A dozen Socialists launched invectives against the Food Controller, Deputy Bombacci crying: "You are a member of the Camorra. You want to sell to the advantage of those who own stock in oil companies. You are one of them. Down with the Camorra."

"If any one has a specific accusation," he said finally, "he has only to bring it forward. I will inexorably punish whoever is guilty of profiteering in oil."

"We will do it," was the retort of Deputy Bombacci, while Deputy Barberis, who was formerly a cart driver, shouted in thunder tones: "You buy oil at 350 lire and sell it at 1,200! Camorra! Camorra!"

The tumult, which was indescribable, was heightened when a voice was heard yelling from the public gallery: "Shut up! Shame! I protest! Long live the proletariat!"

Ushers threw themselves on the man who uttered these words and dragged him out, while he shouted: "Long live the proletariat, which suffers and weeps!"

During his speech Signor Murialdi asserted that the national production of oil was insufficient. Calabria, which produces most of the country's oil, he said, was putting forth scarcely enough for local consumption, "but would do its best."

He was interrupted by cries of "God help us!"

REPORT CALM IN ITALY.

More Than 12,500,000,000 Lire Subscribed to National Loan.

Cavaliere Domenico Gidoni, the delegate at New York of the Istituto Nazionale per i Cambi con l'Estero (the National Institution for Foreign Exchange), has received the following cable dispatch from Commendatore Bonaldo Stringher, General Director of the Bank of Italy and former Minister of the Treasury:

"The Government's negotiations with the leaders of the posts and telegraphs as well as the railroads strike have resulted in a victory for the Government.

"There is now perfect calm throughout Italy.

"The results of the Sixth National Loan (5 per cent., opened Dec. 20) become constantly more satisfactory. Today the subscriptions in the kingdom alone reach beyond 12,500,000,000 lire ($2,500,000,000)."

MILITARY ATTACHES MEET.

Those in Rome Consider Plans for Harmonizing Their Work.

ROME, Feb. 4.—American military attachés accredited to seventeen European countries assembled here today under the chairmanship of Brig. Gen. Evan M. Johnson, attaché of the American Embassy at Rome, to discuss the best methods for harmonizing their work in order to avoid duplications and to make their reports as useful as possible.

General Johnson this evening gave a dinner in honor of his colleagues. The guests included the Ministers of War and Marine and the foreign military attachés accredited to Rome. Mrs. Peter Augustus Jay, wife of the American Chargé d'Affaires, also gave the American officers a reception, at which they met the highest personages of official and social Rome.

The work of the American Military Attachés is expected to continue throughout next week.

FIGHTING STARTS IN ISTRIA.

Slav Guerrilla Chief Killed in Clash with Disguised Carabineers.

TRIESTE, Feb. 5 (Associated Press). —Armed bands of Slavs are fighting guerrilla warfare and terrorizing Istria. They are attacking the Italian carabineer outposts, but are sparing the civilian population.

Carabineers disguised as peasants clashed yesterday with a band led by Michaele Paulic, who was said to be the head of the whole movement. In an encounter near the village of Gimeno Paulic was killed. The other members of his band disappeared into the mountains.

The Italian Commander in Istria has taken the necessary precautions. Several squadrons of armored cars have been sent into the heart of Istria, in addition to the cavalry forces.

REDS KEEP RIGHT ON WITH PROPAGANDA

CLAIM ENTENTE'S DEFEAT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Although in his testimony before a Senate Committee Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, the so-called "Ambassador" of Soviet Russia to the United States, affirmed that the Soviet Government had abandoned the principle of spreading broadcast propaganda calling for a world-wide social revolution, evidence has reached Washington that as late as Feb. 3 insidious propaganda, designed to promote class antagonism, was circulated by wireless from Moscow.

A wireless message sent out from Moscow on Dec. 6 gave the text of a speech by Lenin to the Seventh All-Russian Congress of Soviets. In his speech Lenin said:

"In our fight against the Entente we have won three victories. Though the Entente has tried to crush us by its technical knowledge and by its armies we have succeeded in making it impossible for its troops to fight against us. 'The germ of Bolshevism' has penetrated their army, which was formed of workmen and peasants.

"The second attempt of the Entente, the attempt to turn fourteen States against Soviet Russia, the attempt to force these small States, with their bourgeois Governments, to fight against Soviet Russia, ended also in the failure of the Entente.

"Our third victory is that the small bourgeoisie and the intellectuals of the Entente are on our side. The Entente dares not declare war on us openly in its Parliaments."

On Dec. 23 a wireless message of the Soviet Government from Moscow reported that arrangements had been made at the Bolshevist capital for the opening of an institute for the training of Soviet Orientalists, making familiar to them the Eastern and Middle Eastern situations.

The fact that messages of this nature continue to be sent out by wireless from Moscow indicates, in the opinion of authorities here, that, far from having discontinued the practice of inciting class antagonism in other countries and endeavoring to bring about a world social revolution, the Soviet Government is making the same efforts toward this end as have characterized its international activities from the outset.

ESTHONIA GOT MUCH FROM SOVIET RUSSIA

By ARTHUR E. COPPING.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DORPAT, Feb. 5.—In connection with the peace treaty it is interesting that the Government of Soviet Russia expressed itself as very reluctant to allow the former part of Imperial Russia to contract out of its share of responsibility for the repayment of the foreign debt. Esthonia insisted and Soviet Russia consented.

In one article Soviet Russia definitely announces that no concession made to Esthonia must be deemed a precedent when other border States come to negotiate for peace. Another article shows that the Esthonian delegates had been looking after the interests of their new country with great thoroughness, for it provided that, if Russia on concluding peace later on with any other border State gives to that State any privileges or rights not now given to Esthonia, such privileges or rights should automatically accrue to Esthonia.

Diplomatic and commercial relations are to be resumed at a date to be decided by further agreement.

The treaty states that the end of the military war is to be considered an end of the economic and financial war, and that a commercial treaty will be entered into on the basis of the most favored nation clauses.

Interest attaches to the undertaking by Esthonia that no duty or tax is to be payable at her ports respecting goods arriving for Russia, and that they shall pay no toll on transit. All freight charges are to be identical for Russians and Esthonians.

Esthonia gives Russia the right to use the waterfalls along the River Narova, which flows northward through the border valley from Lake Peipus to the Gulf of Finland, near Narva. A special agreement is to be arrived at to deal with this water power concession.

Russia gives to Esthonia preferential rights to a concession for building and exploiting direct railway connection between Moscow and the Esthonian frontier. Conditions as to the date of this concession and the terms under which it may be constructed are to be settled by special agreement.

Also a subject for future mutual consent is Russia's forest concession in the Governments of Petrograd, Pskov, Tver, Novgorod, Olonetz, Vologda and Archangel.

The treaty is to be ratified at Moscow as soon as possible. Already the Russian and Esthonian delegates have dined together, each toasting the other's country with great cordiality.

PERSIA DOUBLY MENACED.

Attitude of Bolsheviki and Afghans Increasingly Hostile.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The attitude of both the Bolsheviki and the Afghans toward the Persians is becoming increasingly hostile, according to British War Office advices.

Unverified reports from the Trans-Caspian area say that the transport of Bolshevist troops thence is continuing at the rate of about 2,000 a week. These troops are said to be well equipped and led by officers of the old Russian Army.

British Food Minister Resigns.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—According to The Daily Sketch, G. H. Roberts, the British Food Minister, has resigned. The newspaper adds that the resignation of the Minister does not imply dissension in the Cabinet, but declares it was prompted by the example set by Mr. Roberts's labor colleague, George Nicoll Barnes, Minister without portfolio, with whom he joined the Cabinet and who resigned last month.

Brings Suit to Have Berger Prison Sentence Enforced

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—District Attorney Charles F. Clyne brought suit in the Circuit Court of Appeals today to have Victor Berger, convicted Socialist Congressman, sent to Leavenworth Penitentiary to serve out his ten-year sentence.

In his brief Mr. Clyne declares Berger tried to perpetrate a fraud on the court and that he should be sent to prison immediately. The fraud charge is based on new evidence that while out on bail under promise to refrain from all such activity, Berger took part in a campaign to induce Socialists to oppose conscription and the war.

Berger's appeal from the sentence passed by Judge K. M. Landis is now pending in the Circuit Court of Appeals.

INDUSTRIAL COURT WORKS SMOOTHLY

LABOR LEADER SHOWS SKILL

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—With the setting up of a special industrial court to hear the application of the dockers for a wage increase England entered on the trial of a great experiment in social organization. The Dockers' strike of 1889 is still remembered for its violence and for the loss and distress it caused, and there could be no greater contrast than that between the open air meetings and the police charges of those days and the quiet, orderly proceedings in the courts of justice of the present controversy.

The court was appointed by the Minister of Labor under the act passed last year, and consists of a chairman and three representatives of capital, three of labor and two of the general public. The chairman, Lord Shaw of Dunfermline, is a hard-headed Scotch Judge, who has been Lord of Appeal for ten years, while the labor members of the court are Ben Tillett, M. P., who organized the dockers' union, and in his fiery days was often in collision with the police in its cause; Robert Williams, one of the labor extremists, and Harry Gosling, both of the Transport Workers' Federation.

The tribunal sits in the Court of Criminal Appeal and the argument is being carried on with all the dignity and formality of an ordinary trial. The witnesses, half drawn from the shipping trades and half from the ranks of the dock laborers, sit on the benches facing the line of white-haired men on whose decision such momentous issues rest. The dockers, though they might employ regular counsel, have preferred to leave their case in the hands of their Secretary, Ernest Bevin. For two days now he has been making his opening statement and has adapted himself skillfully to his environment. He argues like a veteran lawyer and steers clear of appeals to passion and prejudice of the usual labor disputes.

The increase of wages the dockers ask amounts in the United Kingdom to nearly £5,000,000 a year, and they contend the shipowners could grant them the increase without undue loss to themselves. It is largely a mathematical problem, however bitter may be the feelings it arouses, and Bevin presents it as entirely mathematical. He is armed with a mass of tables of figures and has analyzed such technical questions as the costs and handlings to a fine point. Every now and then Lord Shaw breaks in with a courteous question or two and sometimes Bevin and the Chairman have a quiet argument, but nothing flusters the dockers' champion, and he states his points and marshals his figures admirably.

When the turn of the shipowners come they will intrust their case to the well-known barrister Sir Lynden Macassey, K. C., and he will cross-examine the dockers' witnesses for them. The hearing is expected to last a week or two, and if the present judicial tone can be maintained throughout and if the findings show the court is not divided according to the parties it represents a great advance will be held to have been made in settling industrial disputes.

Quite independently of the precise verdict found on the actual controversy, it will go far to make up for the disappointment felt at the outcome of the recent coal commission. The entire proceedings before that body were conducted in a partisan style, and instead of one report it found four, which only emphasized the impossibility of reconciling labor's and capital's viewpoints. Incidentally, Bevin's line of argument has illustrated labor's new pretensions. He is demanding that more responsibility should be intrusted to the workers and is criticising certain methods followed at the docks as archaic and uneconomic.

LABOR MEN VISIT PREMIER.

Present Their Views on Nationalization and Other Questions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Prime Minister Lloyd George received the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress and the executive of the Miners' Federation tonight. The resolutions passed at a special congress were submitted to him on the following points: Nationalization, unemployment, profiteering and the cost of living, and Russia. Interest centred chiefly on the question of nationalization, and an important statement was expected from the Prime Minister.

He intimated quite clearly, however, his views on the subject had undergone no change, and at the same time indicated that the new Government scheme may be modified in certain respects with regard to unemployment. Lloyd George said an unemployment bill was being drafted, and on the question of the cost of living he pointed out goods were cheaper in this than other belligerent countries. He outlined some of the difficulties in suppressing profiteering. No statement was forthcoming with reference to Russia, the Premier holding this must be thrashed out on the floor of the House of Commons.

GITLOW CONVICTED IN ANARCHY TRIAL

Bound to Vote Against Military Defense in Case of War, Asserts Court.

The jury in Justice Weeks's part of the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court convicted Ex-Assemblyman Benjamin Gitlow yesterday of criminal anarchy. He was remanded until Feb. 11 for sentence, which the law provides may be for one day or ten years and $5,000 fine as the maximum. Bail will not be accepted for his release unless he obtains a certificate of reasonable doubt from a Supreme Court Justice. It was said the defense would make no further move until the day of sentence, when notice of appeal and other motions may be presented.

Gitlow was the first of twenty-three men to be tried, all of whom were arrested as the result of investigations and raids by the Lusk Committee. The next to be tried, it was said at the District Attorney's office, is Harry M. Winitsky, Executive Secretary of the "Left Wing" or Communist Party Local. Three others to be tried are C. E. Ruthenberg of Cleveland, J. E. Ferguson of Chicago, an attorney, and James Larkin, the strike agitator. The prosecution extradited Ruthenberg and Ferguson on the ground that they had participated in a conference here of the "Left Wing" National Council, which authorized publication of The Revolutionary Age, that set forth the movement by manifesto for massed strikes against government, it was charged, and with which Gitlow's connection was shown.

The stock market and the foreign exchanges moved in opposite directions yesterday under influences some of which were clear and others were not. A greater stringency in the money market than on Wednesday, the call loan rate getting as high as 20 per cent., helped to maintain the flow of liquidation of stocks, and there were indications of additional sales for the short account. The situation of the Wall Street money market has evidently brought discouragement to a great many speculative holders of industrial stocks, who hoped against hope in January that the seasonable easement of interest rates would surely develop in February. Again sales of stocks from interior cities supplied a large part of the day's business, and it would be possible to describe this as the result of belated conception of the influence of Wednesday's unsettled foreign exchange and commodities markets. Industrial stocks declined from 1 to 3 points in cases where selling pressure was particularly active, but at no time was there such a movement to sell as the day before. When business closed a number of shares recorded substantial recoveries from their lowest prices. The renewal rate of 17 per cent. for call money was higher than had been witnessed in many years.

There would have been reason under normal market conditions to have differentiated between industrial and railroad stocks because of the agreement of the conferees on the Railway bill. Railroad issues, however, fluctuated uncertainly and made no progress to speak of. The market evidently considers that the establishment of a rule for making rates had been so generally discussed before that the acceptance of the Cummins provision lacked a true stimulus, and the impression prevails generally that the country's opinion of the proposed legislation will be best expressed in the course of debate of the bill in Congress.

It was not surprising, all things considered, that the foreign exchanges rallied rather sharply, except rates on Italy. Sterling sight drafts rose 6¼ cents to the pound, with a final quotation of $3.29; francs were a trifle better than the day before, and Belgian rates moved forward with fair vigor at times. Bankers reported a decided shrinkage in the demand for dollars at foreign centres, and this influence, in respect to sterling especially, was furthered by considerable short covering on this side. The upturn was of the conventional order, primarily because a sharp drop of quotations usually acts to slow business down, and it is under such conditions that the covering operations of earlier short sellers have pronounced effect on rates. As far as transactions originating on the European markets were concerned it was probably the case that bankers were moved by discussions of joint measures to aid the exchanges to hold back their purchases of dollars to see what results might be obtained. As things stand it is hard to see how the situation can be righted without slow and laborious processes of building up European exports and curtailing imports, and for that reason local bankers look for a highly erratic market in the near future. The recovery of sterling had no effect on the gold auction market in London; on the contrary, eager bidders carried the price up to 127s. 4d. per ounce, against 125s. 9d. on Wednesday.

Cotton declined at first but recovered later. Grain and food products at Chicago again lost ground.

HEADS OF RAILROADS APPROVE JOINT BILL

Cuyler Speaks for Executives Who Have Not Believed Mandatory Rate Necessary.

The consensus of opinion yesterday among railroad executives on the conference agreement on railroad legislation in the House and Senate was that the joint measure reported by the committee was favorable. Those who have maintained that a mandatory rule of rate making was vital to meet the situation when the carriers are returned to private control and operation, on March 1, were almost unanimous in their approval, while the faction which has opposed the fixing of a minimum rate of return admitted that a forward step had been taken.

T. De Witt Cuyler, Chairman of the Association of Railway Executives, said:

"It must be a source of gratification to all interested in the welfare of the railroads in this country that the conferees have arrived at an agreement to report a bill which, it is hoped, will be protective both to the security holders and the share holders of the properties, and to the public at large.

"There can be no question that the conferees and the two committees of the House and the Senate have had an earnest desire to do justice to the railroads. If the bill be enacted by Congress, the railway executives and the owners of the properties will accept the bill in good faith with the earnest hope that it may be productive of the desired result, namely, the protection of the present credit of the roads, and the extension of that credit so that they may provide in the future adequate facilities for the transportation system of the country.

"It cannot be too strongly emphasized that this question does not affect alone, nor even principally, the owners of these properties. The public is much more concerned. If the transportation system of the country is not adequate to its needs, the country must suffer.

"It is, therefore, earnestly hoped that the protection of the credit the proposed bill seeks to establish will prove successful. If it does not, the railroads will confidently look to Congress for such additional legislation as may be necessary to further protect the companies and the public."

Mr. Cuyler's statement was considered representative of the opinion of members of the Association of Railway Executives, who have believed that a mandatory rule of rate making was not necessary.

Managers of properties not so firmly entrenched as to earnings believe the minimum rate of return on aggregate value, as provided in the agreement, is a good thing, and managers of the so-called creditor roads agreed a retention of half of the excess earnings above 6 per cent. was considerable improvement over the original paragraphs in the Cummins bill, which allowed the roads to retain less.

Railroad men interpreted the compromise between the Senate and House conferees as an agreement that the mandatory rule of rate making of the Cummins bill should obtain for one or two years following the return of the carriers, or for a period yet to be agreed upon, the more flexible rate provisions of the Esch bill to rule at the termination of that period.

Swager Shirley, Director of the Division of Finance of the Railroad Administration, conferred with bankers and railroad executives in the financial district on Wednesday, according to information obtained yesterday. Just what ground was covered at the conference could not be learned specifically, but information obtained last night reported that Mr. Shirley discussed the various phases of the transfer of control of the carriers to their corporate managrs on March 1.

It is undrstood that many of the duties of management have already passed to private channels, but that a great mass of detail remains to be disposed of before the Railroad Association ceases to manage the properties taken over by the Government in 1917. These details include the question of the actual physical needs of the various lines; financing, which must be taken care of from time to time; accounting; a checking of the actual funds which are to be turned over to private managers, and the general striking of a balance between the Administration and railroad executives.

No formal conferences are understood to have been held, although reports regarding this were conflicting. Mr. Shirley is understood to have met with railroad executives in the morning, and with bankers and others in the afternoon. At the offices of the Association of Railway Executives it was said that no meeting was held in that office.

FOR NEW FOUNDRIES ISSUE.

American Steel Stockholders Will Be Asked to Approve.

The stockholders of the American Steel Foundries Company, at a meeting on March 18, will be asked to approve an increase in the common stock capitalization to 750,000 shares. The present outstanding shares total 515,520. It is proposed by the increase to capitalize accumulated surplus which may be distributed to stockholders in stock dividends over the period of the next two or three years, irrespective of any cash dividends that may be paid in that time.

After setting aside for depreciation $333,296 and adding revenues from outside sources of $340,478, there was a total net income of $6,115,007. After deducting for charges and Federal taxes a surplus remains amounting to $4,210,634. This is $1,514,907 more than the 1918 surplus, although $1,321,205 less than the balance in 1917.

Allowing for 3½ per cent. preferred dividends for six months, this stock being issued in June, 1919, the balance of last year's surplus is equal to $7.53 a share ($33.33 par value) earned on the $17,184,000 common stock, as compared with $15.68 a share ($100 par value) earned on the $17,184,000 capital stock in 1918.

Rail Shares Follow Trend.

There was little evidence that the agreement between Senate and House conferees on railroad legislation had any effect on the market action of the railroad shares. As a group the stocks followed the general trend with many new low record figures being touched. Doubt seemed to be general as to just how the agreement would be received by both houses and as to just how the Interstate Commerce Commission would carry out the mandatory rule of ratemaking when the final bill is passed. The amended Section 6 of the Cummins bill calls for a minimum return on aggregate property value, and some doubt has been raised as to just how the commission will arrive at the aggregate value of railroad property. The old line investment shares lost more ground yesterday than the low-priced stocks, with such issues as Atchison, Chicago Northwestern, Great Northern preferred, Reading, Southern Pacific, and Union Pacific closing with net losses between 1 and 2 points. Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, D. & R. G. and others showed fractional price changes, some gains being recorded. In the case of Canadian Pacific a net gain at the close of more than a point was not surprising in view of the 7-point loss of the preceding session.

A Start Has Been Made.

Wall Street was inclined to view the news regarding railroad legislation as favorable. This attitude was based on the belief that at last a definite wedge has been inserted which will be driven further and further until final remedial laws have been enacted. Even among the roads which benefit as much under the agreement as they would have had Section 6 of the Cummins bill been entirely eliminated, executives admitted that the situation was better than had been generally expected.

Who Will Buy Hog Island?

The question of the final ownership of Hog Island, the shipbuilding plant just outside of Philadelphia which was constructed to help bridge the Atlantic with boats in the fight to subdue the Central Powers, is again being discussed in the financial district. Many purchasers have been rumored, but chief among them have been the American International Corporation and the City of Philadelphia. So far as the former is concerned, it is understood that Hog Island is not wanted, as the big plant of the New York Shipbuilding Company, a subsidiary, is large enough to handle all the business American International may care to have it accept. In regard to the City of Philadelphia, it was reported some months ago that a movement had been originated for that municipality to acquire the yard as a traffic terminal of the port. This has not developed particularly, and the question is still being asked, "Who will buy Hog Island?"

More Cars for Grain Movement.

The order sent out by the Director General of Railroads that cars suitable for the transportation of grains should be hurried to the grain districts was not a surprise. Some weeks ago a special committee was sent by the Chicago Board of Trade to confer with him on the car shortage, and that committee reported more than two weeks ago that all necessary cars would be obtainable. At the same time reports have been received here from interior points that while there have been increases in the number of cars many of the latter have been in such poor shape that they would not do to transport grain and were being rejected by shippers.

Wires Held Up Well.

In spite of past performances and many predictions that the storm might demoralize the wire services of the brokerage houses in the financial district, it was an agreeable surprise yesterday when the reverse developed as the day wore on. There was some interruption, but several of the wire houses reported a good service.

Steel Common Below Par.

The junior shares of the United States Steel Corporation dipped below par yesterday, selling at one time as low as 99½. During the course of the liquidation this week Steel common has held well in comparison with the declines which have been registered elsewhere. Furthermore the shares have been an object of bear attack, it being the impression that if Steel could be driven below par there would be a further unsettling of the entire list, which might develop into another wave of liquidation. Apparently the calculations were without foundation, for while the recession in Steel was a bit disconcerting it was by no means the fore runner of another drive at values that was to eventuate in precipitate declines. Steel did not long remain at the low point and closed the day an ¼ above par after having at one time been as high as 101½.

Copper Market Quiet.

Activity in the copper market has been greatly reduced as compared with that of December, but the price holds firm at about 19¼ cents a pound for near delivery. It is not improbable that, in view of the falling off in demand, there will be a curtailment of production during February. The copper producers are endeavoring to time output with requirements, so that there will be no addition to the surplus stocks of copper. Undoubtedly the exchange situation has had some effect in slowing up foreign demand, but it is not believed that the depreciation in sterling and other exchanges will have more than a temporary effect on the export trade, which is still at rather low ebb. Copper entering into most finished goods is only about 10 per cent. of the total, so that the purcase of the metal could be made here without too great a handicap being encountered.

Consolidated Gas Financing.

The $15,500,000 new financing by the Consolidated Gas Company, which was announced a few days ago, is purely an internal affair. The transaction is not one that means any increase in the amount of securities outstanding in the hands of the public.

Prices and Asset Values.

The record of earnings by industrial companies since January 1915 has been one of substantial achievement. The leaders in many fields have been able to put back large amounts into property, thereby increasing the asset value behind the stock. It was pointed out yesterday that prices and asset value have no definite relation to each other in any market break. At the closing prices yesterday some securities were selling below the amount of actual cash that has been returned to the properties in the four-year period. Republic Iron and Steel, for instance, has increased the value behind its stock by $110 in four years, yet the closing price of the common shares on the big board yesterday was 105¼. U. S. Steel has put back more than $80 a share on the common stock. There are any number of like instances, all of which makes it futile to determine bargain price by comparison with quotations on a 1915 basis.

Pennsylvania Crude Higher.

Another advance has been made in the price of Pennsylvania crude oil, raising the quotation to $5.50 a barrel, which, with a 25 cent premium which is being paid, brings the price up to $5.75 a barrel. This is the highest price on record and represents an increase of 50 cents a barrel since Dec. 31. It is believed that proportionate increases in other grades of crude will follow this latest advance in Pennsylvania oil.

Gold in London.

The price of gold in London did just the contrary of what might have been expected yesterday. With an advance in sterling here it would have been natural for gold to sell lower in London, but instead of this gold advanced to 127s. 4d. a fine ounce, a new high record. The previous high mark was 125s. 9d.

GRAND TRUNK SALE TO DOMINION URGED

WILL VOTE DECISION FEB. 19

Lines Controlled in United States Included in Agreement for Transfer.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Proposals by which the Canadian Government would take over the Grand Trunk Railway system, including lines controlled in the United States, will be laid before stockholders by Sir Alfred Smithers, Chairman of the board, on Feb. 19. With his call for the meeting, sent out today, Sir Alfred issued a circular stating the Board of Directors advised acceptance of the proposals, which were in the form of an agreement approved by the Canadian Parliament last October.

Rate increases granted the Grand Trunk have not kept pace with the enormous expenses incurred, the circular says, and the situation of the company is declared to have been "greatly aggravated." It is pointed out that the United States Government saved shareholders from loss by guaranteeing incomes, while British railroad companies had a similar guarantee for 1914. This assistance was not given the Grand Trunk, it is declared.

"When the Canadian Government becomes the owner of the system," the circular continues, "it can speedily bring about such a readjustment of rates as will permit a fair return on the capital invested."

The Government agrees to assume the debentures of the company and also an issue of 4 per cent. "guaranteed" stock, the holders of the latter receiving in exchange for their stock 4 per cent. nonvoting certificates. The common stock and the several preferred issues of the company are to be purchased by the Government at a price to be fixed by arbitration.

As soon as the shareholders agree to accept the agreement, management of the road will be taken over by the board of five members, appointed partly by the Government and partly by the company. When the sale is consummated the Grand Trunk will formally become part of the Canadian National system, which includes the Intercolonial, the National Transcontinental, and the Canadian Northern.

AID TO EUROPE ADVISED.

Buying Foreign Securites Good Policy, Says W. L. Saunders.

W. L. Saunders, President of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, issued a statement yesterday urging that measures be taken by this country, chiefly through the purchase by American investors of European securities, to assist foreign buyers in purchasing goods in our markets.

"The present demoralization of the foreign exchange market," he said, "while the result of economic factors which have been clearly in the view of American exporters for several months, point to the imperative necessity of putting into operation at once one or more of the plans we have been discussing in this country for the buying of European securities.

"Within the last week we have seen the first effects on our home market of a decline in our European exports. If this tendency continues our great export trade, a leading source of our wealth and prosperity since 1915, will continue to shrink. A severe business reaction will set in and unemployment result.

"And yet our national welfare demands full steam ahead, with an increased production which will keep our plants running on full time, and which will insure for American labor a continuation of its present higher standard of living.

"An output which would result from a full-time operation of our industrial resources cannot be absorbed even by our huge domestic market. Large scale production, which is the route of our industrial success, demands, therefore, an outlet abroad for a portion of our goods.

"We have heard many conjectures as to whether our investing public will absorb European securities. Personally I feel confident that a very considerable amount will be purchased by the American people over and above requirements for additional domestic capital, when we are forced to the realization that the motive and necessity, while of a slightly different nature, is as important to the future prosperity of the nation as the wartime task of floating our Liberty and Victory bond issues."

Heads Foreign Credit Corporation.

Directors of the Foreign Credit Corporation have elected Albert Breton, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, President of the corporation, to succeed Grayson M. P. Murphy, resigned. Harold Stanley, also a Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company, was made a Director and a member of the Executive Committee at the same meeting.

The Columbia Trust Company announces that hereafter its Harlem branch will be open Saturday evenings from 9 to 10:30 to receive deposits.

WILL SEEK $15,000,000 LOAN

General Electric to Offer Twenty-Year 6 Per Cent. Debentures.

J. P. Morgan & Co. are forming a syndicate to underwrite and publicly offer an issue of $15,000,000 twenty-year 6 per cent. debentures of the General Electric Company. The syndicate is expected to include the leading banks and banking firms, and it is anticipated that the issue will be widely distributed. The price at which the securities will be offered to the public is expected to be announced, today, along with all other details. The Directors of the General Electric Company are to meet at Boston today, and as soon as that meeting is finished the way will be open for the formal announcement.

The General Electric Company, it was said yesterday, is to offer the debentures in order to raise funds with which to meet an issue of $15,000,000 notes which matures on July 1. The company had a similar maturity last Fall and met it out of cash in its treasury. It had been believed that the July maturity would be met in the same way, as the company is known to have a very strong cash position.

In explanation of the present financing, a banker said the company could better afford to refund the maturing notes than to pay them out of working capital. General Electric is generally regarded as having credit second to no other industrial corporation in the country, and for that reason it is expected to be able to market its debentures at a fairly high price. At the present time it has need for all of its working capital, and if the notes were to be paid off, there might be some need for negotiating a floating debt, and with the money market in its present situation this is not regarded as desirable.

Municipal Bonds

It is stated that the appreciation in real estate values will so increase the income to municipalities from taxes based on these new valuations that they will be in a better position to meet their current expenses and their outstanding bonds will be even more firmly secured.

On account of their various tax exempt features, Municipal Bonds are attracting the attention of careful investors. We have prepared a list of these bonds showing their net return at current prices.

NEW LOW IN COTTON WHEN PRICES RALLY

FOREIGN TONE IS BETTER

Improvement Thought Temporary and Operators Await Export Situation Developments.

After a morning of considerable weakness, when new low figures were reached for all options, the cotton market yesterday developed a somewhat firmer tone and in the afternoon rallied well, going 15 to 25 points above Wednesday's closing prices and ending the day at net gains of 10 to 20 points. Some trade buying and a good deal of short covering accounted for the turn in the market late in the day. Trading was not on a large scale and most ring operators were inclined to await further developments in the export situation before committing themselves more extensively than they already are.

At Liverpool there also was a better tone. That market opened irregular and unsettled, with prices for near months down a maximum of 28 points, but with the distant months up 5 to 18 points. Then on a letup of the aggressive selling of the two previous days, futures rallied until at the close February was the only month to show a loss and that loss only amounted to 8 points. The others were up 20 to 40 points. Spots, too, were stronger, standing at 27.40d, for a gain of 10 English points.

This improvement abroad was accepted merely as a temporary affair, just as the rally in the foreign exchange market was thought to be only temporary, yet it sufficed to help bring about a rally here. The idea that European countries are to cut short their imports of American cotton received something of a setback yesterday, when the day's clearances showed 11,593 bales out of Galveston for Great Britain and 26,740 bales out of New Orleans and Savannah for France. These were practically all the clearances for the day.

At the same time, it was admitted that many of the European countries could curtail imports of American cotton from now on, considering that they have already taken far more this season to date than they took in the corresponding period of last season. However, most men in the trade incline to the idea that the foreigners will not stop buying raw cotton, as that staple can be turned into manufactured goods which may be sold elsewhere at a profit. Exports of American cotton goods are expected to fall off abruptly, though.

GETS FOUR GERMAN SHIPS.

PANAMA, Feb. 5.—The sale of the former German steamships General G. W. Goethals, General W. A. Gorgas, General C. F. Hodges, and General C. H. Ernst to the Panama Railroad Steamship Line by the United States Shipping Board was announced here today. The purchase price of the ships was given as $750,000.

The four steamers, formerly the Grünewald, Prinz Sigismund, Savoia, and Sachsenwald, aggregating 15,569 tons, were interned at Colon by their German owners at the beginning of the war and were seized by the United States in 1917. They were taken over by the Shipping Board and allocated to the Panama Railroad Steamship Line for operation.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—The French Government has not yet abandoned what it considers its right of preference in the purchase of the German ships interned in Brazil, it was learned today. It is understood here that negotiations are going on between France and the United States regarding their conflicting points of view.

The matter comes under the jurisdiction of the Reparations Commission, now sitting in Paris. It is not known, however, whether the commission has as yet taken up the question.

WARNS POLICY HOLDERS.

Edmonds Says British Companies Should Pay in Dollars.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Representative George W. Edmonds of Pennsylvania, a member of the sub committee of the Merchant Marine Committee studying marine insurance, today advised American holders of insurance in British companies to cancel their policies unless they could obtain an agreement that the policies would be paid in American dollars because of the present low rate of exchange.

"Hundreds of millions of dollars of insurance in this country are written in British companies and are made payable in pounds," said Mr. Edmonds. "A policy in an English company which before the war would in the event of a loss pay $1,000, at the present rate would pay only about $600. In the event that the policy agrees to reinsurance or partakes of a reinsurance if the insurer desires to be protected, he should see where that reinsurance goes."

URGES WHEAT CONTROL END

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—A favorable report today on Senator Gronna's bill repealing the wartime measure under which the Government controls wheat prices was ordered today by the Senate Agriculture Committee. The vote was unanimous.

Under a committee amendment the United States Grain Corporation must wind up its business, pay into the Treasury its profits, estimated at approximately $50,000,000, and submit to Congress a complete report of its operations.

$2,850,864 DEFICIENCY BILL.

Additional Measure Asks $40,000 for Workmen's Compensation.

ALBANY, Feb. 5.—The annual Deficiency bill, carrying a total of $2,850,864 needed for the various State departments to July 1, the end of the fiscal year, was introduced in the Legislature today by Senator Henry M. Sage and Assemblyman H. E. Machold, the Financial Chairman.

Another deficiency bill, asking for a little more than $40,000 to carry out the direct-settlement provision of the Workmen's Compensation act, also was introduced.

OIL CARRIERS SHOW GAINS.

Two Former Standard Subsidiaries Report Big Earnings.

Two oil transportation companies, formerly subsidiaries of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, issued annual reports for 1919 yesterday. The New York Transit Co. had a net income of $1,028,848, while that of the Northern Pipe Line amounted to $416,777.

The pipe line corporation's revenue was equivalent to $10.41 a share ($100 par value), earned on the $4,000,000 capital stock, as compared with net income of $503,234, or $12.58 a share, in the preceding year. Deducting $400,000 in dividends, there was a surplus of $16,777.

The New York Transit Co.'s net profits represent $20.57 paid on each share ($100 par value). There was an increase of $114,554 over the 1918 revenues, which were equivalent to $18.28 a share. Deducting $1,000,000 paid in dividends, and adding a previous surplus of $5,913,863, the total surplus amounts to $5,942,711, a rise over 1918 of $28,848. The total assets now stand at $13,407,102, an increase over the previous year of $282,742.

40-STORY BUILDING FOR OLD HERALD SITE

PLOT TO BE SOLD OR LEASED

Assessed at $2,500,000 with Present Structure, Which Is to Come Down in 15 Months.

Negotiations are pending for the sale of the property formerly occupied by The New York Herald in Herald Square, now used by The Evening Telegram, as a site for a forty-story commercial structure of monumental design. The property which is owned by the Manice estate, represented by William de Forest Manice, is assessed for taxes at $2,342,000 for the land and at $2,500,000 with the building. It was leased to the late James Gordon Bennett, who erected the building now there as a home for The New York Herald when he vacated the old Herald Building at Broadway and Ann Street, where the St. Paul Building now stands.

When Frank A. Munsey bought The Herald recently he assumed the lease of the building, which has about fifteen months to run.

The property has a frontage of 211 feet on the east side of Broadway, between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Streets, 90.9 feet on Thirty-fifth Street, 136 feet on Thirty-sixth Street, and 197 feet on Sixth Avenue. Negotiations for the sale began as soon as it was made public recently that The New York Herald would be absorbed by The Sun. Two plans for disposing of the property are under consideration, one for an outright sale to a syndicate and the other for a long-term lease.

Cass Gilbert, the architect who designed the Woolworth Building, has prepared plans for a forty-story structure for the Herald Building site, but it was not learned yesterday whether these plans were for the prospective buyer or for a lessee.

The plot on which the Herald Building stands was bought by the Manice estate about seventy years ago for $2,500 at a sale of common lands by the city. A retail grocery firm occupied the south end of the block before it was leased to Mr. Bennett.

William de Forest Manice refused to discuss the sale yesterday, saying the matter was in the hands of Joseph P. Day, who sold the James Gordon Bennett property on Washington Heights last year.

Douglas Eskell of Joseph P. Day's office said last evening that the negotiations were under way. "We have received a number of flattering offers for the property," he added.

"They include both sale and leasehold proposals. Among the bidders was the United Cigar Stores Company. We have refused to give any option on the property, for we want to be able to consider new offers that are being made."

COURT SAVES POWER PLANT

As a result of two decisions yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Delahanty the opposition of property owners in the vicinity to the power plant of the United Gas and Electric Company, in the block bounded by Academy and Dyckman Streets, Nagle Avenue and the Harlem River, in the Dyckman section of Manhattan, will not close the power plant and stop the supply of electricity to the upper part of Manhattan, all of the Bronx and part of Westchester, and also part of Queens, unless the decisions are reversed.

Justice Delahanty heard two suits affecting the right of the electric light company to operate its huge power plant, erected ten years ago at a cost of $8,000,000, on the ground that the plant was a nuisance, a trespasser, and was damaging the surrounding property by discharging several millions of gallons of water over it into Sherman Creek and eventually into the Harlem River.

The Fort George Realty Company, as the owner of adjacent property, sought an injunction restraining the operation of the plant and a taxpayer brought a suit against the Board of Estimate to prevent the closing up of Academy Street in the block occupied by the power plant on the ground that the city would waste public property by it. In the Fort George Realty suit the papers showed that the water ejected from the plant was expected to confine itself to a tunnel while on its way to Sherman Creek, but the tunnel could not contain it.

The court said that to grant the relief asked for in the complaints and declared the electric light company a trespasser would result in widespread inconvenience to the public and great damage to individuals not directly involved in the controversy. Such relief should not be afforded when the plaintiff's rights are not so clear or so paramount as to justify it, the court said.

MIDDLEMEN NEEDED, MARKET HEAD SAYS

Speakers at the first dinner of the newly formed National Association of State Marketing Officials, representing a number of States, at the Park Avenue Hotel last night, laid emphasis upon the statement that in bringing about greater co-operation between the producer and consumer the middleman cannot be eliminated. They took the view that a better understanding must be brought about between all three elements if the consumer is to receive lower priced foodstuffs.

Dr. Eugene H. Porter, New York State Market Commissioner and President of the new association, presided. In his opening remarks he said that unfortunately a spirit of antagonism has grown up between the producers and the consumers, which is unjustified. He said that 2,000 carloads of food are received in New York City every day and that 20,000 persons are engaged in the distribution of food. The present system of food distribution, he said, was accomplished with reasonable efficiency.

S. Frederick Taylor, representing the Merchants' Association of New York, spoke on "New York City, the Market Place of the World." He said he was against the terminal market or any other radical change without first having a comprehensive survey. He also declared that the bill introduced at Albany providing for zoning of the sale of milk in this city was not calculated to be of benefit to anybody.

Chester Morrell, Assistant Director of the Bureau of Markets of the United States Department of Agriculture, told of the relation of the Federal Government to marketing activities. Lou Stuhr, Secretary of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture, told of the new form of government in his State, which embraces a Cabinet, fixes responsibility and eliminates commissions and boards. The State has five departments—Finance, Trade and Commerce; Labor, Public Works, Public Welfare, and Agriculture.

Alexis Clark, Chief of the Bureau of Markets of New Jersey, declared that New Jersey was getting somewhere in the matter of co-operation with the producers, middlemen and consumers. This co-operation, he said, was bringing about better conditions for all concerned.

Beginning at 4 o'clock this morning and continuing until noon the visitors, of whom there were about 100, will make a trip of inspection to the wholesale food markets, piers and railroad freight terminals.

The association began its three-day conference on food marketing problems at the Murray Hill Hotel yesterday morning. Dr. Porter presided, and in his address said that poor distribution and complicated marketing conditions, rather than any reduction in production, were responsible for high prices.

The morning session was taken up with the formation of committees covering the various fields, such as standardization, co-operative organization, market reporting, interstate relations, transportation, and legislation. The afternoon was devoted to meetings of the committees.

BUTTER—The receipts yesterday were 4,965 packages. The storm interfered with the movement of stock, and there was only light trading at barely sustained prices for the higher grades of fresh table butter, while the secondary qualities were weaker and dull. Creamery, higher than extras, pound, 67¼@68c; extras, 92 score, 67c; firsts, 90 to 91 score, 65½@66c; firsts, 88 to 89 score, 59@62c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 58@58½c; lower grades, 53@55c; held, higher than extras, 63½@64c; extras, 62@63c; firsts, 58@61c; seconds, 56@57¼c; unsalted, higher than extras, 70¼@71c; extras, 69@70c; firsts, 62@67c; seconds, 58@60c; State dairy tubs, finest, 65@66c; good to prime, 60@64c; common to fair, 50@59c; renovated, extras, 57@57½c; firsts, 55@56c; imitation creamery, firsts, 49@50c; ladies, current make, firsts, 46@47c; seconds, 43@44c; lower grades, 41@42c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 43c; No. 2, 42c; lower grades, 39@41c.

EGGS—The receipts yesterday were 7,110 cases. Heavy snow interfered with the delivery of stock and the filling of orders. There was some shortage of fine stock, and prices were, at least nominally, higher. The tone of the market was irregular. Storage eggs were moving a little better on store trade, and some sales of good useful qualities were reported a little above the prices recently accepted. Seriously defective goods were pressed for sale at any reasonable offer. White eggs shared in the advance. But few California whites could be obtained, and the limited quantity available was commanding the advanced figures quoted. Freshgathered, extras, dozen, 65@64c; extra firsts, 61@62c; firsts, 59@60c; seconds and scores, 54@58c; refrigerator, firsts, charges paid, 46@48c; seconds, 40@45c; under grades, 36@38c; checks, 37@30c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby Western, hennery whites, extras, 71@72c; firsts to extra firsts, 69@70c; gathered whites, firsts to extra firsts, 68@70c; Western whites, under grades, 62@65c; pullets, 58@60c; Pacific Coast, whites, express, extra firsts to extras, 69@72c; firsts, 65@68c; pullets, Petaluma, 57@60c; other Western and Southern, gathered whites, 60@67c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby, hennery browns, extras, 66@66c; gathered brown and mixed colors, extras, 63@64c; firsts to extra firsts, 60@62c.

WILSON APPROVES GERMAN SHIPS' SALE

PUBLIC SALE NEXT WEEK

No One Interest Will Be Allowed to Buy Entire Fleet of Thirty.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—President Wilson has approved the sale of thirty former German passenger vessels, for which the Shipping Board recently received bids, and negotiations for the sales will proceed, Chairman Payne of the board announced tonight.

To meet objections of the War Department, which recently protested against the sale of certain of the liners on the ground that they were needed as a transport reserve, Mr. Payne said a clause would be inserted in the sale contracts specifically and emphatically keeping the vessels under the American flag and subject to the needs of the army in case of a national emergency.

None of the bids received for thirty of the liners has been accepted or rejected, the Chairman said. So that the Government might obtain the fairest prices for the fleet, it was decided to dispose of the vessels by public sale, and the following resolution was passed unanimously by the board today:

"Resolved, That the ship sales division be and is hereby authorized to sell all ex-German passenger ships, subject to the approval of the board as to each ship."

All operators of Shipping Board vessels and other shipping companies will be invited to come to Washington the middle of next week, the Chairman stated, and the sale of the vessels will be conducted on the principle of an auction. No one interest will be permitted to purchase the whole fleet of thirty ships, Mr. Payne said, but if a sufficient price is offered for all the vessels allocated to one line, as the newly established South American service or the proposed lines to Hamburg and Southampton, a block sale will be made.

Among the bids which have been received the Chairman said there was one of $28,000,000 for the whole fleet from the International Mercantile Marine and one from the same corporation of $4,000,000 for the Leviathan alone.

Ships sold by the Shipping Board up to Jan. 20 brought $82,424,408, according to reports completed today by the board. A total of 163 vessels of 610,684 deadweight tons was disposed of to more than a score of companies.

Investment funds of the American people must be drawn on to finance the transfer of the Government-owned mercantile marine to private ownership, Ira M. Campbell, former admiralty lawyer of the Shipping Board, said today before the Senate Commerce Committee. Funds in banks and other commercial channels would not be sufficient, he asserted, and therefore he advocated legislation to give mortgages and bonds issued against ships higher standing as liens against them.

IMPORTANT Oil Announcement

Brinkley Producing & Refining Co.

The trustees of the Brinkley Producing & Refining Company have agreed upon a definite standard plan for the furtherance of the company's interests.

The only obligation of the company outside of current expenses is the completion of payment on the valuable property we acquired in block No. 74, Wichita County, Texas.

On this property are the 4 oil wells already brought in, with the fifth about to be brought in.

As the Brinkley Producing & Refining Company expect, at an early date, to be able to declare a substantial dividend, it is deemed most desirable to be entirely free from this one obligation, and therefore subscriptions for a limited number of shares will be accepted at the present price of $1.50 per share.

Our latest telegram from our field operators reads as follows:

"Wells number two, three and four all swabbing, number five partly drilled in and making gas and oil. Liner of number one out, hole cleaned ready for shooting, not least evidence of caving. Called shooter on long distance to Electra. They promise to go to our lease tomorrow provided it does not rain any more tonight and shoot number one.

"GEORGE H. GREENWAY, Chief of Production."

If you have not closely followed the activities and progress of this company send at once for full information.

SMOOT CONDEMNS PRINT PAPER WASTE

SHERMAN ATTACKS McADOO

Says He Consumed Much Paper "When He Thought He Was a Candidate."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Renewing the charges of an enormous waste of print paper by executive departments of the Federal Government, Senator Smoot, Republica, Utah, told the Senate today that from July 1, 1916, to July 15, 30,144,362 copies of speeches made by Cabinet officials and other persons were printed and distributed through the mails at a total cost of $442,000.

Senator Smoot said this not only was a waste of paper, but an "abuse of the public's money," and a "wicked practice" that should be stopped immediately in view of the serious print paper situation.

The Treasury Department alone, he said, had 25,066,000 copies of speeches, requiring 758,896 pounds of paper, printed and distributed, while the Railroad Administration had 3,055,500 copies of speeches made by William G. McAdoo while Director General of Railroads, and other persons, printed. One million copies of a speech made by Mr. McAdoo at Altoona, Pa., in 1918, were printed and distributed, Senator Smoot charged.

Senator Sherman, Republican, Illinois, declared much paper was consumed by Mr. McAdoo in distributing "propaganda" as railroad literature when he was Director of Railroads and "thought he was a candidate for President."

"In Michigan," said Senator Sherman, "the Newberry campaign committee was damned from Dan to Beersheba because he paid his own expenses. Mr. McAdoo paid his campaign bills at the expense of the Government, and he passes as an example of public virtue."

Limitation of the size of daily newspapers was suggested by Senator Jones, Democrat, New Mexico, who said his bill for that purpose had been pigeonholed in committee. Part of the blame for the paper shortage, he added, belonged to the Senate, which consumed a great deal of space in the Congressional Record "by talking for hours about matters with which we all are familiar."

It was suggested that the printing of speeches by Government departments at Government expense and the franking of them through the mails might be questionable under the law.

"The departments of this Government," said Senator Smoot, "do not care much what the law is."

Printing of the 30,000,000 speeches, Senator Smoot said, required 894,101 pounds or 447 tons of white print paper while the envelopes required an additional 1,451,784 pounds.

For the executive office, he continued, 1,163,862 copies of speeches were printed at a cost of $30,000, while 307,000 copies of speeches were printed for the Food Administration.

"We ought to convince the people that propaganda is unnecessary on every question," said Senator Smoot. "That would save thousands of pounds of paper."

Senator Gronna, Republican, North Dakota, said the State Department had succeeded in getting some relief from the embargo on wood pulp imposed by the Canadian Government.

Secretary Baker in a communication today to all branches of the Army and War Department called attention to the paper shortage and directed all officers "to scrutinize closely all requests for printed matter and take such steps as may be necessary to eliminate waste in the public printing and binding."

TO PROTECT FARMERS.

Notice has been served on all fertilizer brokers, fertilizer manufacturers, and dry mixers that the Secretary of Agriculture has placed an embargo on the sale of mixed fertilizers containing borax in excess of one-tenth of 1 per cent. unless the containers were so marked as to show the percentage of borax present, according to a bulletin issued by the department. This order was issued by the Government to protect the average farmer and conserve accordingly the 1920 food crop until such experiments as are now going forward in regard to the injurious effects of borax in fertilizers may be completed at the various State experiment stations.

These experiments have been made because disaster followed the use of fertilizers containing borax by farmers in certain parts of the country. The scarcity of potash during the war brought into use a product which carried enough borax to be harmful to crops if applied in the way farmers usually handle the fertilization of their soils. The Department of Agriculture declares that it would be better for farmers to reject all borax fertilizers unless they are going to broadcast it or very thoroughly mix it with the earth.

It appears that a large proportion of the potash salts available for fertilizer use in the Spring of 1920 contain more or less borax. Discoveries have also been made tending to show that imported nitrate of soda contains some borax.

BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday—6@6¼ per cent. for the best names. Wednesday—6@6¼ per cent. for the best names. The quotations are for six months' paper.

Gray Goods Business Dull.

Yesterday was described as the quietest day the local gray goods market has seen so far in 1920, but prices were about on the same basis as that which prevailed on Wednesday. Some fair-sized sales of 38½-inch 64-60s were made for February at 22 cents, but similar lots of Eastern 38½-inch 60-48s brought 21 cents. Sateens and fine-yarn goods continued to attract little attention, but in the sheetings business was done on 5.50s for March-April delivery at 17¼ cents. February-March shipments of 6.15-yard sheetings were disposed of at 16½ cents.

The Mark-Up Permitted.

In the women's apparel lines the opinion of the leading merchants who have attended conferences with the Government officials is that, to be considered reasonable, a mark-up must not exceed 60 per cent. This margin, it is explained, includes even those articles which embody the latest style, and for which the merchants usually tack on an additional profit to take care of the reductions that must be made later. Under the present interpretation of the law against undue profits no averaging of profits is permitted, and for that reason the limit of 60 per cent. has been advised.

Calm Before the Storm.

In the opinion of a well-posted observer of conditions in the silk trade, the present situation might be described as the "calm before the storm." The only really bright spot in present trading, he said, appears to be the business coming from the dress industry, but even that is on none too sure a basis. The large number of additions to the jobbing branch of the silk trade supplies a very "wabbly" group to the market. Prospects have become so generally uncertain that it would not prove surprising to see some of the stocks held by the newcomers sold out at reduced prices. In other words, the small jobbers may hand back the market, which has been so largely a sellers' one, to the buyers.

The style show put on by the Dry Goods Union for the benefit of its buyers was concluded yesterday with the showing of a number of coat lines. Owing to the fact that no orders were given while the display was being held, there was no way of judging how large a volume of sales resulted from the exhibition. The buyers, according to William Hoeltzer, manager of the union, appeared to be quite interested in coats, although not to the extent that they were in dresses. The latter seem to be in great measure the season's favorite, with coats following and suits last. The coats shown yesterday were usually of the three-quarter-length type, and silk coats and wraps received favorable comment.

See No Fabric Shortage.

The attitude taken by the average buyer of woolens and dress fabrics is a curious one at present. Despite the allotments being made by the largest mills, their customers do not seem to be showing much nervousness over a possible scarcity of material. The large operators feel assured that their needs cannot be overlooked, and that they will be taken care of. The smaller purchasers have changed their complaints over the paucity of their allotments to an attitude of resignation. With the chance that exports will be less under the more serious situation of exchange, the fabric buyers feel that the domestic market will get larger supplies to draw on.

It Is Fulfilling Predictions.

Some of the scoffers at early predictions that Havana would cut in sharply on Palm Beach this year as the leading Winter resort for Americans, largely as a result of the Eighteenth Amendment, are beginning to change their tune. Not only do reports from various quarters tell of greatly increased travel to the Cuban capital, but it is receiving serious attention as a location of Winter specialty shops. At least one of the leading local style creators has made arrangements for opening an Havana branch, and it is understood that others will follow. Some of the prominent local shops are also coupling up Havana with Palm Beach in their advertisements of Winter resort wear for women.

Few Goods Are Offered.

One of the most unusual things about the present dull period in the local market for unfinished cotton goods is said by experienced traders to be the remarkably small amount of merchandise that is being offered on the decline. One thing this was said yesterday to show was that less actual speculative buying had been done in the past several months than had generally been thought, both on the part of simon pure speculators and "legitimate" second hands as well. A second thing the apparent unwillingness to part with goods was said to show was a belief that the present decline is only temporary, and that prices are in for a further advance sooner or later. That being the case, it was asserted, converters stand to win whether they sell their holdings later in the gray or whether they pass them on to the jobbers at the price bases then prevailing.

Would Like to Buy for Stock.

The opportunity to go into the clothing market and purchase stocks for the future at the present reduced prices has not escaped the attention of retailers. Ordinarily it would be regarded as a golden opportunity, but financing of these stocks presents a difficulty that is not easily overcome. It is not the only obstacle, however, but shares importance with the Government's attitude on hoarding. The Government officials are known to be against purchases of goods made now that will not be sold for more than six months to come, and, furthermore, they have issued a mandate against basing prices on replacement cost. These reasons are enough to discourage many retailers from attempting to exploit the present opportunity except to make purchases for immediate sale.

Japanese Raw Silks Quiet.

A period of quiet has descended upon the Yokohama silk market. Stocks on hand there are reported by cables to H. L. Gwalter & Co. of this city at 9,000 bales, of which not more than 3,500 are available for export, against 33,300 bales a year ago. The Canton market continues very strong, with offerings confined to second and third crop silk for delivery in May, June and July. Asking prices for new style filatures, which are used very largely in this country, have advanced somewhat. The Shanghai market is firm and advancing, a rise in exchange adding to the lay-down cost of these sorts. Late reports from Italy say that the Milan market is firm and that the best grades have advanced another 50 lire per kilo. American demand is absent, but the French manufacturers are buying well there. The local market is quiet and irregular, with the interruption of cable service with Japan hindering business materially.

Arranges for Research Bureau.

Victor W. Sincere of the Bailey Company of Cleveland is in this city making arrangements for the organization of the Research Bureau, of which his store and a number of other large department stores throughout the country will be members. A meeting of the committee in charge of the work is scheduled for Feb. 24. It is likely that the bureau will make its headquarters in the Marbridge Building, understood to be owned by the interests that also control the chain of stores. From an authoritative source it was learned yesterday that when the plans of the organizers of the retail group are completed, the total business of the combination will be between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000 a year. The addition of several other prominent stores to the present chain is under consideration now, and the large banking concerns are said to be considerably interested in the project, which will be the biggest thing in the department store field in the country.

INFLUENZA DEATHS FEWER THIS YEAR

DAY'S MORTALITY LOWER

Coincident with a slight decrease in the number of cases of influenza reported yesterday to the Health Department and a slight increase in the number of cases of pneumonia incident to influenza, Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, announced that a comparison of figures for the period of the epidemic of 1918 corresponding with the same period of the present epidemic revealed about one-third fewer deaths from the disease this Winter.

"In the 1918 epidemic," said Dr. Copeland, "the total of deaths from influenza and pneumonia up to Oct. 17, which corresponds with today in the present epidemic, was 5,725, while the total to date this year is 3,988.

"That substantiates the contention of physicians that the disease this year is not as virulent as in the first influenza epidemic. We combine our statistics on deaths in such an epidemic to include influenza and pneumonia, because pneumonia, generally speaking, is incident to influenza.

"The figures of the first epidemic show that on Oct. 17, 1918, 52,757 cases of influenza were reported to the Health Department. The total number of cases reported up to this morning in the present epidemic is 50,000. In other words, in the present epidemic one person out of every 120 in the city, estimating the population at 6,000,000, has been afflicted with the disease.

"The deaths from all causes, according to statistics compiled today for the preceding twenty-four hours, reached 917, which is 204 fewer than on Oct. 17, 1918, the corresponding day in the first epidemic. There were thirty-four fewer deaths from influenza than reported up to 10 o'clock Wednesday morning for the preceding twenty-four hours and eleven fewer from pneumonia.

"There were thirty-four fewer deaths reported this morning from influenza than up to 10 o'clock Wednesday morning for the preceding twenty-four hours, and a falling off of eleven in the number of deaths from pneumonia reported for the same period."

The statistics made public yesterday follow:

Borough.	Cases report. Influ.	Pneu.	Deaths. Influ.	Pneu.
Manhattan	1,298	437	73	99
Bronx	494	56	22	29
Queens	257	87	6	13
Richmond	90	25	9	3
Total	3,126	819	152	182
Total Wednesday	3,277	782	186	193
Corresponding day 1918	4,733	646	336	287
Total from Jan. 1	51,592	10,212	1,367	2,621

Dr. Copeland said he had been told that applications for evictions against 600 families in the Bronx had been made and that several Justices of Municipal Courts had telephoned asking the attitude of the Health Department in the matter.

"I informed them that the Health Department, under the sanitary code, would proceed in the courts against any landlord who evicted a tenant suffering from an infectious or communicable disease, such as influenza," he said. "It seems to me that an appeal should be made to every owner of a house where there are tenants to furnish plenty of heat and to get into touch with the Health Commissioner before he evicts a tenant."

Dr. Copeland said he would communicate with the Police Department today in an effort to compel owners and occupants of houses to clean sidewalks and gutters in front of their premises.

UP-STATE CASES INCREASE.

ALBANY, Feb. 5.—An increase in the cases and death from pneumonia and influenza was reported to the State Department of Health in the twenty-four hours ending at 5 P. M. yesterday.

Influenza cases in the State outside of New York City showed a total of 2,500, with 16 deaths. Albany reported 164 cases with 2 deaths, Jamestown 181 cases and no deaths, Rochester 563 cases and 5 deaths.

The totals for pneumonia, exclusive of New York City, were 239 cases with 53 deaths. Buffalo reported 13 cases and 3 deaths, Syracuse 31 cases and 14 deaths, and Albany 21 cases and 2 deaths.

DISEASE WANES IN CHICAGO.

New Cases of Influenza Total 608 and Pneumonia 224.

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—Deaths from influenza and pneumonia and the number of new cases of both diseases continued to decline today.

One hundred and thirty-five deaths—63 from influenza and 72 from pneumonia—were reported for the twenty-four-hour period.

New cases of influenza totaled 608 and of pneumonia 224.

100,000 NEW CASES IN WEEK.

Federal Public Health Service Reports Decline at Army Camps.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—More than 100,000 additional influenza cases were reported during the week ended Jan. 31, said a statement issued today by the Public Health Service. The largest increase was in New York City, where 30,406 new cases had developed.

The epidemic is steadily abating at nearly all army camps, according to reports to medical authorities. To date 2,682 cases have been reported in the military personnel, with 42 deaths.

HIGH RECORD AT BALTIMORE.

Influenza New Cases Number 652 and Pneumonia 224.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 5.—A new high record in the influenza epidemic was made here today, 652 new cases and five deaths being reported.

Pneumonia continued to show a high average of new cases and deaths. There are 200 cases of broncho-pneumonia and five deaths, with 24 cases of lobar pneumonia and seven deaths.

From the counties a total of 282 cases of influenza was reported, a decrease of 27 cases from yesterday's figures. New pneumonia cases totaled 12.

METHODIST FAVORS DANCING

Dr. Marshall Would Lift Ban and Rely on Individual Discrimination.

The request of the National Association of Music Merchants at their dinner on Wednesday evening at the Commodore that the Methodist Church lift its ban on dancing was favored yesterday by a number of local Methodist pastors. The question is to be presented next May in Des Moines, Iowa, at the quadrennial General Methodist Conference. The Rev. Dr. Chester C. Marshall, pastor of St. James's Methodist Church, Madison Avenue and 126th Street, said:

"I believe the ban ought to be lifted, and that the whole matter should be placed on the higher plane of individual decision and discrimination. The historic attitude of Methodism is expressed in the rule of John Wesley: 'To do only such things as one can do in the name of Jesus Christ.' That is all the rule that the Methodist Church should attempt."

Dr. Marshall recalled that at the last two quadrennial general conferences the Board of Bishops had brought in a report advocating lifting the ban on dancing.

AIRPLANE AT TURIN ON TRIP TO CAPE TOWN

South African Government Machine Makes One Stop After Leaving London.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The South African Government airplane which left the Brooklands airdrome Wednesday, arrived in Turin, Italy, the same day, after a one-stop flight, according to advices received here. The plane is attempting to fly to Capetown, South Africa.

First attempts to fly from Cairo to Cape Town will be watched in England with an interest equal to that taken in the flight of Captain Ross Smith from England to Australia. This is largely due to the fact that much of the country to be traversed is of the wildest character and is remote from civilization.

The Daily Times already has a big airplane at Cairo, which flew there from England. It will start Friday on the first lap of the southward journey to Atbara, 870 miles up the Nile. It will carry a crew of five and a scientific observer.

Peter Chalmers Mitchell, astronomer and secretary to the Zoological Society of London since 1903, was passenger in a plane which left yesterday morning for Cape Town, rising from an aviation field near this city. There is no suggestion of a race between these two machines, The Times particularly disavowing any idea of competition.

Construction of landing places and accumulations of gasoline and stores throughout the route to be followed has just been completed after a year's work, but the isolation of some of the stations, amidst dense forests of immense extent, will necessitate especial care and daylight landings. Dangers in the event of accident from wild beasts, savages, and lack of communications, appear to be great.

URGES GOVERNMENT THRIFT

Resolutions calling upon the Congressional Representatives from New York State and City to move for an investigation by Congress of the personnel of Government employes and of expenditures were indorsed at the meeting of the New York State Chamber of Commerce yesterday. In presenting these resolutions Charles D. Freeman asserted that it was desirable to bring about the discharge of former war employes who are still in Government service unnecessarily, in order that they might return to productive operation.

He asserted that whereas there were 500,000 Government employes before the war, the number was increased to 1,000,000 during the war, and there were 850,000 at present, of whom 350,000 were being paid money that nearly amounted to the Government's expenditures in the year 1915-1916. He said that the Surgeon General of the army was asking for an appropriation of $85,000,000 for the construction of hospitals, while "within twenty-five miles of New York City the Government recently had sold for $100,000 a hospital that cost $3,000,000. It was time for business men to make known their sentiments with respect to taxation and appropriation.

A motion directing the Executive Committee to take steps to educate the public to the necessity of a consumption tax, favoring which the Chamber of Commerce already had gone on record was referred to the Executive Committee. A motion was adopted directing the President of the Chamber to appoint a delegate to attend the meeting of the Legislative Committee on State Canals, to be held at Albany on Feb. 18.

Julean Arnold, Commercial Attaché of the American Embassy at Peking, spoke on conditions in China. He deprecated the fact that America had only one ship on the Pacific and only once cable, which he asserted was frequently out of commission. China's greatest need, according to Mr. Arnold, was for transportation.

Reports were adopted indorsing the construction of State highways, Senator Kenyon's Americanization bill, and the Lockwood bill for the increase of teachers' salaries.

AN INNESS BRINGS $1,050.

Forest Picture Leads Sale of Collection of Mrs. J. F. Carroll and Others.

There were many names of well known artists in the collection of pictures of the late Mrs. John F. Carroll, the late Matilda Stiefel, E. S. Ulman, and other owners and estates which opened at the Anderson Galleries last evening. A George Inness, "The Interior of a Wood, Keene Valley," a deep-toned forest picture, No. 53, 18 inches by 24, from the Mrs. John F. Carroll collection, purchased at the Frederick S. Gibbs sale, brought the highest price of the evening, going to H. Schultheis for $1,050. The second price, $625, was given for an attractive little Boudin, "The Harbor at Antwerp," No. 54, which went to C. W. Kraushaar. Following is a list of pictures bringing some of the higher prices:

5TH AV. TRAFFIC TO GO SOUTH FROM 10 TO 5

Police Department Issues Instructions Covering All Points—North-bound Vehicles in Park Av.

Beginning Feb. 16, Fifth Avenue, between Fifty-seventh and Thirty-fourth Streets, from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M., will be a "one-way street" for southbound vehicular traffic, while Park Avenue between these cross-streets will be reserved exclusively for northbound travel during the same hours. The new regulations, which were explained by John A. Harriss, Special Deputy Police Commissioner in charge of traffic problems, to members of the Uptown Club at noon yesterday, create a "belt line" of one-way traffic on Fifth and Park Avenues. Outside of the restricted hours traffic will move, as heretofore, in both directions.

Signal towers, twelve feet above the pavement, to be erected on the avenue and Fifty-seventh, Fiftieth, Forty-second, Thirty-eighth and Thirty-fourth Streets, each equipped with telephones and push-button signals and flashlights, will direct traffic. In place of the familiar red and green "stop" and "go" semaphore signals, drivers must accustom themselves to red, yellow and green traffic tower signals.

The regulations will be in force for thirty days as an experiment, after which, if they prove satisfactory, similar towers will be erected on Park Avenue and the system extended to other congested sections in New York. Commissioner Harriss promised that if the scheme interfered with business adjacent to Fifth Avenue traffic officials would act promptly on complaints.

New Regulations in Detail.

"Beginning Monday, Feb. 16, the Police Department will introduce an innovation in the regulation of street traffic on Fifth and Park Avenues, between Thirty-fourth and Fifty-seventh Streets, which, it is confidently expected by Special Deputy Police Commissioner John A. Harriss, in charge of traffic, and by the Traffic Committee, by the uniformed officers, by the Fifth Avenue Association, the Fifth Avenue Coach Company and a representative committee of business men, will serve to greatly relieve existing congestion.

"The plan is handsomebtedly the first of its kind to be put into effect on such an important thoroughfare, being the introduction there of one-way traffic, which heretofore has been confined to narrow streets of much less travel.

"Beginning at 10 A. M. and continuing until 5 P. M., and between the cross-streets mentioned, traffic will move south only on Fifth Avenue and north only on Park Avenue, thus forming what might be termed a 'belt line' of rotary traffic,' which, although the area mentioned forms a square, means one-way traffic in a circle.

"Traffic on Madison Avenue, which bisects the belt-line area and on Sixth Avenue will be maintained as two-way traffic.

"Vehicles going north or south on Madison or Sixth Avenues may turn at any available block (according to one-way traffic regulations in force on the cross streets) to reach Fifth or Park Avenues, and the same may be done on leaving either Fifth or Park Avenues, east or west, to reach any point desired.

"Police signal towers are to be erected at Fifty-seventh Street, Fiftieth Street, Forty-second Street, Thirty-eighth Street and Thirty-fourth Street, similar to signal towers on the railroads, from which the movement of traffic on Fifth Avenue and cross streets will be controlled by flash lights, telephone and push button signals, operating between the towers and to be observed by the traffic officers, also, at the intersection semaphores.

Tower Bases "Isles of Safety."

"The floor of the towers will be twelve feet above the roadway to afford a clear view for their occupants, and the towers will be so provided at the base as to sheer off passing vehicles, thus becoming, in addition to their specific purpose, 'isles of safety' for pedestrians crossing the avenue at those points.

"The signals to be flashed from the towers up and down the avenue, day and night, will be as follows:

Stop Signal: Traffic shall move on Fifth Avenue and all cross traffic from the side streets shall stop behind the building lines, or limit lines when marked on the roadway, so as to give clear intersections.

"Yellow Signal: All traffic on Fifth Avenue as well as side streets shall stop behind the building lines, or limit lines when marked on the roadway, so as to give clear intersections.

"Green Signal: Traffic from the side streets shall proceed.

"These signals, which will be in operation from 9 A. M. until 12 midnight, will regulate not only the movement of vehicular traffic, but also apply to all pedestrians in crossing the roadways, which they must do at the crossing.

"Upon the approach of fire apparatus the traffic officer in the towers will flash the yellow signal, so as to stop all traffic and give the apparatus right of way throughout the avenue or the side streets, wherever it may be going. It is hoped that eventually the towers will be to connected with the fire stations as to be warned ahead to clear the way instead of waiting until the apparatus approaches.

"Before 10 A. M. and after 5 P. M. traffic on Fifth and Park Avenues will be both ways, but on Fifth Avenue under control of the men in the towers and at the other street intersections where the semaphores will be maintained. The same signals (red, yellow, and green) will be alternately flashed, or as required by any emergency, always having the same signification as stated.

Extension of System Predicted.

"Although an experiment to be tried at least thirty days, it is confidently believed that the new regulations will be demonstrated as of such practical advantage as to be regularly adopted and probably extended to other congested sections of Greater New York.

"As may be inferred, this scheme was undertaken until given prolonged and deep study, with special reference to the congested conditions on Fifth Avenue, which have become so intense as to make anything like a fluent and expeditious movement of traffic quite impossible. Something very radical had to be done.

"The actual test it was found to have taken as long as 40 minutes for a vehicle to go on Fifth Avenue from 57th to 34th Streets, or the reverse way, at certain times of the day.

"By the new regulation it is estimated that this most annoying and costly delay will be reduced by more than 60 per cent., or to less than 10 minutes between the points mentioned.

"This great reduction in time, as well as saving of wear and tear upon vehicles and inconvenience to individuals, will be accomplished by the continuous movement of traffic between the cross-streets for periods of one minute and a half succeeded in turn by periods of one minute for the procedure of cross traffic.

"In other words, traffic on Fifth Avenue will be practically continuous in movement except during the stated intervals when it is interrupted for one minute at a time to permit traffic to cross from the side streets. By conservative estimates, allowing one minute and a half between towers and intervals of one minute for cross traffic, a vehicle may pass from any street and will reach Thirty-fourth Street (unless some unusual circumstance prevents) in from seven and a half to ten minutes.

"The tower at Thirty-eighth Street will not be used as a stopping point but is necessary owing to the elevation of the ground at that point as a means of carrying through the signals flashed between the towers at Forty-second and Thirty-fourth Streets. Towers will not be erected on Park Avenue for the present.

"All vehicles may stop at the curb on either side of the roadway on both Fifth and Park Avenues, between Fifty-seventh and Thirty-fourth Streets, headed south, of course, on Fifth Avenue, and between Thirty-fourth and Fifty-seventh Streets, headed north on Park Avenue.

Rules for Park Avenue.

"As Park Avenue is divided longitudinally by a parkway it will be a natural and obviously advantageous practice for drivers who intend turning off to the east to keep to the east side of the parkway and for those intending to turn off to the west to keep to the west side of the parkway.

"At the Grand Central Station, one of the most serious danger spots will be eliminated by using the ramp on Forty-second Street.

"Greater safety, convenience and comfort to drivers of vehicles, as well as to pedestrians and shoppers on Fifth Avenue, it is firmly believed, will be brought about by these regulations.

"Officers of the Fifth Avenue Association and leading business men, individually, have been consulted as to the experiment and their hearty approval and co-operation has been most gratefully appreciated by Commissioner Harriss and the officers and men of the force.

"After the installation of the new plan, which will cost the city nothing, the expense having been met by the Special Deputy Commissioner in charge of traffic, nothing remains for success but kindly co-operation of the general public.

"Drivers, who are expert and familiar with the general traffic regulations will soon become acquainted with the special regulations to be introduced and pedestrians will be guided and safeguarded as much as possible, by policemen stationed at the crossings."

According to Police Department charts, Park Avenue traffic north-bound will go around Grand Central Terminal by the west ramp parallel to Vanderbilt Avenue. Forty-fifth Street between Madison and Park Avenues will be a one-way street for eastbound vehicles, while Forty-sixth Street between Fifth and Sixth Avenues will exclude all but westbound traffic, a measure which is expected to relieve congestion on Thirty-fourth Street.

LATEST DEALINGS IN THE REALTY FIELD

FARRAGUT BUILDING SOLD TO TENANTS

Madison Avenue Structure Erected by Hegeman Bought by John Dunlop Sons.

ERECTED SEVEN YEARS AGO

Buying for occupancy was a strong feature of yesterday's realty market, which continued active from both a speculative and investment standpoint.

In the midtown section, where space is at a premium, the Farragut Building, a fifteen-story office and store building at 19 Madison Avenue, erected about seven years ago by the estate of John R. Hegeman on the site of the former Hegeman residence, was purchased by John Dunlop Sons, dealers in silks, who occupy the store and an upper floor. Carstein & Linnekin arranged the sale for the Hegeman estate, which had owned the realty since 1897.

The building occupies less than a city lot, 24.8 by 100, and adjoins the Pullman Building, a similar structure, erected on the site of the Poor residence in 1910 and sold in 1913 to Fred Stone, the actor. Just south of the latter property stood the Parkhurst church, at the Twenty-fourth Street corner, where the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company is now building a sixteen-story structure.

Adjoining No. 19 on the north is the twenty-story Madison Avenue Building, at Twenty-fifth Street, erected by J. Fillmore Hyde in 1910. The Farragut Building, as the property just sold is called, is assessed at $225,000.

UNITED LEASES BLOCK.

Colonial Hotel and Other Properties in $1,000,000 Deal.

The Colonial Hotel property, which includes a five-story hotel building, a three-story taxpayer, and five five-story flats, being the block front on Eighth Avenue between 124th and 125th Streets, on a plot 201 feet on the avenue and 150 feet on each street, has been leased for a long term by the United Cigar Stores at a rental aggregating close to $1,000,000. The Colonial has been operated for a number of years by Diedrich & John H. Tonjes and is held under a lease from the Astor estate by the Saranac Realty Company, representing large brewing interests. Porter & Co. were the brokers in the transaction.

TIMES SQUARE RENTALS.

It was ascertained yesterday that practically $6 a square foot will be paid by tenants in the new sixteen-story office building which the Marcus Loew Realty Company is about to erect on the northeast corner of Broadway and Forty-fifth Street. The work of tearing down the dozen or more old houses on the plot only began Monday morning, but applications have been received at the Loew office from more than seventy-five prospective tenants, a remarkable illustration of the increasing demand for space in the Times Square district. The upper floors of the buildings on the immediate corner were used for many years as the Bartholdi Inn by theatrical patrons, and they occupied their rooms until Monday morning.

The property was owned for many years by the late Thomas B. Hidden, and was acquired last Fall by the Loews. The office building will occupy the Broadway frontage, 120 feet, extending back 60 feet on Forty-fifth Street. The rear section of the plot will be used for the new Loew Theatre, a moving-picture house, accommodating 3,800 persons. The plot is an unusually large one, fronting 186 feet on Forty-fifth Street, running back to the Lyceum Theatre, and 103 feet on Forty-sixth Street, taking in there the plots from 156 to 164.

The theatre and office building have been designed by the architect, Thomas W. Lamb. It is expected to have the structures ready by next Fall. The rental rate is considerably higher than is obtained in most of the modern commercial buildings in the Times Square and Fifth Avenue areas.

LA SALLE PROBLEM METHOD TRAINS YOU FOR JUNIOR ACCOUNTING IN 5 MONTHS, SENIOR ACCOUNTING IN 12 MONTHS.

If you are making less than $50 a week and would like to earn this amount or more in a high-grade accounting position, real opportunity is open if you are willing to undergo at least several months of intensive training. The use of spare time a few evenings a week for 5 to 8 months has been sufficient to qualify for the $50 positions—12 to 18 months for positions paying $60 to $100 a week.

The rate of advancement depends upon your general qualifications, determination and ambition. You will be under the direction of William B. Castenholz, the best known accountancy teacher in America, and a large staff of expert accountants, including several members of the American Institute of Accountants.

A knowledge of bookkeeping is not necessary, as La Salle trains from the ground up, but an aptitude for accounting work will be an advantage in shortening the term of preparation for the bigger positions.

The records of thousands of ambitious men and women on file at our office show what has been accomplished by them and can be done by you.

STATEN ISLANDERS ARE TIRED OF BUSES

CALL AUTO LINES A FAILURE

A meeting of seventy-five Staten Island residents, held yesterday at the Liberty Theatre, Stapleton, declared in favor of the Midland Railroad Company continuing the operation of its trolley cars, even if the fare should be increased to eight cents. A resolution, which was unanimously adopted, said the suspension of car service "has caused a great deal of inconvenience to the residents of Staten Island, and caused a great loss to the business interests of the community," and demanded "the immediate restoration of the trolley service, if necessary at an eight-cent fare." A copy of the resolution will be sent of Mayor Hylan, Borough President Van Name, and Commissioner of Plant and Structures Grover A. Whalen.

Mrs. J. McCormack, who said she represented the women of Concord, said the bus service was inadequate and asserted that some chauffeurs were charging more than 5 cents. On Wednesday night, she said, she went to New York, and upon her return entered a bus at the St. George Ferry station. Although it was late, she said, the driver would not go until fifteen passengers had applied and then, she asserted, he charged 15 cents for each fare. In a house-to-hourse canvas in her town, she said, she learned that 100 per cent. of the residents were willing to pay an increased fare if the trolleys were immediately restored.

Former District Attorney Albert C. Fach, counsel for the Richmond Borough Utility Company, which operated busses between St. George and the Fox Hills Hospital, said it was impossible for the city to make a success of its bus undertaking. He suggested that a committee be appointed to confer with Receiver Brenner of the Midland Company, and with Borough President Van Name, to take up the matter of increased fare with the Board of Estimate. A committee of seven was chosen to confer with the Borough President tomorrow.

Edward Meuer, Vice President of the Staten Island Savings Bank, said he did not believe it was in the power of the Board of Estimate to grant an increase in fare. He also said every business man in Stapleton was willing to pay the Midland Company a higher fare.

ARGENTINE SOCIALIST SPLIT.

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 4.—Socialist Deputies today protested in the Chamber of Deputies against the alleged laxity of the capital police in protecting Socialist meetings against violence from radical elements of the party, which is engaged in an unusually bitter campaign preliminary to the Congressional elections in March.

Speakers cited the case of Señor Cristini, a Socialist, who was stabbed to death last week at a street meeting. It was said that this attack was coincident with the appearance of an alleged radical group, which attacked the Socialists, shouting "Vive Irigoyen!" They also told of instances of organized attacks to break up their meetings, one Deputy charging that President Irigoyen was responsible for the lack of police protection.

The Chamber voted to summon the Minister of the Interior tomorrow to explain what measures the Government was taking to protect the right of assemblage.

The protest in the Chamber followed a great Socialist demonstration yesterday, when 10,000 persons attended the funeral of Señor Cristini and marched to the cemetery, where Socialists delivered orations over his grave.

"Smoke all that you pay for!"

"I KNOW you New Yorkers are willing to pay to get real quality. The enormous sale of 25c cigars in this city proves it. But isn't it foolish to pay a quarter for a large cigar, and then throw half of it away because you actually haven't time to smoke it?

"Just light up an In-B-Tween—the medium-sized cigar made from the sweet and tender baby leaves of the choicest Havana Tobacco. See if I'm not long enough to satisfy you—see if I'm not good enough to convert you. And see how much I save you by cutting down waste. Sure! The In-B-Tween is truly 'The Four Best Inches of a 25c Cigar' and the most sensible smoke for the busy New Yorker."

The Call Is To Us All

TO MEN and women of today is given the glorious privilege not only to witness, but actually to participate in, one of the most joyous and significant events in all history—the Restoration of the Promised Land to the scattered children of Israel.

After centuries of longing, centuries of faith and centuries of earnest prayer, the fulfillment of the Promise comes with amazing swiftness. The Promise was not alone to the Jewish race but to civilization. It lies in the heart of the world's most precious writing. Its fulfillment casts a flood of light upon the purposes which underlie all history.

But it comes not as a gift but as an opportunity. It calls to all to give—to give as fully and as freely as the heart or faith may prompt. And dull, indeed, must be the feelings of one who is conscious of no thrill at such a privilege.

The door is open, but its opening discloses the desert plains, the barren slopes and the crumbling habitations of a long-neglected land, except in scattered Jewish colonies, where bright oases and happy homes proclaim what can be done.

If the eye of Faith can see the Zion of the future, with its cities and farms, its vineyards, groves and gardens, its commerce and industry, its learning, its majesty, and its beauty of holiness the human eye is conscious of the prodigious labor which must intervene.

Workers must be brought together, tools and equipment must be supplied, water must be led from the hills, and valleys must be filled with the resources of husbandry. Desert plains can be transformed to fields of waving grain. Barren slopes, with orchards green, can be made to bring forth fruit again.

Before the wandering children may return, homes must be built to house them, towns and cities must be cleansed and made habitable, great public works must be undertaken and carried to completion, railways and highways improved, harbors dredged and docks constructed, workshops and factories erected. Schools and universities, hospitals and laboratories are some of the other items in the vast programme of reconstruction.

Modern science, in agriculture, in engineering, in sanitation, in every field, must be called upon to work its magic throughout the land.

If we of this generation are to share in the fulfillment of the Promise, if we are to receive new blessings from the Holy Land revived, new fruits from old and sacred soil, we must plant the seeds now—we must give our aid today.
